House Probers Ask Explanation Of 'Arrogance'

Texas Can Clinch Bowl Spot With TCU Victory

Associated Press Staff

The Southwest Conference this weekend heads for a crucial tilt between two runner-up teams that could determine who will represent the loop in the Cotton Bowl.

In a season that may prove zanier than even the usual zany Southwest Conference race, the loopleading Texas Aggies won't be suiting up New Year's even if they win the championship. Placed on probation for recruiting infractions, they are barred from post-season games.

Hence, their game Saturday against the cellar-dwelling Rice Owls will figure only in the championship race, not for the Cotton Bowl. Fourth place Arkansas and fifth place Southern Methodist Saturday will be battling to keep their slim mathematical chances for the bowl spot.

The big game Saturday will be between Texas and Texas Christian at Austin. If the second place Long-horns can beat the TCU Frogs they will have the job as host in the Cotton Bowl clinched. If the Christians beat Texas they will still have to beat one of their remaining foes — Rice and SMU And there's even a chance that in the round-robin beltings the Southwest Conference teams are famous for giving each other that the season could end with two or three teams tied in the race for the Cotton Bowl honors.

LOOKING 'EM

With Tommy Hart

BILL LEISER, San Francisco scribe: "Once he accepts the football, Dick Moegle (former Rice All-American) thinks it's his business to take it to the end zone and they've got to unload a pile of bricks on him to stop him short. We are inclined to nominate him as the coming great man of the San Francisco 49ers. He'll never have the speed of Hugh McElhenny at tops, but he may be making just as many touchdowns per season before he's through. If by any chance you want to learn how to play football, you watch this Dickey guy."

LEE PORTER, Howard County auditor and an avid football fan: "I really have myself a time on Saturday afternoons, with two radios and a television bringing in football games. I nearly run myself to death going from one room to another, trying to keep up with what's going on. I get more tired than the players."

GEORGE MARSHALL, owner of the Washington Redskins:

"In football, leg muscle is rated over gray matter. Just because a kicker averages, say, 45 yards doesn't necessarily make him a great toe man. It may very well be the opposite. How about a kicker who averages 35 but places the ball in such a position as to pre runback? He's much more valuable than the power guy who shows a runback average of ten yards or so—and, worse yet, leaves you open to a touchdown run."

D. R. GARTMAN, coach of the East Ward football team here, on why his team was beaten by Central last weekend:
"Our halfback, Benny Pitzer, couldn't play due to illness and the boys suffered a mental letdown. They were beat before they ever went onto the field."

DANNY McSHAIN, the wrestler, on the beating the game takes in the eyes of the fans:

"It's a great injustice to condemn all fellows and say they are of the same ilk when they can only speak for themselves. I've had hundreds of scars; have lost my-life's blood, and it is my humble opinion that even if one apple in the barrel is rotten, this does not make all of them rotten."

RED SANDERS, UCLA coach: "I'm on record as saying that anybody who beats us, I want them to beat us as much as they can."

ENOS SLAUGHTER, on why Yankee fans boo Mickey Mantle:
"When I was with the Yankees, I told Mickey it was his own fault . . . Whenever he'd strike out, he'd hang his head, then he'd drag out to his position, sort of sulky. I've run to and from my po-sition all my life and I'm sure that's one reason all the fans like mg."

JOHN KOVATCH, Nebraska end coach, formerly with two Big Ter

"The greatest end I ever coached was Pete Pinos at Indiana.
But Ted Kluszewski (now a major league home run slugger) could have been even greater." (Big Klu quit in his sopohomore year to become a baseball pro.)

JOE COLLINS, New York Yankee first sacker:
"The World Series defeat was just a pause before we take five or six more in a row. Not just pennants, but the works. We didn't die just because we finally lost one. I think it'll help us. It'll make us tighten our belts and be a better team."

J. Y. ROBB, local friend of SMU and Southwest Conference fool sall, after the Mustangs' loss to Texas A&M:

"I'm going to call Matty Bell (the SMU athletic director) and suggest they cut the field to 80 yards when SMU plays."

Baker To Meet Valdes In Bid For Title Fight and Bob Baker, about the best challengers the heavyweight divi-sion has to offer these days, will decide who gets the next shot at Rocky Marciano's crown in an elimination bout at Cleveland Dec.

Harry Markson, managing direc tor of the International Boxing Club, revealed last night that the

No date or site for the title match was indicated, but after Marciano's last title defense — in Marciano's last title defense — in which he Ko'd Archie Moore Sept. ZI—it was thought fight fans probably would next get a look at the Rock in action in June.

Baker, No. 3 among the contenders in the last ring ratings, and Valdes, No. 4, have figured along with the unpredictable Hurricane Jackson and the promising young Floyd Patterson as the only likely challengers after Moore failed to dent Marciano's unbeaten rec-

Patterson, just 20 years old, wasn't considered seriously since he's the top challenger for Moore's light-heavyweight title and is being groomed for a heavyweight try no earlier than 1957. Jackson, 23, was removed from the eligible list was beaten recently by Jimmy Slade.

Dixie Leaders See End To

By The Associated Press Some Southern leaders feel that the U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation in places supported by public funds may mean the end of most public golf courses, playgrounds and swimming pools in the South.

Others believe that the problems worked out gradually,

Reactions to the Monday decision of the high court follow the same general pattern set after the ruling in May, 1954, that held that segre gation in public schools is uncon stitutional. Leaders in the deep South expressed heartfelt opposition while those in border states were more amenable.

The court, in separate unanimous actions, affirmed a decision holding racial segregation illegal in public parks and playgrounds, and or-dered Negroes admitted to public golf courses. The decision did not apply to privately owned recrea-tional facilities.

Herman Talmadge, former governor of Georgia and an active leader for segregation, said "it will probably mean the end of most public golf courses, playgrounds and things of that type." But, he added, "the city (Atlanta) could sell these facilities to private individuals at its discretion.

One of the court's actions direced that an order be issued granting admission to Atlanta's public links

South Carolina's Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. said "there will be no mixing of the races in our state parks." Timmerman indicated last July he would favor closing the state's park system rather than allow integration.

At Birmingham, Ala., City Com-missioner Wade Bradley said he

In ruling on a case from Richmond, Va., the high court upheld a lower court ruling outlawing racial since June 2, 1954, on a non-segretism in public parks and would, not be changed by segregation in public parks and playgrounds. It said the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities war is simple: Let world communism extend its sway without putting up any unified resistance.

Storm clouds are gathering over a vast, parched slice of this uneasy world. Even with the most energetic of Western counter measures, the prospect seems at best to be crisis after crisis: at worst an explosion which could lead ultimately to the big war nobody

This is the other side of the "Spirit of Geneva" coin. Soviet policy now plainly attempts to exploit tensions across 3,000 miles of Asia and Africa, all the way from Pakistan's borders to French North Africa.

Here, in effect, is the sort of ultimatum expressed by Moscow radio recently:

"Only a cessation of the policy of setting up military blocs, a cessation of interference in internal affairs of the states of the Near and Middle East, and respect for their right to decide their own affairs independently, including questions of their security, can put an end to the tension in that area and secure a calm and stable peace for its peoples."

In plain language, this means that only a breakup of the Baghdad Pact, linking NATO to Eastern outposts of the anti-Communist defense line in Pakistan, can offer hope that the Middle East will avoid a dangerous, chain-reaction

An 'Insiders' Look At Russia

A book by Dr. Wilfielm Starlinger, M. D., who spent six years in a Soviet concentradon camp as a political prisoner who had been transported from Koenigsberg, East Prussla where he had been medical director of two hospitals, offers comments and conclusions on the Russian scene from a unique vantage point. He administered to the ills of men who had been high up in government, science and the professions - political prisoners all, who knew they would never leave the prison alive, and so felt free to open their hearts and minds to him.

Dr. Starlinger's book called Grenzender Sowjetmacht ("Limits of Soviet Power"), is said to form the basis of Chancellor Adenauer's policy in West Germany, and to have made a profound impression on German thought. Excerpts from it were printed in this week's U. S. News & World Report.

The author says Russia has not in the least put aside the Communist dream of world dominion. However, certain internal pressures require a momentary easing of outside tensions while the work of re-ducing internal stresses is carried out.

Hence the "peace" movement. Hence the smiles Russia presents to the outside world: strictly a gimmick.

Dr. Starlinger thinks Russia and Red China will come into a conflict of interest as the latter grows stronger. Sooner or later, he says, the U. S. will have to come to some kind of working terms with China. Eventually he sees a new balance of power led by the U. S., Russia and China. And the weakest of these, he thinks, will be Russia.

His imprisonment lasted from 1947 to 1954. He does not know why he was released, but he had a good idea why he was imprisoned for "political" activity; he knew too much about the history of Koenigsberg under the Russian occupation, Its population of about 350,000 pre-war had been reduced to 110,000 by the time the Russians moved in. By the time he was arrested, it had sunk to 25,000.

He sees a new development for the outside world to worry about; the rise of Russian nationalism. That could make the Russians' chains more endurable, remove any small chance of internal revolt.

Stabilization Program Important

The willingness of the City of Big Spring to experiment with soil stabilization as a means of minimizing wind and water erosion is commendable. We have a feeling that whatever the costs may be - and they are light in relation to the ultimate potential results - that we will have achieved a bargain in the investment.

It will be helpful, however, if people will keep in mind that this is not a substitute for paving, although it may hold possibilities and benefits in that direction. Treatment of the soil in streets is basically a means of trying to anchor it to that point in the face of severe winds and flash flood action. Thus, if the streets treated tend to become humpy or even if there should be ne spotted softness due to variance in soil texture, the program is not to be condemned or written off. Time will be required to adequately and fairly appraise the value of the stabilization.

We can say this much, however: if the streets treated show a high degree of holding capacity in the face of washing after hard showers, then the saving in labor and equipment needed to clean and repair streets after such rains will match or exceed the stabilization cost. You could add to that whatever comfort is worth in the reduction of blowing dust from traffic over dirt streets.

If Howard County can broaden its stabilization experimentation in the rural areas, we will have launched a fair and important program. We ought to do it, for in Cosden we have the largest single supply of asphalts in West Texas.

Tremendous Tasks Before Secy. Dulles

Legion in Miami shortly before he left for this second round of the Geneva pegotiations, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said that never has national policy faced so difficult and delicate a task. The balancing act between the tough policy of the cold war and the soft-spoken policy of a peace that is maybe-yes-and maybe-no is taxing Dulles' very considerable energies and abilities as has nothing in his long career.

He has always worked extraordinarily hard with an absorption that has seemed to shut out the considerations of most ordinary mortals. But today he is working with an intensity that even those closest to him through the years say they have never seen before.

The other day he went with friends to a restaurant on the edge of the lake for lunch and presumably a bit of relaxation, with the water gleaming a brilliant blue and the poplars on the shore all golden in the autumn sun. But Dulles had brought with him the draft of the speech he was to make at the conference that afternoon and between bites he worked over it, scarcely glancing at the view. He explained that there would just be time to get it retyped before the session began.

A mere catalogue of his activities since he came to Europe gives some idea of the pace. Going first to Rome he conferred in 24 hours with top officials of the Italian government. In Paris he attended the last of the meetings preparatory to Geneva with the other two Western foreign ministers, Harold Macmillan and Antoine Pinay and participated in a NATO council session in which it was necessary to quell something like a revolt among the smaller powers against the assumption that the Big Three could determine their future in a European security pact.

Moving on to Geneva he assumed the leadership in speaking for the West and in finishing the complex and legalistic draft of the Western proposal for a security pact to contain a reunified Germany, On the one day the conference was in recess he flew to Madrid to talk with Generalissimo Franco about the difficulties between France and Spain on the Moroccan issue, GENEVA - Speaking to the American about United Nations membership and other problems.

> This weekend he was in Vienna for the gala opening of the state opera, and interspersed with the festivities there will be talks with Austrian officials. On Sunday he flew to Yugoslavia for luncheon with Marshal Tito on the island of Brieni off the Yugoslav coast. All this in two weeks and the catalogue does not, of course, take into account the hours and hours spent in preparation for the conference table and in the interminable exchanges around that table

Dulles is haunted by the thought - it is brought up at almost every conference holds with European statemen - that the spirit of Geneva has meant greater advantages for the Communist bloc than it has for the West. He can see the disintegration that has set in - the nationalist rivalries pitting one Western Power against another, the growing neutralism, and the bitter inheritance of colonialism in North Africa and the Middle East. His answer when the question comes up is that naturally the removal of fear brings a certain disintegration, which is perfectly visible in the West. But he adds that the same process is taking place in the Communist half of the world, with the satellites growing more restive and peoples demanding some of the good things of life in a peacetime atmosphere. The difference is that the disintegration in the Communist bloc is screened by the Iron Curtain.

While this may be true, no one can prove it and the Communist gains, real and potential, are fairly conspicuous.

Dean Acheson, Dulles' predecessor, became the most-controversial figure in the Truman Administration next to the President himself. Dulles has not felt the sting of attack to anything like the degree that Acheson did, for two obvious reasons. The first is the overwhelmingly favorable press of the Eisenhower Administration in general and Dulles in particular. He has been the subject of articles so adulatory that they must surely have embarrassed

The second reason is that he has tried conscientiously to make himself accessible to working newspapermen, both at public press conferences and in background briefings. He has tried to answer questions put to him and explain American foreign policy to the public. The simple formula has a lot to do with a good press out of Washington, although few officials in the present Administration seem to have learned the lesson.

But if Dulles has had in many instances an adulatory press, he has also got a lot of criticism. Many people, and this rarely finds articulation, resent his constant invocation of moral principles. He is charged with substituting words such as "massive retaliation" for deeds, and, in fact, speaking the loudest at the very time that American military strength was being drastically cut back. This charge is being made by the Democrats and it will be heard in greater volume as next year's campaign

Coordination Of Welfare Aid Urged

There is quite a bit more to this business of "welfare" than you might think. Talking with the various welfare department heads in Big Spring, many problems I never would have noticed have been called to my attention

For instance, the welfare agencies not enly worry about having enough funds to go around to all the needy; they also are concerned with seeing that some individuals do not get more than their fair share. This is especially true of transients who ask help of the agencies.

There have been cases where an individual will come to Big Spring and request as-sistance from the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, a church, and any other agency where help may be obtained. This type of thing cannot be stopped under existing circumstances. As he makes the rounds, the individual usually is assisted to the limit of each agency's resources, because they are not aware that he has been helped already.

Quite obviously, this individual is exceeding his fair share of assistance.

On the other side of the ledger, there is hardly ever enough funds to go around to all the persons who need welfare assistance. In spite of the generous United Fund budget and other collection sources, there are more folks requiring assistance than there are dollars to supply it.

Old Age Assistance, which is supplied by the state, has a maximum payment of $55 per month. Ald to Dependent Children has a maximum of $80 per month if there are three children needing aid. Imagine raising three children with the handsome stipend of $80 per month! But that is all the money that the state has available. When the state funds run low, then all recipients of the ADC checks must take a cut on a pro-rata basis.

If a method could be found to see that all recipients of funds get only their fair share, then there would be more money to go around, A method was proposed at a recent Texas Social Welfare Association meeting.

A central index of all persons receiving welfare aid would be collected at some central point. Then, before an agency or individual agreed to help a person, it could check with this index to see if he has been assisted already and to what extent. That index would also serve as a checklist at Christmastime for the dispersal of Christ-

Hollywood Review She Can Thank Her Lucky Cheesecake

NEW YORK U- Last January, an unknown young blonde named Jayne Mansfield hitchhiked a ride on a movie junket from Hollywood to Florida.

Today she's the toast of Broadway and four studios are after her for movies. Jayne admits it is a fantastic story. She was Bryn Mawr girl, but that doesn't mean she got an elegant education; she was born in that Pennsylvania community. Her family later moved to Dallas, and she grew up telling everyone she was going to be a movie star,

"Ridiculous," they scorned. Regardless, she studied acting at the University of Texas, SMU and the Dallas Institute of Performing Arts. Also UCLA. A year ago, she stormed the studios, informing them she was ready to be discovered. The Paramount people were startled enough to give her a test. Nothing. It was the same story at Warners.

Howard Hughes was tossing a junket, to Florida last January. Through som e conniving, Jayne went along. It was a photographer's holiday, Jayne stole the spotlight from Jane Russell, Debbie Reynolds, Mala Powers and other glamor girls. How? Well, her measurements are 40!-21!-351/4! - the exclamation marks are used advisedly.

Besides, she was wearing a Bikini, And there's nothing that stirs the interest of a red-blooded American photographer like a Bikini

She was doing an independent film in Philadelphia when a deal for a play came up. It was George Axelrod's "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" a Hollywood satire that required a blonde star with a show-stopping figure. "A lot of girls wanted the role - Sheree North, Barbara Britton, even Marilyn Monroe asked for it," said Jayne,

But she won out, and the movie offers started to pour in, even while the show was breaking in on the road. They came from MGM, Paramount, the first studio to turn her down, and Warners, which dropped her. Also 20th Century-Fox, Jayne said she's up for two roles once designed for Monroe - "Bus Stop" and "The Revol of Mamie Stover."

That's a long way for a girl to come in a year and Jayne can thank her lucky cheesecake.

Reporters' Job In Washington Bureaus

WASHINGTON - Maybe the American Civil Liberties Union, which has just issued a long report on secrecy and suppression of news in the government, didn't, of course, intend to give out anything that even remotely vindicated Senator Joseph McCarthy, but the document sounds a strange note which would have been considered heresy in the "left wing" had been uttered during the Stevens-Adams hearings in 1954.

There were lots of vehement expreskions then about how the Wisconsin senator was trying to "encroach" on the executive branch by demanding files in connection with the way Major Peress was promoted by the Army even though, according to the testimony, the Major had Communist connections

But it turns out now that the letter which President Eisenhower wrote on May 17, 1954 - denying to a congressional committee access to information from the files of the executive branch of the government and citing lots of precedents to back up the action - is denounced for its use currently to justify "secrecy within the executive branch, entirely outside the field of the country's military security.

This was the letter which the ACLU report now says was issued originally "to block testimony by John A. Adams, a lawyer for the Department of the Army concerning conversations close to the White House." The President's refusal to allow his aides to testify was widely praised at the time. The report by the American Civil Liberties Union just released was written by Allen Raymond, an experienced newsman, who was commissioned to do the job of inquiring into methods of suppression of news in government. Mr. Raymond's lengthy report is significant for what it omits.

There is no mention, for example, of the action of President Truman in holding a conference at the White House in April 1951 in which some non-military persons participated and which resulted in a decision to fire General MacArthur summarily without a hearing. Although the Senate committee which investigated the episode sought in vain to get testimony from the participants in the conference at the White House, among whom was the present Governor of New York, Averell Harriman, Mr. Truman refused to allow any testimony to be given as to what actually took place.

Mr. Raymond now makes the point that 'counsel to one of the Senate committees has hazarded an opinion that the interference of the chief executive in the Mc-Carthy hearings extended presidential power to keep secret the activities of his official family beyond any previous limit, and might well have been found unconstitutional if tested in the courts.'

This would have been music to the ears of Senator McCarthy in 1954, and particularly when the Watkins Committee even recommended "censure" on the basis of the Wisconsin senator's efforts to elicit information from the Defense Department on matters which had nothing to do with military security.

Mr. Raymond makes the curious statement that "a feeling of frustration and cynicism has prevailed among large segments of the journalistic fraternity, particularly in Washington, for many years" and that "it seems to increase among the older men except for those who attain some inner serenity by faith, courage and laughter." All this is supposed to be the result of inability of the correspondents here to ferret out the news. He says that "able reporters today will not dig as deeply or work as hard to penetrate secrets within the federal administration which they know will be undervalued, or cut to brief items on page 32 or 48, as they might have work ed for page 1 display during the Roosevelt or Truman administrations." Mr. Raymond intimates that this is partly because newspapermen think their newspapers will not back them up. Then he gives credence to a charge which Democratic politicians like to make often that publishers constantly suppress the news which their reporters want to write. He says in the ACLU report:

"Anyone familiar with ther personnel of newspaperdom knows that there is a great gulf between the thinking of daily newspaper publishers and reporters on political affairs; that an overwhelming majority of the publishers have in recent years backed the cause of the Republican party and of President Eisenhower as its savior in the 1952 election. A fair-sized but undetermined majority of their reportorial staffs consistently votes for the Democratic party and was for Stevenson in 1952. While syndicated columnists have built some measure of personal independence from the thinking of publishers who print their columns, even they -- as one of them told this reporter - know they have to sell their product."

The innuendo is unjustified either for syndicated writers or reporters. It is truethough for some reason Mr. Raymond didn't mention it - that in recent years many thousands of reporters have joined a national CIO labor union with which Mr. Raymond was once prominently identified. While some reporters might hold ideological views along the same line as laborunion leaders, each newspaperman stands after all with relation to his writing on a basis of simple honesty and fidelity of his job. A well-trained newspaperman writes as eagerly a story that he knows will hurt his own political party as he writes an article that will help the party to which he doesn't belong - if it is the news in each case. Generalizations which impute to newspapermen different beliefs than their publishers may be true in an abstract sense, but to assume it colors their daily writing, as Mr. Raymond says, is to do an injustice to the vast majority.

The whole controversy about news-get-ting in Washington can be boiled down to one simple premise. There are still "scoops" today, though there were more of them years ago when newspapermen had more time and were not supposed to collect "handouts" on such a variety of governmental activities, It is lack of time cover a big government rather than frustration that prevents newsmen from digging out all the news they would like to get. They will continue to ferret out the biggest secrets-no matter what the executive order or restrictions may be upon officials to withhold news-if the re-porters follow the traditions of an alert and vigilant press,

Cowcatcher With Spikes

The device known as "The cow catcher" has been placed at the ront of thousands of locomotives. Its purpose is to sweep cows and other objects off the tracks.

One thing which led to the coweatcher was an accident in South Carolina 126 years ago. An inven tor tested a "treadreill locomotive" with invited guests as passengers. The little locomotive struck a cov and ran off the tracks, upsetting the passengers. The passengers escaped any serious injury, but their feelings were hurt. Angry words were spoken while they walked back to town, and the treadmill ocomotive was declared a failure. Other accidents of the same type cook place during the years which followed. Pigs and sheep also caused trouble to the ploneer locomotives.

In New Jersey a young man named Isaac Dripps had the duty of taking care of a locomotive the "John Bull" - which had been built in England. During the course of his work he was annoyed by the trouble caused by livestock getting on the tracks.

To meet that trouble, Dripps built a two-wheeled affair which was pushed ahead of the locomospikes. When these spikes struck an animal, it was caught and pushed ahead

That kept the locomotive from were troubles. In one case a large bull was held so firmly by the spikes that it took a long time to oosen the body.

The next step was to take out the long spikes. A strong iron bar, crosswise with the tracks, was pushed in front of the locomotive. That worked better, but objects on the tracks often were carried along. To avoid that, a cowcatcher of triangular shape was designed, and this knocked objects out of the way, either to the right or the left of the tracks.

Jack Benny

HOLLYWOOD, UN-The U. S. Tax Court in Washington has ruled in favor of comedian Jack Benny in a seven-year-old tax case involving about a million dollars.

The case involved a question of whether Benny should pay personal income taxes or capital gains tax on the 1948 sale of Amusement Enterprises, Inc.

The government contended the omedian should pay personal income taxes at a rate of about 75 per cent. Benny said his share of the deal comprised a long term capital gain, taxable at 25 per
