PATRIOTIC PARADE ENTRY — Matthew Mount rode his little cycle, all decked out in the patriotic spirit, for the First Annual Roaring Springs 4th of July Parade, held last Wednesday. The event was only one of the day's festivities which included an early morning breakfast, a memorial service, patriotic sing-along, barbecue, homemade ice cream, and a beautiful fireworks display that night. Chamber discusses new business possibilities at recent meeting

by Marisue Potts

The Motley County Chamber of Commerce met in the County Library on June 26 for their regular monthly business meeting. Three guests, Doyle Rose from the Matador City Council, Alex Crowder from the Highway 70 Association, and Gerald Pipkin from the airport project, spoke to the members.

Chamber to participate in helping fund a feasibility study for a Nursing Home Care Center. The study is needed to determine if the area can support such a center and how many beds would be needed. The City could possibly finance the center with Ru-ral Development funds. The consultant for the study will arrive on July 11. The Chamber voted to apply $1250 toward the cost of the feasibility study, with the county, hospital board said. and city donating a like amount.

Roaring Springs Community Volunteer and Highway 70 spokesman,

Alex Crowder, met with the group to promote two causes: the all-day July 4 celebration in Roaring Springs and the Highway 70 meetings on the first Thursday of each month at the Community Center. Crowder said that people from the metro-plex are interested in "one-tankful" vacations and y 70 Association, and Gerald the towns along Texas 70 are the best kept secret. The main purpose of the Highway 70 group is to market the area, and with that in mind they plan to order brochures with each community contributing to the informa-tion therein. The July 4th celebration was set to begin with Fletcher's breakfast at 7 a.m., a lawn mower parade at 10:30, picnic or buffet lunch, a memorial service at 1 p.m., a patriotic sing-along at 3 p.m., a barbecue supper, ice cream, and fireworks for the evening. What Pipkin needs to pursue the idea of building a new airport is 20 pilots willing to commit to hangaring their planes there. Thangers, self-serve gasoline, and spin-off businesses are also possible. In addition, the national aircraft owners directory will list local attractions the aviators may list local attractions the aviators may visit while in town. The potential for hunters, landowners, or oil lease people is great. Slaton Economic Director addresses Highway 70 group

by Marisue Potts

"Sell your people to shop in town and encourage them to be more loyal to their community," was part of a message delivered by Clark Self, ex-ecutive director of the Slaton Economic Development Corp., to a group representing the towns along Texas Highway 70. "A dollar spent at the quick stop goes to pay the employee who spends it at the hardware store which uses it to pay their employee who spends it at the service station. That dollar will turn six times before it leaves town," he said.

A lost business is more than just a business that has moved out of town, he indicated. Potentially, it is not only the loss of four employees at $18,000 who live and spend money in the community, but also results in lost sales tax, devalued property, and lewer kids in the school system. According to the former banker, the hit port expansion and an aircraft muon the community could mount to seum, the Boll Weevil program, a $290,000.

On the other hand, when a new business comes to town, the whole community receives benefit when town stores cannot offer the wide selection of a discount chain, the home businesses can be customer friendly and attempt to order what the consumer wants.

as an area. What helps one town may help another," Self explained to representatives from Spur, Roaring Springs, Matador, Flomot and Turkey who gathered in the centrally located Roaring Springs Community Center on the evening of July 5.

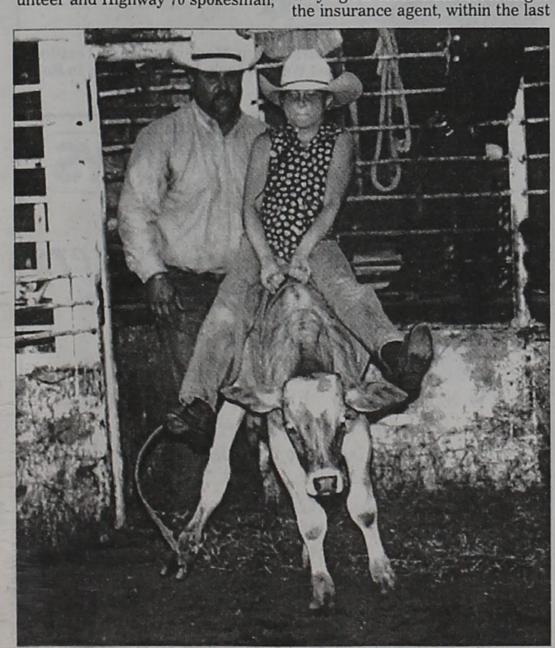

The Highway 70 travel corridor could serve as a "reliever" for the recently announced Ports to Plains transportation project along I-27. Self said, "Highway 70 is a unique area. It starts at Oak Creek Lake and goes up into Kansas. You folks have a special quality of life; you live in a beautiful area away from the confusion and chaos of the cities. Give folks a way to get to your town and give them a reason to stay...Tourism brings in new dollars and those who stop may decide to live here or find they can do business here more economi-

Descendants of Minnie Van and Clayton Bridge gathered Saturday, July 7, at the Roaring Springs Ranch Community Center for games, visiting, swimming, a delicious barbecue meal, and tours of Rita Groves' home in Roaring springs and of McDonald Camp on the Matador Ranch (both former homes of Mr. and Mrs. Bridge).

A special event of the day was a patriotic tribute by family members to the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Bridge who served in the military during World War II: Jim Bridge (Army - New Guinea and Philippine Islands); Dumont Bridge (Army Air Force - China, Burma, India), W.J. Bridge (Navy - patrolled coast of California), and Tommie Louise Bridge (Army - Nursing Corps). Also included in the tribute were the "homefront" contributions of Mr. and Mrs. Bridge's daughter Nellie Mills, and her husband Gordon Mills who has moved to Fort Worth specifically to help with the war effort. Nellie worked at a blood bank, and Gordon worked at a Consolidated Aircraft factory and helped to build thousands of the B-24 "Liberator" airplanes.

Of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Bridge, only two are still living: Dumont Bridge and W.J. Bridge, both of Afton, who were honored during the occasion, and who were encouraged to tell some of their stories of serving in the Air Corp and Navy, as younger generations listened attentively.

Attending the reunion in addition to Dumont and W.J. were Dumont's wife, Margaret Bridge; Gary and Jane Bridge of Afton; Becca Bridge of Texas A&M at College Station; Clayt Bridge of Lubbock; Robin and Beverly Darsey, Bert and Dumont of Matador; Tom and Nancy Hale of Dickens; Brian and Valerie Smithey of Rosenberg; Dillon Hale of Oklahoma large unattractive bird whose muted color somehow escaped God's usual beautiful palette. While flying by my picture window he saw one of his own kind whose looks and actions ignited in him an immense dislike. He could not accept this offensive creature, so rather than ignoring him or just let-ting him be who God created him to be, "Mr. Aggressive Controller" de-cided to conform him or drive him away for good. Again and again he methodically flew up into the air, attacked bird number 2 and returned to the ground to regain power to continue warfare. His body took a beating as it slammed into the glass with each assault. He panted with exhaustion but bird number 2 refused to change or to go away. What the poor dumb warrior had not discovered was that he was fighting his own reflection in the mirrored glass.

"Meeting Our Creator"

We are responsible before God. The Bible tells us that we will have a personal confrontation or reception with our Creator. The assurance for this is found in the Scriptures (Hebrews 9:27). The privilege of being made a "little lower than the angels" and the obligation of being human intersect in the question, "Is my relationship with my God based on Biblical Truth?'

There are among us, the rich and the poor, the young and the old, and the well educated and the unlearned. Some openly reject our Lord and the notion of responsible behavior before Him. There are others who simply procrastinate thinking that there is always time to get right with God. Then there are those who respond to the words of our Lord and are living responsible lives before Him. In our communities one can meet with all these.

The response to the Lord's invitation found in Matthew 12:28-30 is as varied as the different types of personalities which hear it. But one thing is common to us all. We will give an account for our lives before our God. That brings us to the Good News. God loves us and has presented salvation through His Son in such a magnificent, towering way that in Jesus we might stand before Him redeemed. Redeemed!
