

Soaking Rains Follow Sudden Mercury Drop

Weather, the unknown factor West Texas, suddenly closed summer show Monday night presented an advance preview of a coming season. Many of the residents grinding at the weather bureau and woke to find the weather comfortable. The U. S. temperature gauge at the city wells registered a maximum of 96 degrees for Monday and a minimum of 51 with the mercury advancing 1 degree at the time of reading, eight o'clock Tuesday morning. Yesterday's reading (for Tuesday) at 8 a. m. was 57 maximum and 57 minimum.

Soaking rains followed in the wake of the sudden mercury drop, to register .76-inch here yesterday afternoon. The rainfall was much greater in other sections of the county. Plain view reported three inches with the entire western section of the state receiving some moisture.

County agent J. R. Emmons yesterday declared that the total rainfall for 1940 to and including September 14, is 22.21 inches. The total rainfall last year was 14.02 inches and to September 14, was 11.71 inches. Average rainfall for the month of September is 3.2 inches. To date this year 2.46 inches have been recorded.

The sudden change in weather was declared by the Lubbock Avalanche to be the earliest real fall conditions on the Panhandle-Plains in more than 50 years.

Cooling north winds struck here about 10 p. m. Monday evening as the mercury continued to drop. The rainfall started about two p. m. Tuesday and continued most of the afternoon and night.

Warm weather is predicted to return late today, however, a new cold air mass is reported in Canada and weather bureau officials in Chicago say it may move southward.

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

The ease with which destiny dishes out favors is sufficient to cause an underground movement of frustration. For instance, the only thing I possess in common with Clark Gable is the fact that we were both born during the same year.

Solitude is the sweet ambrosia spread too thin between the thick slices of tasteless and pointless association. Human society advances by the silence of its retiring thinkers whose dreams are incubated in the warm, clean atmosphere of the soul's courage.

Perhaps the nostalgia for a past and pungent era had paralyzed my power of observation or it is probable that a reflection in the pool of memory caught rays from the morning sun to the best advantage. At least the two men examining the car engine looked like horse-traders inspecting the teeth of an open-mouthed animal.

Advancing out of the mist of a million years, the slaves have arrived to rest; the tired hands of man. They are the engines whose iron hearts beat a song of freedom. They are in the fields of land and seas, the trackless skies, the highways, the rails, the rivers; they are in the mountains, the mines and forests, wherever strength and labor will render service. They pour beauty in the molds of dream, wash the floors in tomorrow's splendid palaces as a weave has sinnets of ease for unborn generations.

Hate is the mistress of evil. She is jealous of love and compassion, for in their presence her love may perish or follow the wind that bears their delicate perfume.

Due to lack of housing facilities in Ralls and Crosbyton, however, Mrs. Doss and daughter Doris Ann, are remaining in Matador for the present, and Mrs. Doss is teaching the first grade here.

Insomnia Victims Advised to Sleep With Head Toward North For Relief

If you're having trouble sleeping these nights, it may be because you don't hit the hay with your head pointing north and your feet flat aimed to the south. People who know get lots of restful slumber by remembering that north-to-south system. If you think this is just a lot of gaudy talk, you should have a half-hour chat with Robert Collier, an author, philosopher and lecturer who claims to have helped thousands of Americans forget their jitters.

But Collier is by no means satisfied with that goal. He has an even bigger dream. He puts it this way: "Why can't humans live at least as long—comparatively—as animals do? In spite of what you may have been told, they up and knock off dead. Then you begin feeling sick.

er. Collier explains that man has been bred through hundreds of generations to hold his little head upright without dying, but Bob thinks you pay a price, just the same. He says: "For one thing it gives you a hot belly, sooner or later—for another it gives you joints like a turkey gobbler—even more important, it crowds all your vital organs."

Collier goes on to warn that, when those organs get crowded, they up and knock off dead. Then you begin feeling sick.

Because he claims to have the answer. Your trouble is what he calls "old man gravity"—the same thing that bounced an apple off Newton's head. He says gravity pulls on the solids and masses in our bodies until what he calls the "life giving forces" are congealed. When the process is complete, you're dead, pal.

The recommendation Collier makes may startle you. In a little book called "Renew Thy Youth Like the Eagle" he points out that the bird which symbolizes America flies with its head lower than its heart.

Bob says you may think that a fairly trivial point. If you do, he says all you have to do is find a rabbit and hold the bunny upright for two hours. At end of same, he says, bunny's real dead. And old man gravity is the kill.

your hair turns gray, you turn sallow of skin and walk around like a barefoot boy in a needle factory.

No need for that, at all. If you'll get in the habit of resting—several times a day with your head lower than your heart, you won't be holding said head in your hands so often, you'll have the skin they love to touch at 90 and enough spring in your step to be a pole vaulter when other people need help to get out of a chair. So says Collier.

As for that sleeping north-to-south, Collier says several eastern universities have conducted tests proving that in a healthy majority of cases, it most certainly does help even young students sleep better and feel better.

And Collier wants you to know that there's nothing very mystifying about that fact. He says: "It's quite simple. The magnetic forces of the earth run from the south to the north pole. When you take consideration of this fact in sleeping, these beneficial forces restore and help the flow of natural nerve energy in the body."

That isn't all of the things you should do to make sure you dance the rhumba on your 14th birthday. But it's a nice start and Collier will be back one of these days with more details.

In the meantime, keep your pillow to the north. And if you can't fly with your head down, like the eagle, you can at least pause a few times during the

What's phosphorus to a pig?

Just a half a pound of your 250-lb. pig is phosphorus. This seems a small amount. But without it, your pig would die. And there are other minerals just as vital to livestock. Some they need in quite large amounts—calcium and sodium as well as phosphorus. Others we call trace elements. These they need in very small amounts—such as cobalt, iron, copper and manganese.

But your animals do need these trace elements. The people at the agricultural colleges have proved that past all doubt. Some minerals are a "must" if you want to raise healthy, fast-gaining cattle. That goes for lambs and hogs, too. For example, these men find that grass and grains in Dade County, Florida, are short of copper and iron. Chatham County, Washington, needs iodine to check goats. They know that San Diego County, California, hasn't enough phosphorus. In Aroostook County, Maine, the scarce mineral is cobalt. Ranchers and farmers in these four corners of the country have this problem. Their feeds and forages are short of one or more vital minerals. Many other areas share the problem, including parts of the great Corn Belt.

But you ask, "How can I spot animals which suffer from mineral shortage?" It's not too easy. If the lack is serious, your stock may have rickets, "big neck," anemia or other ailments. But there are some early symptoms you can spot. These are: bone chewing, loss of appetite, slow gains, rough and scabby coats. Or, just a general unthrifty condition gives you the clue. If you start feeding a mineral which contains the essential trace elements, you may bring them around fast. But if this doesn't work, then you should consult your veterinarian, county agent or agricultural college.

The common mineral deficiencies in your area are known. By feeding mineral-balanced rations, you can correct these lacks. Or you can build up the mineral content of the soil. Either, or both, of these will help you grow healthier livestock, at a lower cost.

Supplemental Mineral for Wintering Range Ewes

by William H. Burkitt
Montana State College

Thirteen mineral elements are known to be necessary for normal functioning of an animal body. However, this does not mean that all 13 must be supplied in a mineral mixture. Many of them are present, under usual feeding conditions, in sufficient amounts for breeding ewes. Those lacking in Montana include sodium and chlorine (salt), iodine, phosphorus, and possibly cobalt.

Lack of sufficient iodine in the ration of pregnant ewes results in lambs being born with "big neck" (goiter). Thin wool in lambs may also result. If dead or weak lambs have shown "big neck" or thin wool at birth in past years, stabilized iodized salt should definitely be fed the ewes this winter.

Phosphorus deficiency may exist in wintering range ewes, particularly if there is little or no supplemental feeding. Abortions and weak lambs may result from deficient phosphorus. Pregnant ewes should have from 0.16% to 0.18% phosphorus in their feed. Many grass hays and mature range grasses contain less than 0.15% phosphorus, and some contain as low as 0.04% phosphorus. Bone meal, defluorinated rock phosphates, and monosodium phosphate are satisfactory sources of phosphorus. Palatability and consumption may be improved by mixing with salt.

Cobalt is believed to be needed by micro-organisms in the paunch. A lack results in loss of appetite, less feed consumption, and eventually starvation. A possible cobalt deficiency may be guarded against by mixing 1 ounce of cobalt salt with each 100 pounds of stock salt. Cobalt carbonate, chloride, or sulfate are all satisfactory. (Editor's note: The principles of nutrition discussed above apply to most kinds of livestock and in all parts of the country.)

Hello Again!

We are glad to be back with the Swift page of information and ideas. What did we do all summer? Well, among other things, we visited with farmers, ranchers, agricultural editors and educators. And we rounded up the facts we need to make these messages interesting and useful to you producers. As we said away back in 1944—"This is your page, and we welcome suggestions from our readers." We still do. Just write to me at Swift & Company, Chicago 9, Illinois. . . . And when you're in Chicago, drop in and see us.

LET'S SUPPORT OUR "MEAT TEAM"—You know, times change—but some folks don't change with the times. I'm thinking of the type of man who always thinks that someone is getting the best of him in business. He sells a load of steers. No matter what his return, he's not satisfied—the packer, the commission man, the retailer—somebody else always gets a "bigger slice." But, during this past summer, I talked to a lot of people about the livestock-meat industry and our mutual problems. And I found a refreshing, encouraging attitude—"Sure, we got problems. Who hasn't these days? But if producer, packer and retailer work together as the 'meat team,' we'll work things out. . . . It's just good business to have a decent regard for the contributions made by other members of your team. I hope you have followed the "Meat Team" advertisements of the American Meat Institute and will talk to your neighbors about them.

FACT CONFIRMED—Out in the West, whenever I passed a town with a local meat-packing plant, I thought, "This town, out here where there is lots of livestock, is well served by that local plant. But what about the distant cities filled with meat eaters and no nearby livestock production to speak of?" I know for a fact that meat has to travel an average of more than 1,000 miles to reach those consumers. The only way they can get meat is through the low-cost processing and marketing services provided by nationwide meat packers, like Swift & Company.

F. M. Simpson,
Agricultural Research Dept.

MONEY and MEAT—Is the fall month we run into an unusual situation in the livestock-meat packing industry. At that time we often see the year's high market for top finished beef cattle. And this top price usually is being paid when the average price for all cattle is moving in the opposite direction.

The high price is explained by the fact that during the fall we usually have the shortest supply of the year of well finished, long fed cattle. Brisk demand for this short supply naturally will force the price up. The lower average price results from the annual move to market of huge numbers of grass-fed cattle.

About 20 per cent of all the cattle and lambs slaughtered during a whole year must be handled in September and October. Meat from these animals being slaughtered any given day generally is on the dinner table in less than 14 days.

Folks aren't likely to have any more money to spend on food during the fall months than in February, when fewer meat animals are being marketed.

Since beef and lamb is largely a fresh meat business, there's a lot of meat to eat during the fall months. Consequently, since consumers have no more money to spend, meat prices have to be lowered. And that's just what happens, as it usually does with an increased amount of meat to be sold and no increase in the amount of money with which to buy it. These lower meat prices are most noticeable, of course, in the large consuming centers where surplus supplies always can be moved at a price.

Naturally, then, livestock prices follow meat prices. Producers should keep in mind that the prices they receive for their livestock are governed by what the packer can get for the meat and the by-products. This is perfectly demonstrated, as we have pointed out above, when the price for one kind of cattle, in short supply, is moving up at the same time that prices of other cattle, in heavy supply, are moving down.

FUMIGATING IS ADVOCATED TO PROTECT WHEAT

Farmers with wheat stored on their farms—whether under government loan or not—can do a lot to protect their crop returns by fumigating wheat when insects are present, Delmont Hays, chairman of the Motley county agricultural conservation committee said today.

"Even though farm stored wheat is under loan", Mr. Hays said, "the grower is responsible for the condition of his crop. Furthermore, a farmer who has a purchase agreement can get the government price support on his wheat only if his crop meets specified standards of grade and condition.

"Insect damage is greater than most farmers realize and makes the grain less acceptable to buyer and miller. Farmers who suspect insect infestations in the loan wheat stored on their farms should check with the county office and have their grain re-inspected. When ever infestations are found, the grain should be fumigated immediately."

According to department of agriculture recommendations, farm stored grain should be fumigated within 6 weeks after it is placed in the bin in central states and within 2 weeks after storage in the south. Fumigation following storage may not be necessary in northern states, but it would be good insurance against infestation. One fumigation is usually enough to prevent serious damage from insects for the rest of the year in northern and central states. In the south, however, where warm weather lasts much longer, more than one fumigation per season may be necessary.

Instructions on how to fumigate stored wheat are available at county agricultural conservation offices and from county extension agents. Instructions should be followed exactly to protect the health and safety of the person applying the fumigant.

LOOPHOLES in the Law

By WILL WILSON

District Attorney of Dallas County

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of short case histories all taken from court records, showing how legal loopholes often enable criminals to escape punishment in Texas. Will Wilson is chairman of a special steering committee of the State Bar, which is working for revision of the antiquated Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure in order to eliminate these loopholes.)

John Smith saw Joe Brown steal his watch. He had Brown arrested and the watch was found in his pocket. Smith told the officers that he had paid $49.50 for the watch, and misdemeanor charges of theft were filed against Brown.

When the case was tried in the county criminal court, Smith said he had made one slight mistake. He actually paid $50 for the watch instead of $49.50. Since it was new when stolen, it was considered worth the purchase price of $50. Smith was a convincing witness and, after all, he had actually witnessed the theft; so Brown was promptly convicted.

Upon appeal, the case was reversed. The higher court held that the theft of a watch valued at $50 constituted a felony, rather than a misdemeanor, theft. Thus the county criminal court lacked jurisdiction over the case. There was no question about Brown's guilt, but he was given a new trial simply because the watch was valued at fifty cents more than it was originally said to be worth.

Such delays in punishing criminals, made possible by legal technicalities, hamper justice and encourage crime. Proper revision of Texas' criminal statutes, as advocated by the State Bar, would eliminate such technicalities.

Goods News At Willetts

Tuesday Morn, Sept. 13. This cold nippy weather gives us a powerful urge to tell you about our supply of fall and winter merchandise. During the past few hot weeks you may have thought, at times that our store was in a jumbled condition, but we were trying to find room for the good warm duds we have been storing for you against this cold weather. Maybe we have been watching the ants and bees in our leisure moments.

While some of our good lines, due to their enormous popularity, have been a little slow in arriving, we congratulate ourselves every day that we have Betty Rose, Nelly Don, Mary Lee, Carol King, Texson and many other splendid value opportunities to offer you.

The little girls as well as little boys come in and eye the Texson jeans and denim jackets with longing in their eyes. Such a practical desire!

We have never seen anything any cuter than the rayon knit gowns for the young and very young Miss. These have puff sleeves and an elasticated bodice. We were so glad to have these so that certain young ladies could be made happy at their recent birthday parties.

Plaids, Plaids, Plaids. In ginghams, suitings, girl's blouses, boy's shirts and boy's and men's jackets. Plaids, look good in most anything you can find. We were about to forget the plaids and checks in women's dresses and suits.

For that "some Enchanted Evening" Carol King has furnished the much-wanted taffeta dresses all a-glimmer with silver and gold.

When you see the new Dan River Fabrics you will want to study the Simplicity and Designer patterns so that you can sew to your heart's content. The results will be so satisfactory. Dan River Fabrics are marked "Wrinkle Shed". We have some unusual patterns in this material. Good for blouses and shirts as well as dresses and skirts.

You will have to SEE the new fall sandals, ballerinas and two straps before you make a selection. We have a great number of different styles. Dress up your feet at little expense.

Sure You Haven't A "Blind Spot"?

As I was driving down Main Street last Saturday, another car swung out right in front of me. It turned out to be Buck Blake. He wasn't going fast. It was just that he had something else on his mind at that particular moment.

Buck's really one of the nicest fellows I've ever known. But, sometimes he gets to day-dreaming on the road. He sort of gets a "blind spot" to what's going on about him!

Now, lots of normally considerate folks have their "blind spots."

It could be anything from day-dreaming while driving a car to humming out loud at the movies.

From where I sit, it's mighty important to be on guard against your own "blind spots." The other fellow has a right to his "share of the road," too—whether it's having a taste for a temperate glass of sparkling beer or a desire to listen to some classical music if he wants to.
