GOP's Gather In Topeka For Landon Speech

Formal Notification And Acceptance Ceremonies Thursday Night

TOPEKA, July 22 (AP)—Republican hosts, headed by Rep. Bertrand Snell of New York, chairman of the national convention, converged on Topeka today to notify Gov. Alf M. Landon tomorrow night of his nomination as GOP presidential candidate.

His acceptance speech ready, Landon planned to greet the visitors as they arrive. John D. M. Hamilton, national committee chairman, was expected to arrive tomorrow to discuss campaign strategy.

To Be Broadcast

The ceremonies Thursday night will start at 8 p. m. CST, with broadcasting over both the NBC and CBS systems.

Landon gave his 3,500-word address a final reading. After this last check-over, a close adviser said that in addition to probable emphasis on farm relief, unemployment, federal spending and taxation, and the constitution, the republican nominee was likely to touch on labor problems, outlining his views on what the government's attitude should be toward the labor movement.

Mrs. Landon arrived yesterday evening from the government summer ranch at Estes Park, Colo., and drove directly to the executive mansion. She saw fluttering across broad Kansas avenue, which threads Topeka's business section, a myriad of banners and flags. Golden sunflowers glittered on blue backgrounds; a "welcome GOP" framed the familiar elephant on hundreds of banners. Landon's picture was everywhere and streets and business houses alike were dressed in red, white and blue bunting.

See Chances Improved

Governor Landon's advisers have observed two recent political developments interpreted as definitely increasing his November chances. The first was the bolt of conservative democratic leaders under Alfred E. Smith from the candidacy of President Roosevelt. The second combined scattered expressions of grass roots sentiment. This latter is reflected in various polls which in the past fortnight have indicated the republican candidate is gaining at Mr. Roosevelt's expense.

Likewise significant was the outbreak of anti-Roosevelt sentiment at the Townsend club's annual convention at Cleveland. That convention was a forum last week for anti-new deal speeches and personal criticism of Mr. Roosevelt. Although the Townsends informally endorsed the presidential candidacy of William Lemke of the new union party, the first was the bolt of conservative democratic leaders under Alfred E. Smith from the candidacy of President Roosevelt. This latter is reflected in various polls which in the past fortnight have indicated the republican candidate is gaining at Mr. Roosevelt's expense.

There was no comment here today on reports that John D. M. Hamilton of the republican national committee had approached Alf Smith to campaign for the Landon-Knox ticket next fall. Persons acquainted with Smith's mind insist he does not now plan on appearing during the campaign under republican auspices.

More To Get Age Pensions

60,000 Checks Will Be Sent Out The First Of Next Month

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, July 22—Mail will be heavier at the Texas old age pension office August 1 than it was the first of July, when the initial batch of 40,000 pension checks went out.

There will be between 60,000 and 65,000 checks in the mail August 1. Ever since the first payments were made, additional names have been put on the roll, and July checks mailed. The pension list now is about 60,000, and by the end of this month, when the second mailing of monthly checks will be made, it is expected to reach 65,000.

The old age assistance commission is working through the mountain of application papers, and out of something like 200,000 applications, is adding to the roll of pensioners whose applications qualify them for assistance.

But those who had not been reviewed and passed finally on July 1, and those who still later will be added to the list will not lose by the delay, as the law provides that all applications signed before July 1 and approved would call for payments beginning then, and others, from the time they are signed by the applicant.

Judge Talks To Governor About Case

No Appointment Unless Garlington Certifies It, Allred Tells Him

That he has no right to appoint a special judge in the affray case filed in justice court against County Judge J. S. Garlington—and later dismissed by Garlington in county court—unless the county judge certifies such action, was the information given Garlington by telephone Wednesday by Gov. Jas. V. Allred.

Garlington handed The Herald a statement covering the telephone conversation he had with the governor, in which this information was given.

The county judge called Allred Wednesday morning after a story appearing in Tuesday's Herald stated that the governor told County Attorney Wilburn Barcus over the telephone that he would make no statement regarding the case until he had an opportunity to examine the records. This indicated, The Herald's Tuesday story attributed to Barcus as saying, that no action by the governor would be taken before next week.

Records Conversation

The judge's statement on the phone call with Allred Wednesday morning is as follows:

Judge Garlington: "Have you talked with Bill Barcus about an affray case that was appealed from justice court and dismissed by me in my case, and did you understand it was a moot case and already dismissed? He is publishing all over Texas that you are considering appointing a special judge to try a case that is already disposed of."

Governor Allred: "I told him over the phone that I didn't have the right to appoint one unless you certified it."

After Judge Garlington dismissed the case, involving an altercation with County Clerk R. L. Warren, when it was brought before his court, Barcus later appealed to the governor to appoint a special judge. Garlington held to the opinion that the case was closed as far as he was concerned. The developments with regard to conversations with the governor followed.

OLD LONG MACHINE NOW LINED UP FOR FDR AND NEW DEAL

NEW YORK, July 22 (AP)—Governor Richard Leche of Louisiana, conferring with James A. Farley at democratic national headquarters today, gave assurance that the state political organization built by the late Huey Long "will go along with President Roosevelt 100 per cent."

Leche said: "Those whom Huey fought now are for Landon. We are for the president because the principles of the new deal are closest to the social security and social welfare principles for which Huey fought."

Bill Edwards, manager of Waukers store, was in Monahan's Wednesday on business.

Mrs. G. E. Fiesman left Tuesday for Fort Worth and Dallas for a visit.

Makes Appeal For Allred's Reelection

Abilene Man Cites Governor's Record, Activity For Age Assistance

Lashing out at Allred's foes and making a strong appeal for reelection of Texas Centennial governor, Jas. V. Stinson, Abilene attorney, addressed a crowd on the court house lawn Tuesday night in behalf of the candidacy of Jas. V. Allred.

Stinson emphasized the record made by Allred in the way of improving state finances, lauded the governor for his efforts in setting up the old age assistance program and assailed Allred's opponents for "misleading" the old people in their attacks on the pension policies. Stinson reminded the crowd that "these candidates who are making wild promises cannot deliver the goods. They are overlooking the fact that the legislature, not the governor, makes the laws."

100 Local Children Will Have Chance To Play In Comedy

Some 100 Big Spring children will have a chance to "crash the movies."

Announcement of arrangements to produce a two-reel kid comedy in Big Spring was announced Wednesday by J. Y. Robb, manager of the R & R theatres here. Milton Barker of Hollywood will arrive here early in August to supervise and direct the picture. Barker has the distinction of having discovered Spanky McFarland, who is now starring in Hal Roach's "Our Gang" productions.

The entire picture will be made in Big Spring, Robb said. It will be a kidnap story and will be shown later at both the Ritz and Lyric theatres.

About 100 local children will be used in the cast. Some singing and dancing will be presented in the picture, but it will not be necessary for a child to be able to sing and dance to get a good part, as all types of children are needed to fill out the cast, Robb said.

Moore Awards Contract For Location In Sec. 20, Block 32

Contract to drill another wildcat test in southwestern Borden county was let by John L. Moore, San Angelo oil operator, to Kirkpatrick and Lamb Tuesday. The test is due to be spudded in within a week.

Located in the southeast quarter of section 20, block 32, T-4-N, T&P survey, the test is staked on what geologists believe the logical high for the area.

It is six miles east and north of the abandoned C. E. Hyde No. 1 White in section 28 which logged lowest formations of any test drilled in southwest Borden. The hole was plugged last spring after drilling past 3500 feet in hard lime with no shows.

MARCHBANKS SHOWS SPECIMENS OF CORN

R. P. Marchbanks, farmer residing north of Big Spring, brought three specimens of Sure Cropper corn from his farm to The Herald office Wednesday morning, and the corn is now on display. The corn, which is attracting much interest, was planted last March, and Marchbanks stated that if he had had an additional rain he would have produced a much better yield. However, he expected to gather from 30 to 35 bushels to the acre. He has 89 acres planted to corn. Marchbanks said his cotton crop was badly in need of rain.

A COUPLE of boys on the comeback trail will lock horns in a heavyweight scrap on August 18, according to an AP story from up New York way. Jack Sharkey, a former world champion, who lost his title in 1932 to the big Italian, Carmen, will appear against Joe Louis, brown boy who was once called a bomber. Each man is to take a 25 per cent cut of the gate receipts. It was only in the last few months that Sharkey attempted a comeback, probably in need of replenishing his depleted pocketbook. He has fought some four or five fights since, all against unknowns in the fight world with the exception of Phil Erubaker, the young California sensation who lost a close decision to Jack last month. If Louis can't take the old sailor scrapper, he had better sign up for Billy Rose's chorus, suggests a Gainesville writer.

Germans Design Tough Course For Marathon

BERLIN, July 22 (AP)—The Germans designed a difficult course for the Olympic marathon. Juan Carlos Zabala, marathon champion of the 1932 games, says the hilly run is tougher than any other he has encountered. But those who find the course most troublesome are the German runners themselves—whose marks in tryouts have fallen disappointingly low.

PHILLIPS LEADS IN TOURNAMENT

Mrs. Gordon Phillips, with 348 points scored in six rounds, has a wide lead in the women's Point golf tournament. In second place is Mrs. Harry Stalcup with 303 points scored in twelve rounds. Mrs. Chas. Worley holds third place with 245 points in twelve rounds.

Triple Entente Threat To U.S. Team

Japan, Germany, And Finland Likely To Give Biggest Challenge

By GUENTHER BEUKERT BERLIN, July 22 (AP)—It's the United States against an athletic "triple entente" in the eleventh Olympic games, August 1-16.

At least, much speculation is based on the question of what the combined forces of Germany, Japan and Finland can do to break down Yankee supremacy in the world's quadrennial super-sports carnival. The host nation is at maximum strength numerically with a team numbering 448, but on the whole the Germans are hardly of the calibre to make an appreciable dent in the dominance of the United States as enjoyed in track and field ever since the current series of Olympic games began.

Curiously, however, Germany's strength seems to lie in the events in which Japan's and Finland's marks fall short.

"Gang Up" On U. S. And thus these three nations—Japan, Finland and Germany—comprise a sort of triple threat against the highly-favored star-spangled brigade.

Nowhere have the sensational performances of the Finnish middle and long distance runners been envied than in the reich, which time and again sees its weaknesses demonstrated by a runner from another direction—Juan Carlos Zabala of Argentina, the 1932 Olympic marathon champion, who came to Europe months ago for his training siege. While American success seems assured in the sprints, hurdles and broad jump, manned by such stars as Jesse Owens, Forrest Towns and Glenn Hardin, it is highly questionable that the American pole-vaulter trio from Southern California can stand off the challenge of the diminutive acrobatic Japanese, who also are threatening in the hop, step and jump.

The reich carefully cultivated team of shot, discus, hammer and javelin throwers and, be it luck or javelin ability, succeeded in bringing them up to the Olympic level. The German Hans Woelke is in reputation to challenge Jack Torrance of the U. S. in the Olympic shotput. Woelke is leaving the iron ball close to Torrance's best mark—and the Louisianian is reported to be fat and far-off his best form.

Nazis Count On Discus Germans are confident Wilhelm Schroeder will win the discus throw. Last year he bettered Swedish Harold Anderson's world mark with a toss of 174 feet 2 3/16 inches. Schroeder is rated far ahead of the U. S. discus throwers, led by Slinger Dunn of Fresno, Calif. Germany has strength in the hammer throw. Erwin Blask was looked upon as the nazis' best here, but he recently was dethroned by a newcomer, Bernhard Grewlich. German officials are praying for a native son to beat the world record which has stood since Pat Ryan of the U. S. tossed the ball and chain 189 feet 1-2 inches 23 years ago.

The reich's greatest loss in track and field events is Hans Heins Sievert, the German holder of the world record for the decathlon, a mark recently beaten by Glenn Morris of Fort Collins, Colo. Sievert broke a thigh bone in Italy two years ago and never regained his full strength. He says he tires too fast in the sprints and he is sadly deficient in the jumps. A replacement for him appeared in the person of Gerhard Stoekel, one of the world's foremost javelin pitchers and pentathlon men.

For the high-jump Germany presents Gustav Weinkoets, who leaps around the 6 foot 6 mark and consequently isn't a real threat against America's high-stepping negroes.

REFINERY TEAM IN THE LEAD

Barring weather interference, two of the strongest teams in the race for second half honors in the Mertz trophy will clash tonight on the city park diamond. Cosden Lab, the only undefeated team in the league, credited with seven straight victories, will go against the Settles Roadrunners. Classed as one of the weakest teams in the first half, the Roadrunners have been close to the top in the second half. Settles has won four and lost two.

Petey Sarron To Risk His Title Tonight

Champion And Challenger In Fine Condition For Fight

DALLAS, July 22—Texas' first championship fight will be held here tonight between Featherweight Champion Petey Sarron and Challenger Baby Manuel.

Disregarding a feud between their managers, the fighters tapered off to a fine point yesterday and prepared for a rest today. Sarron naturally is the favorite, because he is the titleholder and is one of the most aggressive little men in the game, but some of the gamblers are not giving too long odds on the Syrian to hold his crown. They know Manuel from his past performances in Dallas, and know what his deadly south-paw liver punch can do if he connects often enough.

Williams Is New Olympic Track Hope

NEW YORK, July 22 (AP)—Nothing serves to force the rapid development of track and field talent as the approach of the Olympic games. Unknown athletes come tearing down the home stretch on the eve of the quadrennial celebration to far outdo their best previous efforts. Just glance over the list of athletes who are to represent America in the Olympic games at Berlin and you will see that it is dotted with names of youngsters who were unheard of a year, or even a month ago.

Fellows like Archie Williams, our leading hope to win the Olympic 400-meter championship, for example. A year ago Williams was an obscure quarter-miler attending Sacramento junior college and was unable to beat 49 seconds. His progress has been little short of phenomenal. This year in three successive meets he turned in 46.1, 46.3 and 47 seconds for 400 meters, 46.8 for 440 yards, compared to the listed world record of 46.2 (400 meters) and 46.4 (440 yards). He lost only two races this year, once when he tripped and fell at the start in a dual meet with U. S. C. and again when he barely failed to overtake Harold Smallwood after being badly bumped around in the "nationals" in Palmer stadium, Princeton, N. J.

He avenged the latter defeat when he led Smallwood over the finish line in the final Olympic trials at Randall's Island stadium in 46.6 seconds. Williams is a powerfully built negro with tremendous early speed and a driving finish.

Wrong Way Gets Results Then there is John Woodruff, a gangling, 6-foot freshman, it is doubtful if Woodruff entertained any great hopes of winning a place on the Olympic team prior to the day he stepped out on the track in Harvard stadium for the sectional tryouts and led Chuck Hornbostel to the tape in the "800" in the astounding (for an unknown) time of 1:51.3.

The giant negro, with his unorthodox style of running, ran his trial heat at Randall's Island in 1:49.9 despite the fact that the experts and coaches shook their heads in disappointment when he tossed his head back and lengthened his ground-eating stride until it seemed that he would split in two.

He may run all wrong according to accepted form—but one thing is certain: he gets over the ground mightily fast, and generally faster than the other fellows. Woodruff gives the impression that he is only beginning to run. When he gets a little experience in the fine art of rating himself the half-mile and 800-meter records will be at his mercy. The mile record might take quite a beating at his hands if Woodruff ever makes up his mind to try that popular distance.

Archie San Romani made some threatening gestures toward track greatness last year, but he came along rapidly this spring to hit his peak when he finished inches behind Glenn Cunningham in 3:49.9 to clinch the Olympic 1,600-meter standard set by Luigi Beccali of Italy in 1932. San Romani beat out Gene Venks and Ed Bonthron in that wild dash down the stretch.

Gene LaBelle Disqualified

Watkins Uses All Of His Mean Tricks To Win From Hagen

Sailor Watkins and Gene LaBelle were as rough as expected last night and drew boos from the fans. Watkins won his main event wrestling match as rain chased the spectators to cover and LaBelle was disqualified by Referee Brownie Hanshaw.

The semi-final between Flash O'Neill and Nick Bozins was the cleverest and most entertaining match on the card, O'Neill breaking loose from many difficult holds but failing to win a fall before the twenty minute time limit stopped the match.

LaBelle, biting, gouging and choking, was disqualified after repeated warnings from Referee Hanshaw. The bearded Frenchman exchanged a few blows with Hanshaw and jabbered French occasionally when jerked loose for choking. Hanshaw finally urged Detton to bite back, but Dory was not in the mood for such rough stuff and the match was stopped.

With the spectators yelling for his scalp, Sailor Watkins gave an exhibition of "super rough" stuff in the main event with Jack Hagen. He stuck the Louisiana Lumberjack with his shoe laces, rubbed soap in his face and gouged his eyes at every opportunity. The soap and shoe laces, combined with licks in the ribs and hard rights to the jaw, gave Watkins two straight falls.

The present system of Olympic scoring employed in Germany is: 7 points for first place, and then 5, 4, 3, 2, and 1, for second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth, respectively.

Gibson has the advantage with his filly, but Ben has the edge when it comes to experience. Father White also knows a lot about how Rosalind acts under fire, having trained her, and raced her through 1935. All of which is inside information well worth having.

GIVE HIM A HANDSOME MAJORITY

The rules of precedence and seniority are more rigid in the United States congress, we are often told, than in any other deliberate group. Veteran members of both houses jealous of their hard-won honors, see to it that they keep the prerogatives to which they are entitled.

It takes an extraordinary newcomer in the law-making bodies to make a dent in that stronghold.

None in many a year has made such a favorable impression on his senior colleagues, most informed Washington observers will tell you, as this district's Representative George Mahon. Congress doesn't expect a great deal from its first-termers, acknowledging that it takes at least a term or two for a new member to "learn the ropes."

But Mahon learned the ropes with unusual rapidity. He lacked his job with courage, sincerity and earnestness, with the result that his record already is one of which a member several terms his senior might be proud.

Mahon quickly won the respect and admiration of his colleagues. He was elected secretary of the Texas delegation in congress at the outset; he was given places on committees which called for real work; he was given due recognition on the floor, and in the various agencies and bureaus of the federal government.

Winning his spurs in Washington, he also has served his own district well, listening to his constituents, and doing his best to meet their demands; voting in the main the way he believed his district could best be served.

Mahon is now seeking his second term. We can find no serious reason why he should not receive, and entertain not the slightest doubt that he will receive a handsome majority.

This is not particularly a plea for Mahon's reelection. That is a foregone conclusion; but it is a request to the voters of the 19th congressional district to give him a vote so tremendous that he can go back to Washington next year with full knowledge that his district is solidly behind him, ready to encourage him in the undertakings of a new term and appreciative of a job well done during the past two years.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—Something of the restlessness that makes New York a tireless whirligig is reflected in the changing status of its avenues. Seldom do they retain their Social Register standing very long. A notable example is Riverside drive, with its mansions and cliffs and well-groomed miles of river frontage. . . . But Riverside drive has lost caste since the war. . . . Its fabulous apartments are now available at something less than platinum prices.

West 72nd street was another highway which once attracted the socially fastidious. . . . Today it is just another nice place to live. . . . Even Park avenue, ritziest of thoroughfares, and Fifth avenue, the street of mansions, have relinquished a part of their exclusiveness. . . . The inroads of business and commercial houses are responsible, in part, for the destruction of these barriers.

At the moment the toniest of the smart neighborhoods seems to be Sutton Place, on East river—an ultra-exclusive sector which ends paradoxically in the slums. Katharine Cornell lives there, and so does Miriam Hopkins, Anne Morgan, May Marberry and a number of the Vanberbits are others who have found the neighborhood to their liking. The presence of these personalities, it becomes obvious, is an irresistible lure to those who require Social Register labels on their doorsteps.

If you measure Monsieur A's career by the yardstick of dollars and cents you will call him a success. . . . He has a fortune of $3,000,000, two yachts, a Canadian estate and another in the south. . . . He is probably the unhappiest man in New York.

He came to this country as an alien and worked his way through an eastern university. . . . Then he became a naturalized citizen and adopted this country's flag as his own (17 months in France and three bullet holes in his leg give ample evidence of this). . . . Gifted with singular earning capacities, he acquired a small "stake" and nursed it into a fortune. . . . His money has given him everything—except the thing he most desires.

Unhappily, Monsieur A is subject to recurrent and inexplicable seizures which leave him shaken and speechless with pain. He has visited specialists all over the world, but invariably their answers have been the same: "Your trouble is largely mental. Only you can help yourself. Nothing is organically wrong."

The ghastly verity of this situation is that the specialists are right. . . . There is nothing organically the matter with the man—there is only that indefinable malady which intermittently nudges him into tail-spins of pain. . . . He never knows when the next attack will strike—and the overwhelming dread that continues to haunt him is threatening to drive him mad. . . . Were such a thing possible, he would gladly sign over every acre he owns, every dollar to his name, and change place with the lowliest menial who sweeps his lawn.

Now that Bryant Park—that erstwhile paradise of beachcombers—has been dolled up with new benches and aristocratic hedges, the stumblers are pined. They

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW FARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Vague news of a collision between the president's yacht and a photographers' boat has leaked out, but the facts regarding the seriousness of the crash have been carefully concealed. For one brief moment it looked as if the Sewanna, with the Roosevelt aboard, would founder.

It happened this way: Photographers had hired a boat to get close-ups of the president embarking at North Haven, Maine, and were told by Marvin McIntyre to wait at the wharf until he was lowered over the side of his destroyer on to the yacht. Then the destroyers would send them a messenger, and they would come aboard and take all the pictures they wanted.

Three and a half hours passed. No messenger. Finally they noticed that the president's flag was being lowered from the destroyer indicating he had left it. So they started out to catch the Sewanna, manned by Roosevelt and his son.

Photographers' Argument
By that time, she was well outside the harbor, but they finally caught up with her. Then an argument ensued among the photographers, the movie men wanting long distance shots with long distance lenses, the newspaper photographers wanting close-ups for still pictures.

Finally the movies were given their chance, then the boat was ordered closer for the stills. About this time a heavy squall came up. Both boats were pitching.

The captain of the chartered vessel, being given orders simultaneously by every photographer, tried to get very close to the yacht, at which point a big wave swept the two vessels together.

The president's sons, shrieking curses at the photographers, tried desperately to keep out of the way. But the two boats collided, and the bowsprit of the Sewanna got entangled with the bow of the other boat.

For one brief moment, it looked as if the yacht was going over. But the two ships finally got apart.

The president's sons did not mince words telling the photographers what they thought of them, and orders were given that all future pictures must be taken on land. The incident did not help Roosevelt relations with the Boston press—whatever those relations may be worth.

By His Own Petard
Ex-Comptroller General John R. McCarl now knows exactly what is meant by the expression, "boast by his own petard." His enlightenment came about this way:

On the eve of his retiring from 15 years as watch-dog of the treasury, a minor executive in his office opened a subscription list to buy McCarl a farewell gift. When the total pledges were tallied they came to $2,000, and it was decided to buy him an A-1 automobile.

A committee was picked, motor agencies visited and everything was all set for a final choice when one of the general accounting office employees quietly produced a forgotten document.

This was a stern ruling by McCarl that government workers could not contribute to a fund to buy gifts for a superior officer. McCarl had issued his decree a year earlier, when he learned that AAA employees proposed to buy a watch for an executive.

So McCarl's ukase killed McCarl's $2,000 limousine.

After McCarl departed, a small group of his former assistants bought a set of law books for his new office.

Window Dressing
The "trial" of the insurgent industrial unions by the executive council of the A. F. of L., set for August 3, is only window dressing. Behind the scenes, the incensed craft union moguls of the federation are all set to drop the trap on John L. Lewis and his allies.

They have the votes and they would except for two considerations. First, was the tremendous backwash of rank-and-file hostility against any disciplinary action. The executive council has been deluged with messages protesting its truculent attitude toward the independents. More than a score of state labor federations have adopted resolutions demanding a hands-off policy.

Second, the executive council was uncertain about its powers under the AFL constitution. It claims that it has authority to suspend affiliate unions. The insurgents deny this, contend that only the annual convention of the federation can cast a member, and then solely by a two-thirds vote.

And, since they control more than one-third of the federation, they are not worried about what would happen in the convention.

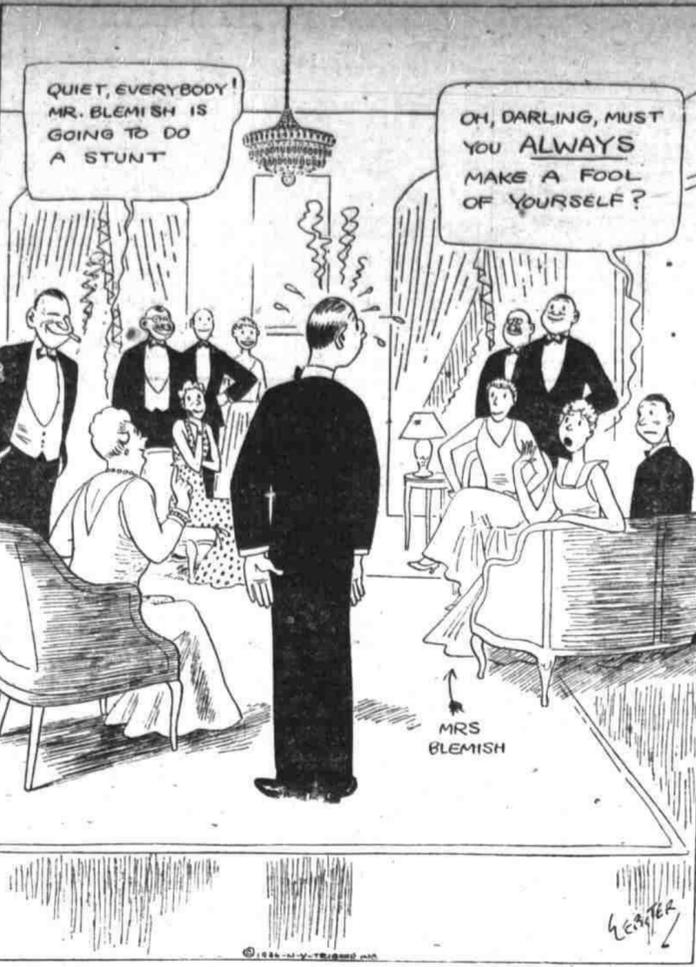

Clever Jockeying
This is exactly what the craft moguls are jockeying to prevent by suspending the insurgents before the convention meets. But realizing that their action will be violently attacked, they decided to give it an aura of legality.

On the advice of attorneys, they concocted the formula of preparing formal charges and a "trial." Behind this maneuver the A. F. of L. is attempting to bait Lewis' crowd into some action that would give the insurgents recognized its jurisdiction to pass judgment on them.

Indifferent
Lewis and his associates have absolutely no intention of doing this. They know the A. F. of L. are stacked heavily against them in the council, and are standing pat in hang around and stare at the empty park seats but refuse to utilize them. They refuse to believe the coppers won't skulk them for sitting in such a dressed-up place. . . . To them, the renovation of the park was a dirty trick. . . . They are bewildered by the fact that Manhattan's favorite hobo rendezvous has been turned into a fragrant rose garden.

FEDERAL THEATRE
REVUE BOOKED AT THE CENTENNIAL

DALLAS, July 22—"Follow the Parade," a musical revue, is one of the headline entertainments scheduled for the Texas Centennial exposition July 22 to August 2. It is a federal theatre revue. It will be staged in the amphitheatre at popular prices.

The same company of 105 singing and dancing stars, which has featured the presentation in Hollywood and downtown Los Angeles defying it. Not only will they disregard the charges but they will refuse to appear at the "trial." Privately, the industrial unionites don't care if the council does oust them. They would prefer to work within the federation, but will not moderate their plans to do so. They believe that their committee for industrial organization can stand on its own feet—if it has to.

theatre for several months, is being brought to Dallas. The company will also bring its orchestra of 40 pieces from the west coast.

"Follow the Parade" was conceived and planned by Eda Edson. The book was written and staged by Gene Stone and Jack Robinson. The music and lyrics were prepared by Jack Dale and Gene Stone.

The prototype is laid in the present with the first scene opening in the living room of Mother Rose, theatrical boarding house. Dance numbers are given in quick flashes. The audience is taken under the globe by television.

The scene changes to the Colonial Picture company, then through a street scene and an insane asylum. Lamentic puppets are introduced by tuncful music. Various quirks of nature are shown, and the Dionne quintuplets are given a play.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

Chapter 10
GOLD BLAST

Enderton court was built in the mid period of Victorian industrialism. 1840 saw the foundations dug, a year and a half later the place was finished. It was a multiplicity of rooms and great lengths of cheerless corridor, which possibly did not matter so much in the days when servants were cheap and plentiful.

Such a place needs life and plenty of it, if it is to be at all bearable, and for half a generation Enderton Court had known little enough life. In one corner of it a savage, inward-eating spirit sat jealously huddled over an occasional spark of begrudged fire, and somewhere in the outer regions a servant or two had passed a cold he have added that for a brief space, 10 seconds or more maybe, as he had stood alone in the darkness, he had felt across his cheek a chill, damp blast of air.

"Anything else you want to see?" Lumsdale asked when they regained the hall.

"No, I don't think so. Not at present. When's the inquest, sergeant?" "Friday morning, inspector."

"Um. We shall see what that brings out."

"I can tell you that now mister," Lumsdale said, a trifle unexpectedly. "Nothing."

A considerable experience of inquests inclined Kingsley Hynton privately to agree with this monosyllabic prophecy, but he did not say so; instead he said, "Just tell me about that chain on and comfortless existence; for the rest his big rooms were sheeted and silent.

It looked doubly deserted now as the three men made their way about. Even Inspector Hynton felt a certain eeriness from that damp, deserted mausoleum.

They inspected the ground floor thoroughly.

"Even a house agent would have a job to describe this in glowing terms," was Hynton's comment, "now what about the upstairs?"

"This way, mister," Lumsdale said briefly, leading the way up the fine wide staircase.

"This is where the old man slept, and my room's three doors along."

Inspection was duly made of two bedrooms, which Hynton privately thought must be as bleak and uninviting as ever any human being slept in.

"And the other rooms?" he queried.

"All empty. Bits of furniture in some of 'em; old boxes and the like, but for the most part empty."

"Well, we'll poke our heads in," the inspector said cheerily, and they duly poked their heads in to find only two dismal verifications of Lumsdale's account.

"Can't say I altogether blame you for not falling in love with the place," was Hynton's comment.

"This part's all right," Lumsdale said. "We can go in the other wing if you've a mind."

"I've a mind to everything," Hynton assured him. "That's my one besetting sin in life—curiosity. Which way?"

"This way, mister," Lumsdale led them down a long corridor which turned sharply to the right at its end. "This is where all the servants used to sleep when the house was full life, I suppose."

"Anything interesting here?" "Nothing as I've ever heard of, mister."

Kingsley Hynton was last out of the third bleak bedroom they visited and for a moment the sergeant, with the lantern being down the corridor, was virtually in darkness.

"Hallo," he cried sharply, "who's opened a window?"

Neither of the men ahead seemed to hear him. "Who's opened a window?" he called out more loudly, and there seemed to be a sort of sardonic satisfaction in the voice that floated back. "No windows been opened here for long enough."

It was an assurance that did not satisfy the inspector. "Fetch the lamp back and let's have a look," he ordered, and the three men made a silently thorough inspection of all the windows they could find. All were fastened, many shuttered.

"Why, did you hear something inspector?" Sergeant White asked. "No, I didn't hear anything," Hynton answered. "I just wondered."

He caught sight for an instant of the grin on Lumsdale's queer face, and not for anything would the front door, Lumsdale. I'm not quite clear about that."

"Simple enough. Whenever I went out and old Burdett was alone all the back was shut up and locked, like I've told you. I had to go to that. Then after I'd gone and banged the front door behind me, the old boy put the chain up."

"Was it on when you came back?"

"Last Monday night d'you mean?"

"No, any ordinary night?"

"Yes, I'd ring the bell and the old man would come shuffling over the hall with a candle and open the door two or three inches. Then when he saw who it was, he'd let me in, mostly without a word, and I'd have to put the chain up again after me."

"Now, last Monday night when you went down to fetch Sergeant White, which way did you go out?"

"I front."

"Was the chain in place or not?"

"No, I noticed that particular."

"Um. I see. Well, I don't think we need worry you any more tonight. We shall be up in the morning of course. Good night."

"Night."

The inspector found the sharp, frosty night air pleasant after the shuttered dampness of Enderton Court. He was cold and wanted exercise; Sergeant White seemed to be of the same mind and they swung along steadily, for the most part in silence.

Once Hynton said, breaking a long silence, "Do you believe in ghosts, sergeant?"

"Yes, sir."

"You do?"

"I've never seen any convincing proof that there aren't any."

"Have you ever seen any convincing proof that two and two make four?"

"Mr. Einstein isn't so sure they do, is he, sir?"

Hynton laughed. "Well," he said, "I've never heard of a murder committed by a ghost before. What would you say, sergeant, if it turned out along those lines?"

"It's something I wouldn't care to be mixed up in," James White answered quietly.

Fischer Asserts Legislature Would OK Resource Tax

JASPER, July 22. — Refuting opinion of opposition candidates, who contend his program would fall in a legislative test, F. W. Fischer, Tyler gubernatorial candidate, reiterated his certainty that his tax on natural resources would be passed by the legislature in the event of his election.

"All the other candidates," said Fischer, "and also former Governor James E. Ferguson, who is campaigning for his candidate, Roy Sanderford, have no answer to my program. They are attempting to get the people to think that the legislature will not adopt my program of taxing natural resources. By that, they imply that the legislature is corrupt and is controlled by the oil, gas, and sulphur interests. The facts of the matter are that 75% of the candidates for the legislature are also advocating my platform. Therefore, if I am elected, there will be no doubt in the minds of the members of the legislature that my election is a mandate from the people to the legislature, to tax natural resources to pay the old age pensions, and to relieve the people of Texas from a portion of their burdens of taxation."

Fischer also discussed other questions upon which he said that he people were entitled to know how the various candidates stood. One of these was his opposition to convict labor, to the extent that it interfered with private enterprise. He said: "I believe in forcing prisoners to work to support themselves, but I do not believe in extending their work to the point that it handicaps the wage-earning ability or employment of law-abiding citizens who may be forced out of work through this industrial competition of convicts."

Reports received in Madrid said it was unofficially estimated in Barcelona that 800 persons had been killed and 3,000 wounded in that city where officials claimed the revolt was crushed.

Gibraltar police announced 119 Moroccan rebels who landed at Algeiras were killed by loyal guards. In the heavy fighting which accompanied the Rightist advance in the north, approximately 30 rebels and loyal soldiers were killed.

In the capital, the government enlisted civilian battalions of armed peasants and workers and dispatched them to strategic mountain positions surrounding Madrid.

Rebel Successes Denied Reports of rebel successes in the northern provinces were denied by the government in fresh bulletins describing Leftist victories in the provinces.

Gibraltar, British territory across from the southern border, was crowded with refugees, most of them from the war-torn city of Linares.

Two rebel planes bombed the Spanish warship Jaime in the harbor at Tangier, international zone in Morocco. The Jaime, with other leftist craft, had refused to obey an ultimatum from Gen. Francisco Franco, commander of the rebellion, to sail away or surrender.

Five marching columns of civilian militiamen left Madrid for rebel strongholds in surrounding provinces.

The movement in the north, where the revolutionaries established martial law, was the most widespread since the military revolt broke out last week in Spanish Morocco. Civil officials were reported fleeing across the frontier into France while rebel leaders declared they had mobilized 12,000 mountaineers from the Navarre hill regions.

COURT OVERRULES DRILL PERMIT ORDER AUSTIN, July 22. (UP)—The state supreme court today ruled that a railroad commission order attempting to grant permits to drill sixth, seventh and eighth oil wells on a tract of 8.61 acres in Gregg county under an exception to rule 37 was invalid because of improper notice.

A hearing was not afforded interested parties. Permission for the New Process Production company to drill was denied in an order dated May 7, 1934, the opinion stated, while on June 29 of the same year a second order, issued without notice and hearing, granted the application.

The Albenian reminded his audience that Allied has worked actively for the old age assistance amendment, had called the legislature into session twice to get a law, and then had worked to see that the act was administered fairly. Operation of act was delayed 90 days by one adverse vote in the senate, he said; and one of the candidates for governor voted against the bill.

Stinson praised the old age assistance act as being fair and liberal. He explained that payments are made on the basis of need, and that there are more persons on the Texas pension rolls than of any state except two or three where age assistance has been in operation for some time.

Stinson was accompanied here from Abilene by E. S. Cummings and C. R. Pennington. He was introduced by Jas. T. Brooks, leader of local Allied forces.
