Motivation Is Secret of Community Progress

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Wild Geese are still flying south in the advance of a winter storm, as they did when I was a boy. I heard them Sunday but my eyes are dimmer now and I never sighted the flock. It was good to hear the sound again and left a feeling that some things are still right with the world. We always knew that the geese were flying south in advance of bad weather and they were always right. Our present weather forecasters said we would have mild, dry weather, but two snow storms have erupted in the few days since the geese went south. Perhaps there is some way we could incorporate the intelligence of the geese in the predictions of the Weather Bureau.

Hope can be a frightful thing, as the dreams that lighted a young man's eyes with ambition to open an enterprise without funds. Most of us have watched the hand of destiny erase the designs which we had drawn with nothing remaining but the blankness of reality.

The years have dulled the sharpness of memory of the night when violins were crying from the old house where couples were dancing. Soft light from coal oil lamps was shining from the windows and doors as I walked in the yard and held a girl's hand. The moon was shining almost as bright as daylight and we walked to some rose bushes that were blooming and fragrant. Suddenly the music changed to a song that fit the scene of moonlight and roses. Recently the music came tumbling back across the long years on a television program and I was young again with my dreams, and a breath of breeze stirred the wooden wheel windmill and I was at the cattle trough where we watched the moon's reflection in the water and a few rose petals scattered on its surface.

It is not easy to walk in the shadow of a great man unless we are willing to kneel at intervals when he prays.

A few people with agreeable dispositions are the essential mortar that holds the bricks of society together. Those who smile are the masons who struggle to build enduring structures.

HOME FROM HOSPITAL

Mrs. E. W. Smallwood returned home Tuesday from Hale Center, where she had been a patient the past week in Hi Plains Hospital. Her daughter, Mrs. Alvie Robinson of Laurel, Miss., has been here the past two weeks, with her father and also at her mother's bedside.

Elbert Seigler returned home Tuesday from Methodist Hospital, Lubbock, where he had surgery and was hospitalized two weeks. Mrs. Seigler has been with her husband and accompanied him home.

MOTIVATION of the people is the secret of progress in small communities such as Matador, according to Oscar Dickerson, executive speaker at the regular Matador Lions luncheon meeting held Tuesday, November 21. He was introduced by Lion Ronnie Christian.

"The organization I work for is not a federal agency," Mr. Dickerson declared. "It is a non-profit organization with a board of directors, with one from each of 17 counties. Our job has been in the loan area, helping businessmen find the money they might need and doing their paper work."

"When we started in 1965 we imagined we were going to help a lot of small businesses come into being. We found, however, that our job was mainly to salvage businesses already in existence. In the last two years we have moved more in terms of community economic development."

Four Agencies Important
"There are four agencies which are very important to you in the development of your community. First there is the Small Business Administration.

"There are four agencies which are very important to you in the development of your community. First there is the Small Business Administration. They have four programs. One is the 7-A loan program to individuals who must have 25% of the cost of the enterprise to put into it. Another is the 502 loan guarantee program for local corporations, who must put in 10% of the cost of the enterprise. For instance this could be a lease guarantee for companies building to house a business.

"Another organization important to you is the Small Business Investment Company, a lending agency licensed by the state.

"Farmer's Home Administration is another important organization. It is coming out with a new program for rural homes and is not the same as Federal Housing. The fourth organization important to you is named Economic Development Corporation. Only a few counties have previously been in this, but recently 21 counties were added to the list, including Motley.

"There are guideline requirements which a county must meet. This organization's purpose is to help get industry, housing, or anything that has something to do with economic development. A new office is being opened in Lubbock."

Mr. Dickerson stressed the importance of organizing a Rural Development Corporation in the community as a fundamental for attracting new industry. He cited instances in Aspermont and Crowell which had resulted in achievement.

He said communities can secure aid but that there must be motivation and that there are some things which we must do for ourselves. "It is hard to get it done," he said, "but it can be done."

(Notes for this report were made for the Tribune by Lion Rev. Douglas Gossett)

SERVICES HELD FOR ROBERT GLENN REED

Robert Glenn Reed, manager of Hickory Hill Ranch, Denton for 15 years, and husband of Laura Rigby Reed, formerly of Whiteflat, died Nov. 17 in a Dallas Hospital.

Funeral services were held Sunday, Nov. 19 at 2 p. m. in Schmitz-Floyd Hamlett Funeral Chapel.

Survivors include his wife, Laura, one stepdaughter, and one step-granddaughter of Roanoke.

Mrs. Reed is a sister of Mrs. Vella Edwards of Avoca, formerly of Whiteflat, who made the trip by plane from Amarillo, where she has been staying with her daughter, Mrs. Steve Jenkins and family, since having recent eye surgery.

Mrs. Edwards was met by her son, Jerry Edwards of Strawn and continued to Denton where she remained at the hospital with her sister, who was ill and unable to attend her husband's funeral.

Others attending the funeral and visiting Mrs. Reed, were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jeffers and their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Jeffers of Plano, and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Jeffers of Dallas.

W. T. Ross spent Thanksgiving day with his daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Carson Jr. of Olton, and visited in Vernon, Sunday with his brother-in-law, J. I. Malone, who is a patient in the hospital.

A MASON for 50 years, Melton Thacker (center) was honored last week by members of the Roaring Springs Masonic Lodge. He was presented with 50-year pin by his wife, Lillian (at his right). At Mr. Thacker's left is Mrs. Guy Thacker, who also received a 50-year pin for her deceased husband. At the extreme right is J. M. (Buzz) Thacker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melton Thacker.

Tribune is Now Computerized

The Matador Tribune's typesetting was moved to the front office this week in a "completely new ball game" for the county weekly newspaper. The reading matter was set on the new "Compuwriter" which was installed by a factory representative, James Hargrave of Lubbock.

The front page will look different and the inside pages will look different since the page size has been increased from seven columns to eight columns, now standard on most daily and weekly offsetters.

The computerized type is set on a small, blue machine which weighs only 470 pounds. Film is exposed inside the Compuwriter and processed outside. After a few minutes of drying it is run through a waxer which applies a coat of wax to the back of the sheet of exposed type. It is then stuck to a page-size paste-up sheet until the sheet is filled. It is then ready for the printer (Blanco Offset Printing Co. at Floyd-ada).

The Tribune asks the tolerance of readers and advertisers until it becomes acquainted with the new process. Most users of the new system become familiar with the radical change.

The Tribune believes it will be able to produce a better product, easier and quicker. The Compuwriter is the identical machine used by the Floyd County Hesperian, Stamford American and many small daily newspapers. The same Mayflower truck that delivered the machine here, had delivered a machine to the Denton Daily Chronicle. Five were delivered in Texas on the trip from the east coast.

The change means that the now obsolete Linotype machine installed in 1934, was used only in some of the heads and perhaps advertisements. Later it will be used only to set commercial printing, including church bulletins, etc.

Matador to Have New Business

AFTER losing two or three business firms, Matador is soon to have a new business. A deal was culminated late Tuesday whereby Sheriff J. D. Spray and his son, Joel Dean (now of Lubbock) purchased the Preston (Peg) Spray Building on U.S. Highway 70 west. The father and son partnership will open an implement and parts business in the structure.

The building was constructed in about 1960 and Peg Spray operated an implement business there for several years, then sold his business to Billy Paul Simpson, who operated it until about three years ago.

Mr. Spray, whose term as sheriff will expire January 1, told the Tribune that he and his son would attempt to secure a tractor dealership but that no agreement had been made. He said an opening announcement would be made at a later date.

VOTERS of Motley County will go to the polls Saturday and decide the fate of the proposed school improvement bond election. Three propositions will be on the ballot and proposition No. 1 must carry before 2 and 3 can be approved.

In proposition 2 an entirely new school facility would be built and it would be paid for out of State Incentive Aid. It would be a painless bond issue without any increase in property valuation and without any raise in the tax rate.

If proposition 3 is approved a new gymnasium would be built at a cost of $140,000, together with the new Motley County Independent School District facilities, there would be slight increase in the tax rate, amounting to 9c or 6%. A taxpayer who pays $100 school taxes would pay $106 if both propositions are approved.

The incentive aid funds (amounting to about $565,000 in ten years) is the money saved by the state through the school consolidation. It can not, however, be used for anything but bonded indebtedness or new construction.

Voters residing in each of the three former districts, Flomot, Roaring Springs and Matador, will vote at the polling places where they have voted in the past.

Youth to Register By 18th Birthday

AUSTIN, Texas — Colonel Melvin N. Glantz, the State Director of Selective Service for Texas, has again reminded young men of their obligation to register with Selective Service within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

Glantz stressed that the requirement to register will continue in full effect whether the all-voluntary military force becomes a reality or not. Every native born and resident-alien young man is required to present himself for registration from 30 days before to 30 days after his 18th birthday. If for any reason, a young man has failed to register he should do so immediately to escape the penalty of Federal law.

Failure to register may result in a fine, imprisonment, or both, under provisions of the Military Selective Service Act.

Young men may register at the office of the local board near their home or place of residence, or may be registered by volunteer registrars who are located in most high schools or other similarly convenient locations. Registrar in the MOTLEY COUNTY area is Pat Sheridan, at the Courthouse, Matador.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

Some morning before long an old problem is going to be back with us. PRUSSIC ACID.

A killing frost, even in spots, can cause Johnsongrass, sorghum-sudan hybrids and related plants to become dangerous. As there is no test available to determine if the plants are dangerous, why take a chance. The safe way to handle this problem is to remove cattle a week or 10 days.

Sure, you may have gotten by in the past, but the loss of one animal at today's price could offset any gains you may have realized by grazing during the critical period.

Harvest time is here, and I know everyone is in a hurry to get the crops out, but think a few minutes before you act.

You have spent 4 to 6 months producing the peanuts, cotton or maize that is now getting ready for harvest. To save a few hours, or even a day, is it worth reducing your yield 10% or the grade which will also reduce your net income?

If you don't want this loss after taking all summer to produce the crop, how about taking a little time to see that the harvesting machinery is in proper operating condition, and set correctly. You are the one to benefit.

Coupled with the above, proper speed is also important. If your machine is in perfect condition, and you operate at a speed higher than the machine can handle the crop being harvested, losses will also result. It may take a few minutes, but check behind the harvesting machine. If part of the crop is being left in the field, you need one of two things. Slower operation, or setting the machine properly.

It's your crop. Where do you want it? Left in the field, or delivered to the market?

Buying items with features usually means money in the bag for the seller, not for you.

If you don't use the features and extras on products, then you're letting money slip through your fingers. The first step in buying equipment is considering an item's basic function, and even though I am going to use a stove for example, it will also apply to a tractor, auto, combine or any other type of equipment.

The basic function of a range is cooking — boiling, frying, baking, broiling. Almost any stripped quality-built range will perform adequately, but ranges are stocked with features. With some you can bake at two different temperatures. Others clean the oven without scrubbing, provide a supply of hot water or warm when foods have cooked enough. Compare the price on a basic range with one that has extras. The price differences show a wide gap, and are you willing to wade through the directions to learn how to use these extra features?

Before buying, decide exactly what you need and what you'll use. Don't spend the extra money if you aren't sure. An unused feature on a piece of equipment is a leak in your spending power, and very little of this is recovered at trading time.

As I stated, this is related to a stove, but can't you relate it to any purchase you make?

Cattle producers who are interested in boosting percent calf crop will probably want a copy of "Ways to Increase Percent Calf Crop in Beef Cattle." Copies are available.

Percent calf crop weaned is the most important factor in determining the profitability of a cow-calf program, and there are three main factors affecting reproductive performance. These are the percent of cows coming into a fertile heat; number of cows conceiving at each heat period; and the death loss of calves at or near birth.

How a cow performs depends on her environment and her genetic capability, and of all the environmental influences, the one affecting reproductive ability the most is usually nutrition.

As the bull breeds up to 30 cows, he is more important than any single cow. Qualities that make for a productive bull are physical fitness, semen quality and "libido" or sex drive. An annual semen check is important to detect any deficiencies in the breeding program, and also cheaper than finding out about a failure by a missed calf crop or a late crop.

This bulletin covers these problems as well as others, and could be helpful if your calf crop is not up to expectations.

Nearly every child who has cared for an animal has experienced some common crisis — daily feeding of a pet, occasional sickness and even death of an animal, or parting with a prize steer on sale day after months of careful attention and handling. "Support from parents and leaders can help youth cope with such stress and thereby enable them to tolerate more difficult future crises," Holbrook pointed out.

The clinical director noted that closely related to the development of youth into adulthood is the idea of becoming accustomed to the normal stress of everyday living. "Exhibiting an animal, for instance, puts a 4-H'er under pressure; he learns to cope with the situation by accepting it and meeting the challenge."

Caring for an animal also allows a youngster to become "goal oriented," emphasizes Holbrook. In feeding, caring and showing animals, the 4-H'er feels his worth because he has some goals. He receives a chance for self-motivation in the fulfillment of his goals with the animal.

"People who can't relate to past experiences or goals tend to have problems in adapting to changes in life," the psychiatrist pointed out. "Consequently, they seldom make useful contributions to society."

Another advantage of working with and caring for animals is that youngsters learn patience, or the ideas of delayed gratification, Holbrook added.

"Once a youngster is committed to a particular activity or project, he can work with it and, at the same time, grow and develop himself. An animal project, whether it be a steer, horse, hog, dog or rabbit, can be the beginning of "real life" experiences for many a youth," noted Holbrook.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Campbell and small daughter, Jerri Ann spent the week end here with his father, Judge Forrest Campbell, who visited in their home at Sudan Thanksgiving Day.
