PRICE SEVEN CENTS

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

...like torn, wind-blown clouds in an autumn sky, their hopeless anchors to the depths of crystal seas. Crisp twilight and the pale silver melancholy moon are light for an instant in the night but time is impatient and the little ship drifts away through the delta of oblivion.

...a man places a price on his soul, the Devil is apt to ask him to wrap

...concern with politics is alarming, except that I am sure to certain politicians the policies which they foster I am perfectly capable of my own criticizing. I hold after disdain a theory advocates that I need a because I am comfortable. Also, I refuse to subscribe to a plan that would change my life is simple but nourishing, its regularity has been established under a democratic administration, but I forgot to put two chickens in my pot, in fact, he forgot to provide me with the recipe.

...women are women's greatest a classic example is a party sandwich with which they antagonize each other, a tragic item which in some cases became confused with a composed of soured seafood and plastic shavings and between layers of military blankets. It is then neatly with sharp-edged thimbles picking shears until its very is lost. Even if palatable the size of a party sandwich is a permanent insult to a small appetite.

...to the cloud, the wings through a crimson content, but without knowledge of beauty suspended a dewdrop on the spider's web. Happiness may rest in the unattained satisfaction expressed in may little things.

...the spars burn on the shell night sky, like fireflies and the reeds of paradise are beyond the reach of the beyond the silence of a peaceful space. Yet, God has to each, as He has to the most insignificant soul, a responsibility and a destiny.

...whisper in the autumn their most cherished secret, like neighbors awed by the fear of forever parting.

...secreted by the shadow reveals the old wagon wheels and the slow cancer of rust destroy the rims. Weathered, the old hubs are as empty, which contain the seeds of another era. The long road there beneath the cotton seeds and the last journey's silt is in a distant sea. The cargo of freight has been covered. Many roads have faded with less dignity.

Labor Shortage Stymies Farmers

BIG FIRST BALE TURNED OUT BY NEW FLOMOT GIN

First bale turned out by Goodwin-Crowell gin's new Hardwick-Etter plant in Flomot, was a "whopper." Ralph Stapleton, prominent pioneer farmer brought 2,030 pounds of cotton to the plant. The bale weighed 610 pounds.

A premium price of 40c per pound was paid for the cotton. The 900 pounds of cottonseed valued at current prices, further augmented the first bale revenue.

The new gin, under the management of Odis Crowell, has processed 18 bales this season. "Pullers are arriving slowly," Mr. Crowell declared, "despite the three weeks advanced maturity of our crop."

Mr. Crowell, former football star and later college athletic coach, resigned his place with the University of Arizona (Tucson), and returned to his native Flomot early this year to acquire partnership with Maurice Goodwin in the gin operation.

The gin was completely re-equipped with new Hardwick-Etter installation and placed in operation in time for the 1952 crop.

Drought conditions this summer have greatly reduced expected production from the rich Flomot farming area, but Mr. Crowell said a bid is being made to Plains irrigation farmers. Since the irrigated cotton on the Plains indicates an abundant crop, gins bordering the area (in the dry farming section) expect an "overflow" patronage, as experienced in recent years.

Battling with old Matador spirit from the first kick-off to the last second of the colorful game, the home team restored fresh hope in the hearts of devoted fans who witnessed the contest.

Over 1,000 Pullers Needed To Relieve County's Situation

MORE cotton pullers are needed in every section of Motley county according to a survey completed yesterday by County Agent Rufus Emmons. Between 1,000 and 1,500 hands would be required to supply the need according to ginners in various communities.

Mr. Emmons said that cotton-pullers are coming in from East and Northeast Texas but that they are absorbed rapidly by the demand. It is probable that 1,500 bales of cotton are now open in Motley county fields, estimates revealed.

At noon yesterday a total of 290 bales had been ginned from the 1952 crop in the county's seven gin plants, as compared with 301 on the same date last year. Roaring Springs is leading with 142 bales, Matador 80 and Flomot 68. Last year on this date Matador had ginned 123 bales, Roaring Springs 119 and Flomot 59. Mr. Emmons said the county has between 70 and 75,000 acres in cotton this year.

Rain Capricious

Capricious rainfall over the past 25 years, averaging 21.70 inches, has greatly affected the rewards of cotton-growers, according to some figures Mr. Emmons has compiled.

For instance, in 1927, between January and October 1st, 10.59 inches of rain fell. By December 31 it had increased to a total of 11.65 inches. In 1931, between January and October 1st, only 9.05 inches had fallen. In the next 90 days 5.69 inches more were recorded.

The year 1948 was considered a "good year" with a total cotton production of 12,094 bales. The total rainfall was only 13.02 inches.

Matadors Clip Wings of Chillicothe Eagles, 6-6

SOARING Chillicothe Eagles, expected by "the medicine men" to fly away with the score, were grounded Friday night on their own lighted field, Matador Matadors, still anointing their bruises from the one-sided Spur conflict, clipped the wings of the ambitious Eagles to a 6-6 tie. Battling with old Matador spirit from the first kick-off to the last second of the colorful game, the home team restored fresh hope in the hearts of devoted fans who witnessed the contest.

The Matadors looked wonderful, the fans declared. They were close to pay-dirt often (once half-a-yard stood between them and a touchdown). The Eagles' bulwark was firm and failed to yield. Finally, however, the Matadors managed to achieve a touchdown early in the third quarter, but the extra point try was fruitless.

About that time fans began to watch the Eagle miracle man, named Morrison. Carrying the ball during five consecutive plays, he ran the entire length of the field to even the score.

Thrilling Final Quarter

The last quarter was a toss-up from start to finish. Big Morrison crashed down on the Matadors' weak defense. Backing up almost to the 50-yard line, the Matadors reorganized and held their ground. Morrison went down, recovered and went down again. The Matadors regained the ball, drove hard for precious pay-dirt, but trouble, as a 12th player wearing Matador colors, got possession of the ball.

(Next installment of this thrilling drama here Thursday night when the Matadors meet Floydada B-team on Burleson field.)

LUBBOCK, Sept. 22.—Spectacular aerial acts, blazing fireworks, a giant balloon parade, the area's first showing of national television shows and the finest exhibits are among the many free attractions at the Panhandle South Plains Fair which opens here Monday, Sept. 29.

The giant balloon parade, featuring all of the favorites of Wonderland, will wind through Lubbock streets beginning at 2:30 p.m. opening day. The mile-long cavalcade will also include 10 clowns, numerous bands and the Lubbock County Sheriff's posse.

Every afternoon and evening the midway will be jammed as the crowds thrill to the reckless performance of four free aerial acts high above the Fairgrounds. Big Fireworks Display

The largest fireworks display ever held at the Fair is on tap each evening when the skies will be filled with a brilliant, multi-colored show of more than 850 shells.

Entries already received from all parts of West Texas and New Mexico indicate a record-breaking livestock exhibit. Most of the area's best cattle and swine will be shown. Again this year the agricultural farm machinery, rabbit show, Boy Scouts and women's exhibits will attract thousands to the many and varied displays.

On the midway, the carnival rides, concessions and specialties will once more be presented by Bill Hanes, an expert showman who has built his show into one of the nation's best.
