Stuart Chase, Economist, Traces 1938 Migration Of "New Farm Pioneers"

GREAT historical migration has been taking place in the past three years. Nearly a quarter of a million Americans have ...

land, wrote me to come, but I hung on. It had to rain some time. It was Emily who decided it. After we lost the wheat crop, and took such a loss on the lamb, she just decided it was never going to rain again!

"So we held an auction and left. I took the Ford truck and $124 in cash.

"We headed for the Yellowstone Road, and it was a kind of an adventurous feeling. It took us about two weeks to get to Spokane.

"We stayed around Spokane a few days, but I couldn't help out the family budget much there. So we filled up the truck with gas and went down to the Yakima Valley.

"We went to the nearest town and I started looking for work. Any kind of work. The trouble was that about a thousand other men like me from the drought states were looking for work, too. Our money went down and down — eight dollars, fifty, twenty.

"I told the people at the relief office about my farm in South Dakota, and my experience. They sent me over to the Resettlement Administration outfit — now it's called the Farm Security Administration.

"Well, I signed some more papers, and the Resettlement Administration made me a loan of $2,100.

"We worked out the first year's budget to the penny.

"That agent certainly knew how to figure. He'd done a lot of it for other folks like me. He knew I didn't know much about farming in a mountain country with lots of water. I'd been used to pancake country with no water. So he gave me a lot of suggestions, and I wasn't too proud to take them.

"The other day I sold some lambs and I made my first payment on the loan. Then I knew I was out of the charity class and standing on my own feet again. I tell you I felt good! But where I'd been if I hadn't got that loan I don't know.

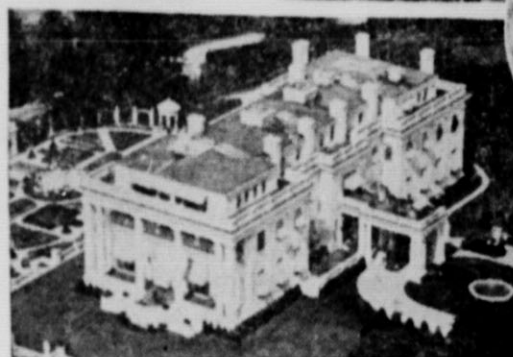

"This is a great country out here," says Carlsen.

"Here the wasted flood waters and the wasted desert soils are brought together. Here power will be so cheap that houses can be heated by electricity. Here thousands of westward-moving wanderers who have been 'burnt out, blowed out, et out' may some day find a promised land."

The "Truth" About Barbara Hutton

"Babs" Hutton, U. S. Heiress No. 1

(Above) "Babs" and Husband No. 2, Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, before their recent rift. Since their separation the Count and numerous friends have tried to reconcile the pair.

WHEN Barbara Hutton came of age and took possession of her fortune of forty-odd million dollars she gave away eleven of these millions before her advisers could stop her.

On the very day of attaining her majority she gave five millions to her father as an expression of gratitude for his trusteeship and the other six millions went to charity and friends.

She settled fifty thousand dollars a year on her first husband the day they were married. Later she gave him gifts that ran into high figures but Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, her second husband, demanded no settlement.

In the October issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Elsa Maxwell has written the truth about Barbara Hutton.

For years the irrepressible Miss Maxwell has roamed Europe searching always for fun and entertainment. She is an intimate of crowned heads and the deposed nobility of society and knows all about the people who make news. "It was in the fateful summer of 1929 that I was lunching with some friends in Biarritz when I saw a short, plump girl of sixteen or so," Miss Maxwell relates. "While we were lunching a flashy Rolls-Royce drew up at the gate and the plump little Barbara stiffened."

The man in the Rolls-Royce was Prince Alexis Mdivani, one of a trio of Georgian princes who have dazzled European and American society with their brilliant money marriages.

The meeting of Barbara Hutton and Mdivani on the terrace of the Biarritz Hotel was the beginning of the first act of the most balmy and certainly the most posterous tabloid drama of our time.

The second act took place in Bangkok, Siam, several years later when the American consul general advised Mr. Franklin L. Hutton via radiophone that his daughter Barbara, who had gone on a trip round the world "to forget" was about to marry Prince Alexis Mdivani. He had followed her around the world in order that the Mdivani clan could continue to live in the style to which they were not accustomed "way back in the Caucasus Mountains.

Reno followed, and a marriage to the Danish prince. Now they are separated and the name of another "gentleman" is being guardedly mentioned.

And so it goes with the five-and-ten princess. As a child she did not know you could go across the continent without a private car or to Europe without an entire steamer deck.

Miss Maxwell in her article analyzes the girl with millions, takes you behind the scenes in her private life, and for the first time makes public the reasons for many of the unusual happenings in the life of Barbara Hutton.

ANCHORS AWEIGH

Beer, Flowers, Precious Stones— Various stations stress things that are made or grown in that vicinity. At one station I recall a man running up to the windows with a small piece of black velvet in the palm of his hand. On this velvet were some Mexican opals on display. There are opal mines in Mexico as everyone knows. Where the cacti, the maguery, flourishes pulque, is vended in terra-cotta containers. Cups are dipped into a large vessel. Should, by any chance, a bit of this fermented cacti juice remain in the cup that is handed back to the vendor, he proceeds, without the slightest qualm, to pour it back into the general container. "But that's unsanitary" I hear you say—but you don't know your pulque. No self-respecting germ could live in it, the smell is sufficient to render it hors de combat. And when you are in Mexico you cannot be too fussy.

At some stations gardenias were offered to the transients. These were encased in sections of banana stems, like sections of bamboo, this is the Mexican Florial Refrigerator and keeps these flowers fresh for a week or so. Orchids are offered by the handfuls for about ten or fifteen cents in our money. They grow wild here and are not considered a rarity. In New York for the same amount of orchids, one would at least have to pay ten dollars or so.

At some stations, while seated on the observation platform, we were pelted with flowers, like the famous "Bataille des Fleurs" on the French Riviera—only here it was a one-sided 'battle' the flowers were thrown at us but were not thrown back in turn. The newlyweds who sat on this platform made the most of these flowers. The happy young bridegroom collected all he could that were lying about on the floor and presented them all to his charming bride. Now she was carrying a second "Bride's Bouquet" as it were.

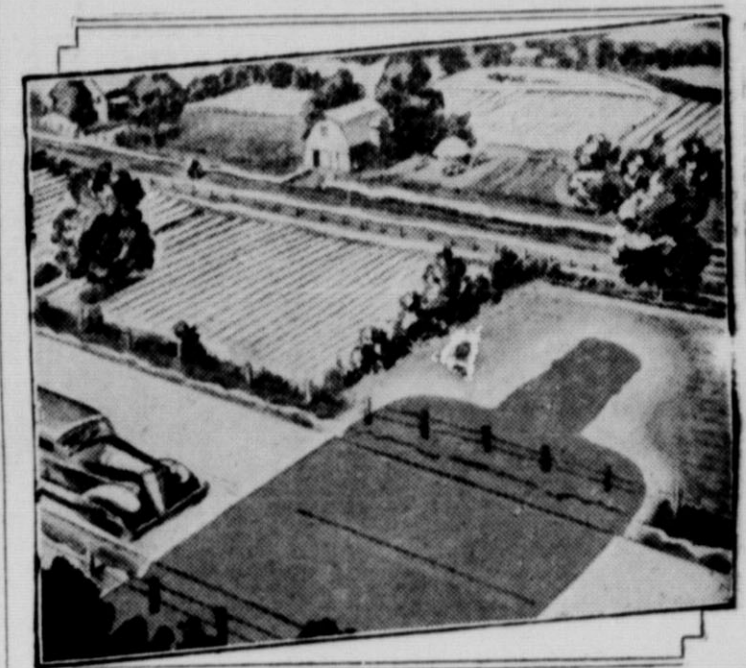

At one station, at Malatrata, where the town had been almost destroyed by an earthquake a few months before, a beldame came up to us and offered some fruit which the bridegroom declined calling her, a woman of at least sixty-five or thereabouts. "Senorita"—I had to stifle a laugh when I heard her addressed in this fashion. Not exactly my idea of what a charming Mexican senorita should be, one surely expected youth, beauty, vivacity, bright, laughing eyes, flashing teeth, black hair, but I later on found out this was a general custom in Mexico, polite flattery.

These improvised markets at these various railway stations were always objects of absorbing interest to me, of which I never tired.

About one o'clock, we had just finished luncheon in the diner, when we became aware, we were descending from the high Plateau of Mexico upon which we had been travelling since leaving the Mexican capital early in the morning, so we quickly sought our seats on the observation platform to view the glorious panorama revealed to us in this descent into the tropics.

A Dangerous Shadow On Our Highways

Of all drivers involved in fatal accidents last year, 7.3 per cent had been drinking. This is neither worse nor better than the 1936 record.

Of all pedestrians killed last year, 12.9 per cent had been drinking. This figure may be compared with 11.2 per cent in 1936. These figures are based on a broad spread of official state reports and are offered by The Travelers Insurance Company as the best information available on the subject. The accuracy of the picture presented by the statistics will be questioned because reporting methods differ in the various states, and because of differences of opinion as to what constitutes drunkenness.

Lee O'Daniel And Band Coming To Tri-State Fair

AMARILLO.—W. Lee O'Daniel and his Hillbillies will "pass the biscuits" at the Tri-State Fair here, Sept. 19.

And every day during exposition week cinema celebrities and other notables will attend.

"This is the sixteenth year of the Tri-State Fair and the association is spending more money than ever for attractions," said Ray Pinkney, the president.

There will be an improved midway, with many free attractions, including a death-defying loop, Beutler Brothers rodeo and "Cavalcade of Hits," a spectacular show on which the association has taken out rain insurance.

The famous cowboy band from Hardin-Simmons will play a concert each afternoon at the rodeo, which will be of championship caliber with star performers appearing between the spills and thrills of the cowboy contests.

"For beauty, comedy and all around entertainment for the whole family 'Cavalcade of Hits' is unsurpassed and I predict record crowds every night to see it and the climax of fireworks," said President Pinkney.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest appreciation to the many neighbors and friends for their acts of kindness, comforting words and the beautiful floral offerings tendered at the death of our beloved husband and father.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD SHOOT 'EM IN SERIES

"Wonder could I chew my way out of here? . . ."

ANYBODY can take a single snapshot—a landscape here, an informal portrait there. But have you ever tried taking a series, to tell a complete story of an incident, or to picture a person more effectively?

Summer activities offer all sorts of chances for series pictures. Wherever there is fun—on a party, a picnic, a motor trip, an afternoon at the swimming pool or beach—you find amusing occurrences which are best pictured thus. One picture tells part of the story. Several pictures "follow through" and tell all of it.

The incidents don't have to be unusual. Good "fun" series can be made out of the cutting of a watermelon, a small boy blowing up a balloon until it bursts. Try picturing a child's tea party in this fashion—the small girl playing hostess to her dolls and pets. Also, try "expression" snaps of the baby in his outdoor crib.

Sports series are good. For instance, a man catching a fish. Show him baiting, casting, playing the fish, landing it, dropping it into the creel or threading it on the string. Later on, snap a picture to complete the series—the fish on the table at home, or the fisherman back at his office, describing his catch.

The series-picture idea can be applied in a thousand variations. Series pictures have extra "punch," because each picture supports and reinforces the next. A series of five good expression shots of the baby—laughing, crying, "crowing," questioning, shouting, and so on—is better than five unrelated shots.

One picture may be just a paragraph, but a series is a complete short story. Try such picture stories this summer. Nature stories are good, if you have a focusing camera, or a portrait attachment for your box camera. For example, picture a squirrel accepting a nut,—taking enough pictures to tell the complete story.

Don't miss series pictures this season. They're immense camera fun!

Property Owners Arrange Lubbock Meeting Sept. 16

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SUMMER PICTURE STORIES

In picturing summer romances, keep the romance! Don't let your subjects pose stiffly or smile at the camera!

IT'S a camera axiom that every picture should tell a story. Will you remember that this summer when you are snapping pictures of friends and their summer activities?

Nothing is easier than to get a member of your crowd to "stand over by that bush while I snap your picture." But that sort of picture-taking doesn't produce the best kind of pictures—because such pictures don't "say" anything.

It's easy to go on a picnic with Bill and Janet Smith and get snapshots of them standing by a bush or a tree, smiling for the camera. But it's more fun, and makes better pictures, to catch Janet feeding Bill a huge slice of chocolate cake, or get Bill helping Janet over a barbedwire fence, or get the two of them, heads close together, laughing as they set the picnic table or cloth.

Such pictures tell stories—and there are hundreds of such story-pictures chances on every summer jaunt. Try your hand at picturing summer fun and summer romance (there's always plenty of it) from a "story" viewpoint. Don't let your subjects appear camera-conscious—catch them when they're busy doing something, and watch your pictures "wake up and live."

There's no need to waste film, but if it takes two or three pictures, or more, to tell a story properly—go ahead and shoot them. Film is not expensive, so don't risk missing a good picture.

John van Guilder

Clouds help your outdoor pictures. Use a color filter to record them more effectively.

SUMMER is the outdoor season, and one of the season's chief picture charms is its wonderfully rich blue skies against which cloud masses stand out in magnificent fullness and contrast. Given two pictures of identical subjects in which the sky appears, it's a safe wager that your attention will be held by the one effectively showing the clouds against a gray sky and not the one with the unnatural and unattractive flat, white firmament.

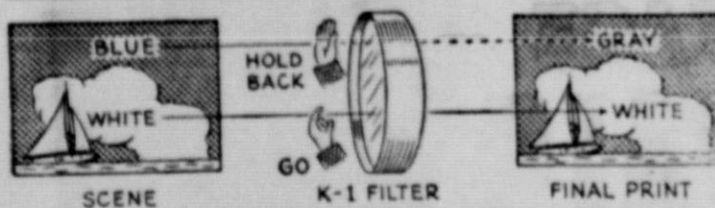

Here is the way to picture clouds and skies as your eye sees them: load your camera with chrome type or panchromatic film, and slip a yellow color-filter on your lens. The diagram below shows how a yellow filter works—it preserves the sky tone, recording blue in the corresponding shade of gray instead of white. Thus, the clouds and sky are more dramatically recorded and much is added to the appeal of your picture.

Summer clouds and skies are pictorial studies in themselves. Try picturing clouds alone—the different types of cirrus and cumulus; fair-day clouds and stormy-weather clouds. Use the sky and clouds as background for your pictures of people. Work them into your landscape views. They give your pictures reality, and a warm, sunnery feel. Use your filter for all such pictures. Increasing exposure according to the instructions that come with the filter or with the film you use.

Such practice pays rich snapshot dividends.

John van Guilder

Color filters are traffic cops. A yellow filter (K-1 or K-2) stops part of the blue light, so that in the print, blue shows up as gray. Filters come in several colors, but a yellow K-1 or K-2 is what you want for general use.

Two Billions Annual Racket Yield, Author Charges

IF two billion dollars were suddenly dumped into the channels of American business, factories would hum, merchants would load up with new stock, and men would return to work. And all this would happen if the activities of swindlers today could be stopped. This enormous sum is the minimum estimate of the amount of money being bled each year from the arteries of legitimate business to support a small population of petty racketeers.

In the September issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine E. Jerome Ellison and Frank W. Brock have published a sensational article dealing with swindlers and petty racketeers.

"Authorities agree that there are today at least 200,000 persons engaging in petty racketeering," the writers say. "Experience shows that $10,000 a year is a modest estimate of their average income; 200,000 times $10,000 is two billion dollars."

"Racketeers are now impersonating representatives of the Federal Housing Administration, assuring prospective home builders that they can arrange a government loan. Another sharper made a life work of selling beautifully engraved sheets of paper to people who thought they were stocks in gold mines. In thirty-four years, working alone, he took in more than $1,500,000, and he has never spent a day in jail.

Businessmen are now spending large sums each year, through Chambers of Commerce, trade associations, investigative associations and Better Business Bureaus, to fight the rackets. Still greater sums are spent by Federal and local governments, the Federal Trade Commission and post-office inspectors.

These agencies are doing yeoman service, but the only way to stop these economic leeches is to make every man and woman who spends money aware of their methods.

Some rackets are extremely complex, while others are very simple. Yet all have one quality in common: plausibility. All successful rackets closely resemble some form of legitimate business.

You are not likely to encounter the pocketbook trick as played for $100,000 stakes by the Reno gang, but it might be just as well to know how it works. A wallet stuffed with money and impressive credentials is "lost" in a place where the prospective dupe is certain to find it. The victim returns it to the owner, who turns out to be a "racing commissioner."

Out of "gratitude" the commissioner insists upon betting a small sum on the ponies in the name of the victim. Each successive bet wins, until the profits exceed $100,000 (or whatever the victim is good for). The dupe feels that his $100,000 winnings are quite sufficient, and decides to collect.

The "commissioner" is perfectly willing to pay off, but "as a m. o. formality" asks the victim to post an equal sum with the bookmaker's cashier, just to indicate that his account is good for that amount in case he should lose next time.

Of course the victim puts up the money, and of course this sum, plus the previous "winnings," is "bet" on one last hunch, and of course everything is "lost."

And so it goes. In every town in America the gyp is at work, despite the vigilance of the local organizations who are carrying on the battle against them.

FORD OPENS SOY BEAN DEMONSTRATION PLANT

SALINE, Mich.—Center of interest for farmers within a radius of 200 miles, Henry Ford's demonstration soy bean factory fronting the Detroit-Chicago turnpike a half-mile west of this charming Michigan town, has just begun operations.

The factory group comprises two buildings. One is the historic Schuyler grist mill which has been converted into a cleaning and storage plant. A new frame structure back of the grist mill houses soy bean flaking and oil extraction equipment. Power is supplied by a hydroelectric plant bed by water brought by millrace from a dam built across the Saline river along the right-of-way of the Detroit-to-Chicago highway.

More than 700 farmers within a 200-mile radius of the Saline plant are now growing soy beans on 22,588 acres from seed furnished by the Ford Company. In addition, the Ford Company has 15,624 more acres seeded under contract. The total yield of soy beans for the season is expected to be 312,480 bushels, at the rate of 20 bushels per acre.

Under the arrangement between the Ford Company and the farmers to whom seed was advanced, the farmers will return the seed from the new crop at the end of the season. They are then at liberty to sell the balance of their crop to Ford at the market, or dispose of it to other buyers.

Most of the crop, however, is expected to be delivered to the Saline plant at Saline, together with those at Tecumseh and Hayden Mills have a capacity of 300,000 bushels a year and are expected to be kept busy through the 12 months.

The extraction plant in the rear of the grist mill here has a capacity of 140,000 bushels a year. A similar amount will be processed at a new plant now under construction at Milan, Mich. The balance of the crop will be retained for seed use in the spring of 1939.

The historic old grist mill already has become the mecca for farmers for many miles around Saline, and it promises to become the show place of the Ford Soy bean operations in southeastern Michigan.

Soy beans brought to the plant are delivered at the rear. There trucks dump their loads into a hopper, from which the beans are hoisted by conveyor to cleaning equipment on the second floor and thence to storage bins on the upper floors.

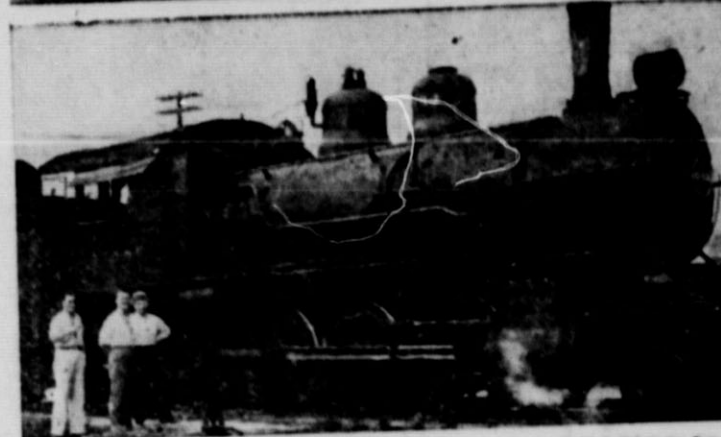

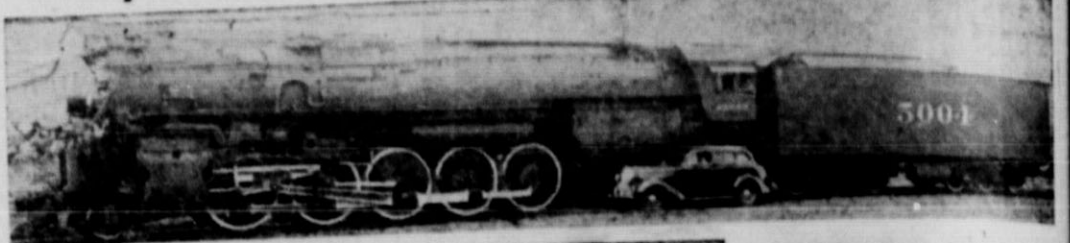

As the beans are required for processing they are carried by conveyor to the new building in the rear. There they are delivered to a hopper from which they are transferred to a flaker and then by conveyor again to a distributor which feeds the flakes into the oil extraction mills.

The oil, which comprises 18 per cent of the soy bean flake, is extracted with hexane, a liquid solvent, and then recovered by evaporating the solvent. The ex-large insulated tube set at an angle of approximately 30 degrees with the floor. A screw conveyor operates inside the tube, carrying the bean flakes from the bottom toward the top as the solvent pours down.

The solvent carrying the oil is drawn off from the base of the tube and run through evaporators where the solvent passes off as vapor and the oil remains. The solvent is used over and over again. The oil is used in the manufacture of car finishes and in

Fifty Years of Locomotive Development

Fifty years ago, No. 684 was the latest thing in Santa Fe freight power. She served her heyday when freight train speeds averaged 10 miles per hour and 30 cars made a big train. Today, she is the last survivor of her class. At the Topeka shops she puffs mightily as she shoves her modern sisters, as shown above, around the locomotive shop yards. She came from the Baldwin locomotive works in 1888 just 50 years ahead of No. 5004, which represents the latest engineering developments in steam freight engines.

(Above)—Santa Fe Railway's new 5001-class of freight locomotives is illustrated here in contrast to the modern automobile which appears small enough to fit easily into the engine's firebox. Ten of these mammoth power units capable of 70-mile-per-hour speeds are being placed in service. Their tenders carry 20,000 gallons of water and 23 tons of coal or 7,000 gallons of fuel oil. Nickel-plated steel boilers enable these locomotives to carry a steam pressure of 310 pounds. The engine weighs 440 tons.

The meal, from which the oil has been extracted, is carried off from the top of the mill and is bagged for use in manufacture of plastic parts for Ford cars at the Rogue glass plant.

Aside from the hydroelectric plant, power also will be available from a standby steam plant.

Two of the most sensational high acts ever brought into this country will be presented daily on the grounds at the Golden Jubilee Celebration of the State Fair of Texas, Oct. 8 to 23. The acts are the Cimses, a motorcycle acrobatic act performed 80 feet in the air, and the Aerial Ballet, featuring the six monarchs who perform on a tower 120 feet high. In addition to these sensations there will be numerous other free attractions at the Golden Jubilee edition of the State Fair of Texas.

For Your Family's Sake...

KEEP MILK SAFE! ...IT IS THE FIRST RULE

OF ALL-WEATHER FOOD-KEEPING

Keep milk fresh and pure, if your family is to have one of Nature's most wholesome foods. To be sure milk is as fresh as the minute it's delivered to you, the U. S. Government recommends that you store it in a refrigerator, where the temperature is 50 degrees or less. Above 50 degrees, milk spoils rapidly, curdles, gets sour. Other food, not so easily detected as milk, spoils too in higher temperatures. Below 50 degrees, milk and other food is safe. Check your refrigeration now!

WESTERNERS DEFEAT EAST, 15 TO 13

WICHITA FALLS—The West Texas all-stars, coached by Volney Hill of Burkburnett, were of the opinion Tuesday that the first Oil bowl classic won Labor day from the East Texans of Coach L. C. Wood, 15 to 13, was a gigantic success, and Maskat Shrine temple officials made the same offhand estimate, although the official attendance records had not been completely checked.

An estimated crowd of nearly 5,000 persons vouched for the game, after they witnessed the play of 36 football players who were collected from every corner of the state, put on a battle between themselves that displayed a high degree of teamwork and smoothness, despite the fact that the incongruous group had only a week to perfect coordinated play and a consolidated team spirit.

The memorable part of the entire evening's exciting display of football strategy and daring, was the 55-yard dash for a touchdown unleashed by Jack Crain of Nacogdoches, a 160-pound halfback who had everybody searching for a sufficient number of superlatives to describe his night's work.

With the score 13 to 9 in favor of the smooth-working Easterners, and with only two minutes remaining before the night became history, Crain received the ball on a punt from Howell Penton, brilliant wingman from San Saba.

Crain was on his own 45 when he took the ball, fumbled it momentarily, and then streaked down the sideline behind effective blocking for the decisive score. He never was touched until a tackler made a lunge at him as he crossed the 5-yard marker, and he didn't leave his feet then, but went over standing.

Br. F. Tunnell, Jr., football letterman of M. H. S. played in guard position on the all-state team and received one of the handsome football jackets awarded each of the 36 players.

Honors Newspapers

The State Fair of Texas will honor its founders and pay a tribute to the newspapers of Texas for their success in building the "world's largest and most beautiful fair" during its first fifty years, with a monument to be unveiled on opening day, Saturday, October 8, which also is Press Day.

Every newspaper in Texas has been invited to send in a front page of its paper, upon which has been published a story on its community, which will be placed in a metal chest and placed in a crypt under the tablet "acknowledging a debt of gratitude to the Press of Texas."

The monument will stand eight feet tall on a base six feet in height. It will be finished in sand and ground granite. The monument is being executed by Jose Martin and Roual Joset.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD CAMERA IN THE CAR

When driving, keep your camera on the seat beside you, loaded and ready. You never know when a picture chance (such as this) will pop up.

Do YOU keep your camera in your automobile when you're driving—all loaded on the seat beside you, lens and shutter set, ready to shoot at a moment's notice?

Try it sometime, and you'll be surprised how it helps you spot picture opportunities.

Hundreds of pictures can be shot without leaving the car. This is especially true in warm weather, when car windows are down, and the top, in some cases, is folded back.

If you are not doing the driving, your hands are free and there are many more picture opportunities for you—as well as a better snapshot position. The car halts at a street intersection, and there may be a popcorn peddler on the corner, a window washer at the office window above, people busily hurrying to and from work. A small boy is struggling with a big bundle; an old lady passes by with her hair wrapped in a shawl—chance for a well "character" shot. Indeed, these can be good pictures—natural "off-guard," full of life.

Never take a drive in the country without your camera. You see more enjoy yourself more, notice more interesting things if the camera is along. Try making a connected picture story of a Sunday afternoon drive—and you'll be surprised how entertaining it can be. And here's a idea: picture landscapes and interesting stretches of road through the windshield of your car, from the back seat, using the outline of the windshield as a "frame" for the scene. Such pictures show not only what you saw, but how you saw it; hence, they are twice as effective. Needless to say, the windshield glass must be clear.
