MAURICE REILLY TELLS OF RECENT INTERESTING TRIP TO HOKKAIDO, JAPAN

General Armstrong, Commanding General of the 3rd Marine Amphibious Wing on Guam led a flight of four B-29's in another of the 6500-mile flights from Hokkaido in Japan, to Washington, D. C. Maurice Reilly, Lt. C. L. Maurice Reilly and Mrs. M. J. Reilly were one of the passengers to fly six B-29's with supplies to Guam, with supplies to be transferred to the four planes, for an interesting account of the trip to Hokkaido, and five days in the interior of the island, as told by Lt. Reilly in a letter to his wife, Mrs. Wade Berryman, who with their daughter, Suzanne, returned with his parents, following his trip to Hokkaido.

The destination was Chitose, about sixty miles from the southern part of the island. We left Guam at 10:30 p. m. and in three hours we were at Iwo Jima. There were two auxiliary gas tanks, and two bomb bays, and a capacity, and shortly after we were on our way to Japan again. We took a short flight to Chitose, and then our route up took us over the shores of Honshu, and we could see Fujiyama, about 12,000 feet, its top visible for 150 miles.

When we were met by a Jap driver, and our quarters. As we stepped from the plane we experienced quite a shock from the change in temperature. In fact it was winter—very cold, and the ever-present summer heat was gone. We were lucky to have our heavy clothing. Our quarters were in the old Naval Academy in Chitose, about two miles east of the city. A few occupation troops had already arrived and were in the huge barracks in good quarters.

On the first night we took our bath since we left Oahu. That a treat, and the bath added to our enjoyment. The room and right in the middle is a pool 5 x 10 ft., and 4 feet deep. The water is heated by blowing air from the bottom. The heating is done by dipping yourself in the part of the pool for that purpose. You are clean you get in and just soak to your content. What fun we had. The pool is always full of water.

Next day the General and his staff arrived. Our gas was refilled to their planes and had been finished. For five days we really had a chance to see in that vicinity. The Japs had been well on their way to getting ready for invasion, when peace was declared. All their installations were being moved under the caves gave us a lot of opportunities for satisfaction to search. The caves at Chitose contained things imaginable, and all in perfect condition. It has been burned completely by occupation troops. I saw a plane that rolled over the dikes and burned by

Indian Customs Reviewed in Texas Memorial Museum

AUSTIN—Customs of Indians in Texas before the coming of the white man are revealed in a series of model villages and scenes on the fourth floor of the Texas Memorial Museum on the campus of the University of Texas.

"Every student is interested in Indian lore," says Dr. E. H. Sellards, director, "and our younger visitors coming from all schools in Texas, find a wealth of information in these exhibits of Karankawas, Tonkawas, Asinai, Caddos and Comanche tribes."

A camp of the Karankawas, a tribe living along the Gulf Coast, contains small figurines of Indians of this group at work with their characteristics of tattooed faces, slender men and short, stocky women. Nomadic hunters and food gatherers who existed principally on a diet of small game and fish, these Indians lived in simple and crude shelters and were said to repel harmful insects by covering their bodies with grease.

The Tonkawa Indians, alleged cannibals, occupied the burnt rock mound area from Waco to the Rio Grand, and stretching to Abilene, including all of the Edwards Plateau. The model shows a small rock mound near a spring in Travis County. Another scene from this tribe's history shows a group who quarried flint from open mines known to exist in Clay, Coryell, Comanche, Potter and Taylor counties.

"Wattle" Houses An example of the "wattle work," a method of covering a house of grass with clay, is revealed in the exhibit of the Asinai Indians who lived in central East Texas.

The Caddo Indians of north-east Texas lived in permanent villages, and were the foremost agriculturists of Texas, raising corn, pumpkins, and tobacco. The exhibit shows indications of their class distinction with the upper class living in the wattle and daub houses and the common people dwelling in grass huts. Their pottery, made without a potter's wheel, ranks with the finest to be found in any region. The majority of whole vessels to be found in the Museum came from Caddo graves in East Texas.

Shelter Dwellers Wind and water-carved shelters and caves in the limestone canyons and draws of West Texas were used as dwellings of the scores. Precision instruments of all kinds, hundreds of sets of tools, new airplane engines, airplane parts of all kinds navigation equipment, beautiful stuff, electric motors, all kinds of flying clothing, machine guns small cannons and just everything imaginable, all being smashed and destroyed. I would like to have had a million things if I had had a ship to haul them in. The flying field had been a huge thing and everything was left except the planes which had been flown away before the war ended. (Continued Next Week)

EL MATADOR AT LAST—A PRINCIPAL!

Regular daters in high school are good-looking Hal Courtney and popular Mary Murphy. One of the cleverest and cutest co-eds in high school is little Ann Harp. After Christmas, Pete and Bessie will be living in a "little cabin built for two." Say, Gordon, what's wrong with your technique? Has Earlyne "flew 'de coop," or has Floydada become the favorite?

The Comanches, perhaps the most famous of all Indians who lived in the State, occupied the northern portion of the state which is now the Panhandle. The exhibit shows their chief source of food, the buffalo, with a buffalo hunt taking place on the painted background. This model shows scarers, stone mauls, a gun, shield, and bow and arrow, representing the Comanches after they came into contact with the Europeans as indicated by the presence of horses.

A complete burial, skeletons vessels, and ornaments which is part of an ancient Indian village in Lamar County near Paris, Texas, is contained in this portion of the Museum. Objects of shell, pottery and stone are present in the grave with the five skeletons. The most unusual of the group is the tripartite bottle with its human face decorations, which is believed to be the only complete specimen of its kind ever found in Texas. Visiting hours in the museum on week days are from 10 to 12 and 2 to 5 and on Sundays from 2 to 5 p. m.

wily chief Lone Wolf, Kiowa, who succeeded Chief Stumbling Bear, was converted through Rev. Butterfield's preaching in 1895. Comanche Chief Quanah Parker, who captured Rev. Butterfield's father when Rev. Butterfield was quite small, released his prisoner after six months time and many years later was a respectful listener to the expounding of "The French Book," as they termed the Bible.

But the great Apache chief Geronimo, who roamed over the plains of Texas, much of New Mexico and Arizona, as well as sections of Mexico, was never tamed. He once remarked that altho the United States government made him attend religious services after he was placed on the reservation in the territory, he nursed the desire to "keep Butterfield".

Portrayed in Book
 Mr. Butterfield's experiences in living and working among Oklahoma and Texas Indians when the country was wild and unsettled by white men, are portrayed in a recently-released book, titled "7 Years With the Wild Indians" written by Ben Moore of O'Donnell, historian and naturalist.

During his years with the Indians, Rev. Butterfield acquired one of the most valuable collections of Indian lore in this section, and several years ago he bequeathed the relics to Mr. Moore. The collection included a colorful war bonnet of a Kiowa chief, the famous bow Geronimo's wife made for her renegade warrior husband, the quiver his mother made for him of tanned horse-hide, a much-used peace pipe, beaded belt, tom-tom, an arrow that Chief Hunting Horse fitted with flint spike, a woman's handbag, miniature kinahs or cradles, and many other articles, all trimmed with the finest bead-work.

By Boyce House

Here is something that is written on Luke 14: 16-24 but it is worth thinking seriously about. It appeared in the Tulsa Herald and is entitled, "What Is Your Excuse?"

A certain church prepared a service of worship and invited whosoever would come. And it sent forth a letter, saying to all its friends and members "Come for the minister and choir and sexton have made all things ready." And the majority began with tiresome repetition to make excuses.

The first said, "All week I labor hard and unceasingly. On Sunday, I must needs rest in bed until noon. Or, if I should arise at a respectable hour, there are many odd jobs to be done about the house; and, as a last resort, there is the Sunday paper. I pray thee have me excused."

And another said, "I have bought me a car and on Sunday my family doth make a great clamor to be taken into the country. I am aware that on rainy Sundays when the car remaineth in the garage, I do not go to church either. But then I have some other excuse."

And another said, "I have children and, behold! By the time they are dressed and fed and dispatched to Sunday School I have reached the end of my tether."

And another said, "I have been invited to a party on Sunday. I have promised to go. I must needs go."

my Sunday morning enthusiasm; and to get myself ready is more than I can manage. I pray thee, have me excused."

And another said, "I would fain come, but alas! When I was young and tender, my unwise parents did compel me to go to the church once, twice, even thrice a Sunday. And I became 'fed up' on church and have not yet digested the contents of this 'forced feeding.' Accept, I pray thee, this my valid and intelligent excuse."

And another said, "The members of my family are peculiar; they do not come to church on Sundays, but on other days. And if I go to church, will the minister send someone to prepare our dinner? To sit down to dinner an hour late is impossible, for we are not of a mind to submit the call of the immortal souls to the needs of our immortal souls. To prepare the roast on Saturday is out of the question, for my cronies will accept no excuse for my absence from the weekly bridge party. I pray thee, have me excused."

And many other excuses of equal impressiveness did the people make. Yet did these same people raise a great hue and cry and make bitter lament when war and crime and corruption and all manner of evil did flourish greatly. And with one accord they began to make complaint, saying, "Why is not something done about these things?"

Oratory: Platitude, with gestures.

Once upon a time there was a merchant in a small town who turned in an order for some printing and said, "Just take your time; I'm in no hurry." And now you tell one.

Bill Herrington, merchant in Rising Star, says he knows how it feels to be defeated and elected in the same election. Quite a few years ago, he was running for county tax assessor and he stayed up late on election night but at last decided he was a loser by about 20 votes. So he went home, slept late and when he went back up town, he found that the trend had reversed itself and he had won by about 20 votes.

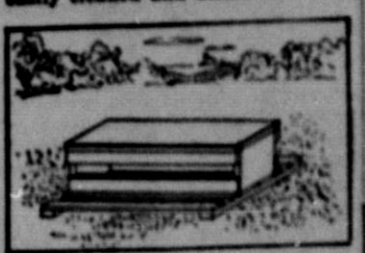

ably the reason for my forbearance is that the name of 'House' lends itself to such witticisms as "Cottage," "Shack" and "Cabin" or, "Is your first name Full or Rough?"

The technique of teaching drama is being emphasized in a course in radio drama now being taught at the University of Texas by John Neal Watson, new assistant professor of drama. Recently discharged from the service, Mr. Watson taught in Texas high schools, and at Texas Tech before entering the Army Air Force.

About ben Adhem said, "Write me down as one who loves his fellow man." Similarly, write me down as one who, when introduced to someone, never makes some attempt at humor concerning his name. (Example: if the name is Jones, "Oh, one of the Jones boys, eh?") Prob-

GOOD equipment is the secret of success in poultry raising. A weatherproof outdoor feeder, for example, will encourage proper feeding and prevent waste and contamination of feed. The feeder shown below is made largely of asbestos cement board, so it can be easily cleaned and disinfected.

A feeder of this type is strong and durable. It holds almost two bushels of mash. Like many other needed articles of poultry equipment, it can easily be made at home.

Partially shaded places are best for range feeders during the summer months. Pulletts will go without feed during the heat of the day unless it is easy to get and in a shaded area.

"Me... I'm staying in the Army!"

THERE ARE PLENTY OF REASONS... AND HERE THEY ARE!

- 1 "First, I keep my present grade. That means a lot.
- 2 "By reenlisting for 3 years I can pick my own branch of service in the Air, Ground or Service Forces, and can go to any overseas theater I wish.
- 3 "I get my mustering-out pay, even though I'm reenlisting. Also, I get $50 a year reenlistment bonus for each year I've been in the Army. My dependents receive family allowances for the full term of my enlistment. And I'll be eligible for GI Bill of Rights benefits when I get out of the Army.
- 4 "My food, clothes, quarters, medical and dental care are all supplied to me. And I can learn any of 200 skills or trades in the Army schools.
- 5 "All of us who are reenlisting are going to have from 30 to 90 days furlough at home with full pay and our travel paid both ways. And we'll have 30 days' furlough every year with pay.
- 6 "Any time after 20 years I can retire at half pay increasing year by year to three-quarters retirement pay after 30 years of service. And the time I've already served in active military or naval service counts toward my retirement time. Added up—reenlistment seems pretty sound to me!"

JANUARY 31, 1946

AN IMPORTANT DATE FOR MEN IN THE ARMY

MEN now in Army who reenlist before February 1 will be reenlisted in present grade. Men honorably discharged can reenlist within 30 days after discharge in grade held at time of discharge, provided they reenlist before February 1, 1946.
