President Proclaims November 11 As Veterans Day

President Reagan has proclaimed November 11 as Veterans Day and has called upon all Americans to recognize "the hardships and sacrifices demanded from and faithfully accepted by the millions of men and women who have defended our land in war and in peace."

This year's Veterans Day theme is "Veterans, You Are America," and the President urged Americans to let veterans know that their service is not forgotten, that their sacrifices are appreciated, and that America salutes its defenders.

salutes its defenders.

Veterans Administration chief Thomas K. Turnage, who serves as Chairman of the Veterans Day National Committee, said, "The foundations of America independence, liberty, and freedom were built and presented by those who served." Turnage will preside at the 34th annual Veterans Day observance at Arlington National Cemetery, which begins with the tradition of honoring the Unknown Soldier on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month with a Presidential Wreath Laying Ceremony.

Ceremony.

It was at that hour on November 11, 1918, that the world celebrated the end of World War I hostilities, and which later became known as "Armistice Day." In 1954, Congress renamed it Veterans Day to honor all those who have served in America armed forces.

In his proclamation, the President said, "Our observance of Veterans Day this year, the Bicentennial of the Constitution, reminds us in a special way of the service men and women who have made liberty's cause their own. Our fundamental charter lives on because through the years countless brave Americans have gladly willed to 'provide for the common defense.'
No one is more responsible for securing 'the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Prosterity' than our veterans."

Light Up America On Veterans Day

"The Veterans Administration wants all veterans to 'light up America on Veterans Day' by driving through the day on November 11 with their headlights on," said Stephen L. Lemons, Director, Waco VA Regional Office. "The 'light up America' program,

CHECK RECIPES FOR FOOD SAFETY

Recipes are designed so food preparation methods can be duplicated. Usually you'll want to follow instructions carefully so the dish will turn out as it's supposed to.

However, some recipe procedures - even though they are recommended in cookbooks violate food safety guidelines. Here are some items to check:

Don't marinate meat or poultry on the countertop. It usually takes a few hours, and should be done in a glass bowl in the refrigerator.

* Never partially cook meat or poultry. It's all right to remove meats from the oven temporarily foods to cook for awhile, then be removed from the oven, and then returned to the oven to cook some more. Removing partially cooked food gives bacteria a chance to grown, and it may not be killed in grown, and it may not be killed in the second cooking.

* Bacteria can grow in perishables that are cooked for a long period of time at a low temperature. The results may not offset the convenience.

* Don't overload crock pots, and make sure the food is thawed before it's put in the pot. Because they take so long to reach a high temperature, crock pots should not be used for reheating leftovers.

* When working with raw meat, poultry, or fish, take extra precautions. Wash cooking areas, utensils, and hands thoroughly with soap and water before and after handling those foods. When grilling, use different plates for raw and cooked food, unless the plate has been washed in between. Read any recipe carefully before following it. Cutting out a few unsafe steps will lessen the meats from the oven temporarily unsare steps will lessen me while basting or adding spices. But likelihood of bacteria growth and ignore recipes that call for these possible food poisoning.

Senior Citizens Report

Yesterday was our regular fourth Tuesday luncheon day and I didn't get to go. I am nursing a real head cold this week. I am sorry that I couldn't go to Ivy's birthdar celebration. I know it was nice, and several have told me that she really enjoyed it. And I know that she thanks everyone for coming and

We want to invite you visitors to come by with us each luncheon day which are the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month. I was pleased to hear that Lucille brough her brother, J.C. and Mrs. Murphy to the center for a day of entertainment. I am very sorry that I didn't get to meet them. Thirty-eight people signed our register, and we sent out two lunches to Bobby and Harvey Taylor.

We are having more people join us to play games in the afternoon following the luncheon, and we are so pleased to have everyone of you.

Friday evening was game evening at the center and we had a table of eighty-four and a table of forty-two. We extend an invitation to each Senior Citizen to come be us and enjoy the fellowship that we have.

Our mini bus will be going to Plainview each Monday, if no one has a Doctor's appointment in Lubbock.

Thursday is the day that was chosen for the bus to go to Plainview. Those who want to ride the bus to Plainview or Lubbock, call Ruth Baker or Mary Anne or Nora

Home Fires: Detection And Protection

Here's news that may light a fire under you to go out and buy a smoke detector: the availability of low cost smoke detectors for use in homes and apartments has resulted in a decline in the number of residential fire deaths since 1976.

As the use of smoke detectors has gone up, residential fire deaths have gone down.

According to alarm industry experts at Rollins Protective Services perts at Rollins Protective Services, most residences today contain more flammable materials, and have greater ignition hazards such as faulty electrical wiring and appliances. This is especially true for single family dwellings.

The good news is an increasing number of homes have fire detection equipment. Also, many places now require by law smoke detectors in residential structures. The payoff of having a smoke detector is not only that you will be safer at home—insurance premiums may home—insurance premiums may go down and the money and even lives lost to fire may be avoided.

Get Parents Into The Act Of Reading

Robert Frost once said the best way to get kids to read is to surround them with so many books they stumble over them. That's still not bad advice for parents who want to help their children become better, more eager readers. In its report, Becoming a Nation of Readers, the Commission on Reading advised parents to teach their young children informally about reading and writing and then support their "continued growth as readers."

These tips for parents can help you follow that advice, so pass these ideas along to parents of kids in your school system.

* Be a reader yourself. Children who grow up in home where books, magazines and newspapers are a part of family life, are likely to want to follow their parent's example and read for pleasure and information. Set aside quite time for the whole family to read, and then talk about what you've read. Remember to take books along on family vacations, too.

* Turn television to your advantage. Too much television is advantage. Too much television is the enemy of reading, but you can make it work for you by limiting the number of hours the set is turned on and have your child read the television schedule with you to select what shows to watch. Children enjoy reading about their favorite television personalities in magazines and newspapers, too.

Use an hour of TV as a reward for reading a story a day.

reading a story a day.

* Make sure your child has plenty of reading material of his own.
Children take pride in owning their own books, so wrap up a few own books, so wrap up a few appealing volumes on your child's next birthday. Books given as presents take on a special value for kids and make them seem very important. Throw in a set of inexpensive bookplates printed with your child's name. Books make good souvenirs of family outings and vacations as well. And don't forget magazines; kids love to get their own mail, and you can choose from a wide selection of specialinterest magazines for children of different ages.

* Read to, and with, your child.
Bedtime stories are a ritual in most households with preschoolers, but don't stop reading aloud to your child just because he's old enough to read for himself. Older children still like to be read to, especially when the books are interesting but a little too hard for the kids to read comfortably themselves. Try comfortably themselves. Try reading with your child, too, by taking turns reading aloud.

* Use the library. If your child is old enough to sign his own name, he's old enough to have a library card. Public libraries usually have special services for youngsters, including story hours and lists of books that are appropriate for different age groups. The children's librarian can help your child learn librarian can help your child learn to use the card (or computer) catalog to locate books, reinforcing lessons in library use he's learned at school. Regular borrowing from the library teaches your child about the responsible care of books - and it is a chance to expand your own reading while you are at it.

* Play games that involve reading and spelling. Word games like Scrabble, Boggle, and Spill and Spell are naturals, but so are most board games that involve following written directions. Make up your own games, too, such as scavenger huntes that entail written messages.

Recognize that reading and writing are interrelated. Many teachers have children compose their own stories as a way of introducing them to reading, and you can do the same at home. Other good writing activities include drawing up itineraries for family trips, making shopping lists, writing letters to friends and relatives, and keeping a diary.

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

ON FAMILY WORSHIP

A study once disclosed that if both Mom and Dad attend church regularly, 72 percent of their children remain faithful.

It also showed that: only Dad attends regularly, 55 percent remain

If only Mom attends regularly, 15 percent remain neither attend regularly, only 6 percent remain

The statistics speak for themselves....The example of parents and adults is more important than all the efforts of church and Sunday School. If we believe that religion is important for our children, then we must demonstrate Sunday morning can be one of the beautiful experiences of any growing child.

Sen. Farabee Commends Clinics In Spur, Matador, Floydada

AUSTIN -- Senator Ray Farabee received the annual Public Policy Award given by the Texas Association of Community Health Centers this week in recognition of his work to improve the availablity of health care for all Texans.

"Health care availability is major issue for all of us," so Farabee, "and I am pleased to be recognized by the Texas Association of Community Health Centers."

In his acceptance speech, Farabee highlighed the four major issues in health care he anticipates the state will be facing during the next biennium:

* Medical liability and its serious impact on the cost of health care in smaller communities.

* Medical ethics issues and his recent work in making organ donation more available; The problem of workers" compensation; and

* The allocation of health care resources for older citizens and children who are uninsured.

Farabee expressed special concern over the growing number of doctors who cannot deliver babies in rural areas because of the high cost of malpractice insurance premiums. He also noted the need for the state to explore solutions to the AIDS crisis before it bankrupts our health care financing system.

Farabee commended the excellent work being done by Community Health Centers in Matador, Spur and Floydada in the 30th Senatorial District.

the interim study he will co-chair during this biennium will produce workable solutions. This committee, which had its first meeting last week, will carry out a comprehensive study of worker's compensation in the state.

"Public confidence in the workers' compensation system is workers compensation system is steadily eroding as premiums continue to escalate," said Farabee. "Our workers' compensation system costs over $2.5 billion per year and affects well over 40,000 Texas workers every year."

Q. - My husband died of a service connected disability and I have filed a claim for Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC). My husband was a military retiree and was contributing to a monthly annuity for me under the Survivors Benefit Program (SBP). May I receive DIC from the VA and SBP from the military?

A. - No. You may not receive both benefits. For every dollar of DIC you receive, you must waive a dollar of your SBP benefit. Should your monthly SBP benefit exceed the monthly DIC benefit, you will be entitled to receive the difference.

The premiums paid into the SBP fund during your husband's lifetime which represent that portion of the SBP benefit which you must waive in order to receive the DIC benefit will be refunded to you in a lump sum.

You are not required to elect the DIC benefit. You may elect to receive the total SBP benefit;

however, SBP benefits are fully taxable whereas DIC benefits are exempt from taxation.

HEAD LICE SIMPLE TO CONTROL

To parents, it is alarming when a child brings home from the teacher news that the child may have head lice. According to the Texas Department of Health (TDH), though, head lice can be a problem among any gathering, especially of children at school or day care. Teachers are wise to check all their pupils periodically to control the Bobby L. Davis, director of the DH General Sanitation Division, said, "People misunderstand what head lice are, who is likely to have them, and what to do to control

"A lot of people seem to confuse common head lice with body lice, which are rare in the United States, and pubic lice, ("crabs") which usually only move from one host to another during sex or in shared

Davis explained that many people wrongly believe that only dirty, neglectful people may have head lice. For that reason, parents often are outraged or ashamed when told their child may carry the pests. The truth is that anyone can have head lice. Pediculus humanus capitis, the Latin name for the parasite, is a gray insect, about an eighth of an inch long, that lives

CHECK CHIMNEY BEFORE FIRING IT UP

One of the most important routine home inspections is also one that many Texas homeowners neglect - the chimney. Wood-heating accounts for more wood-neating accounts for more fires, more fire deaths and greater property damage than any other kind of heating fuel, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Most wood heating fires involve ignition of creosote inside the chimney. Creosote is a black tar-like substance that builds up inside the chimney in normal use. While most of these fires are contained within the chimney and cause no damage to the house, there is still much cause for concern since a potential hazard exists.

With the heating season approaching, we urge homeowners who have a wood-burning stove or fireplace to check the chimney for any damage that may have occurred in the past heating season. A local "chimney sweep" or dealer can help with this effort. Have any damage repaired. damage repaired.

Most common causes of home fires involving chimneys are the following:

-- Improper chimney installation too close to wood framing.
-- Installation of thermal insulation too close to the chimney.

-- Improperly passing the stovepipe or chimney through a ceiling or wall, causing ignition of wood framing.
-- Structural damage to the chimney caused by the ignition of creasate creosote

Structural damage to metal wood framing to excessive temperatures or can leak potentially toxic gases into the home's interior. Such damage can result from corrosion or rusting of result from corrosion or rusting of the inner liners of metal chimneys or from buckling, separation of the seam or collapsing of the inner liner of metal chimneys. Structural damage also occurs in masonry chimneys. This situation is often associated with chimney deterioration or improper installation. The tile inner liner and the surrounding brick or block structure may crack and separate, perhaps as a result of the ignition of creosote buildup in the chimney.

Tile liners should be installed in old chimneys that do not have a liner. Also, seal a clay liner with refractory cement.

A chimney should be checked frequently for creosote deposits, soot build-up and physical damage. This involves only a simple visual examination, but it should be done twice a month during heavy use. If you spot a problem or have had a chimney fire, contact a qualified chimney repairman or "chimney sweep" for a complete safety inspection.

Certain products are now available which show promise for reducing creosote production and harmful pollutant emissions. Also, advanced wood stove designs appear to provide more complete fuel combustion. Catalytic combustors give similar results and are available with new stoves or as separate components which can be installed between the flue gas exit and the chimney connector of existing stoves.

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Now Is The Time To Get Flu Vaccine

High-risk persons as well as those persons who work in chronic care facilities and medical care setting should receive their flu shots in November for maximum protection during the flu season.

The recommendation from CDC's Immunization Practices Advisory Committee for the 1987-1988 influenza season takes into account the fact that high levels of influenza the fact that high levels of influenza in the mainland U.S. do not occur before late December. Flu vaccine begins to provide protection after one or two weeks.

Those persons considered at greatest risk of complications from influenza infection include adults and children with chronic disorders of the heart and lungs severe enough to require regular medical care. Residents of nursing homes and other chronic-care facilities are also at high risk.

Groups at moderate risk of influenza complications include individuals 65 years of age who are otherwise healthy, adults and children with chronic diseases (including diabetes mellitus), kidney disease, anemia, immunodisease, anemia, immuno-suppression, or asthma, and children requiring long-term aspirin therapy.

To further protect those at high risk, health care providers and family care givers of these people should receive the vaccine also.

Three types of influenza virus are recognized: A, B, and C. Type A has been associated with widespread epidemic and pandemics; type B has usually been associated with localized epidemics; type C thus far has appeared only in sporadic cases and in minor localized outbreaks. Influenza A viruses are classified into subtypes on the basis of two antigens: hemagglutinin (H) and neuraminidase (N). Three subtypes of hemagglutinin (H1, H2, H3) and two subtypes of neuraminidase (N1, N2) have neuraminidase (N1, N2) have caused widespread human disease. Strains of influenza A are described by geographic origin, strain number and year of isolation as well as by an index identifying the character of the (H) and (N) antigens, e.g. A/Japan/305/51/ (H2N2). Immunity to these antigens, especially hemagalutinin reduces especially hemagglutinin, reduces the likelihood of infection and the severity of the disease if infection does occur. Although influenza B viruses have shown more antigenic stability than inflenza A viruses, antigenic variation does occur. Therefore, major epidemics of respiratory disease caused by new variants of influenza continue to occur, and the antigenic characteristics of current strains provide the basis for selecting the virus strains included in each year's

Although the current influenza vaccine often contains one or more antigens used in previous years, immunity declines in the year following vaccination. Therefore, a history of vaccination in any previous year with a vaccine containing one or more antigens included in the current vaccine does not preclude the need to be revaccinated for the 1987-1988 influenza season

The Texas Department of Health, located at City Hall in Roaring Springs, Texas, is offering the vaccination from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Wednesday, November 18 and in Matador in the Motley County Courthouse basement from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Wednesday, November 25th.

If you have any questions, please call (806) 271-3450.

What may be the final application of insecticide in the 1987 boll weevil control program got off to a meager start October 22, according to Ed Dean, Field Service Director for Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., the grower organization conducting the program.

This will be the fourth application of low volume malathion since this year's program began September 21, Dean says, "and if we have a killing freeze about the first of November as is normal, it will wind up this year's operation." But if warm weather continues to preserve the weevil's food supply much beyond that date, he adds, "we may need to keep going to prevent that last batch of weevils from going into hibernation."

The first three applications, beginning September 21, October 1 and October 12, covered about 284,000 aggregate acres. The fourth is expected to be the largest by far, involving an estimated 130,000 acres, bringing the total for the year to something over 400,000, Dean thinks. He cautions, however, that this figure could grow if windy or other adverse weather delays completion of the final application, allowing weevils to spread into fields where weevil numbers currently don't justify spraying.

Dean uses the word "meager" to describe the opening day's start of the fourth application "because it almost didn't happen." Less than three hours after the first of 11 planes took off at first light, gusty winds brought the operation to a halt. Only acrès were treated, compared to a full day's work of around 40,000

In pre-season and during the early weeks of this year's program, Dean and program entomologists were guessing it might be necessary to spray 500,000 to 600,000 acres instead of the 400,000 to 450,000 now anticipated. Trap catches that were double and even triple those recorded in previous years apparently were misinterpreted, they say. Traps baited with pheromone (sex attractant) are used every year in the control zone along the eastern High Plains to gauge weevil numbers for program planning purposes.

But treatment decisions ar not based on trapping information, Dean emphasizes. Instead, fieldby-field manual surveys are used to determine which have enough weevils to justify treatment.

Unlike previous years, weevils ound by survey teams in many fields this year failed to confirm the high numbers indicated by peripheral traps. Officials aren't sure why, but one theory is that the improved traps now in use snare a higher percentage of total populations than before.

"We knew we were using more efficient traps," Dean says, "but it may be we underestimated just how much more efficient they were."

Remember When

By Annie B. Cloyd Box 22 Flomot, TX 79234

besessessed Hello again, it's just me here in Flomot, thinking about the old days when there were lots of folks that made "Home Brew". Seems like there was always somebody making some, somewhere, and trying to hide the "Still". This got orse after Prohibition came pass I have heard stories about what they called "Chock" beer. I was told that it was sort of milky looking and the fellow that told me about it being made around there said, "I don't know if it makes you drunk but do know that it makes you very Delphia Jones told me another story about back when they were kids and he and some more boys got together and tried to make some home brew. He said that they didn't have much to do so they decided to make a little 'brew'. They knew that Mr. Crowell had some big crocks in the warehouse, so with the help of a fellow, way ou in the country, telling them in detail just how to make it, and with Otis having a key to his Dad's warehouse, they got started. They had to plan it so the Brew would "come off" on Sunday because that's when Mr. and Mrs. Crowell took Jr. and Bonnie somewhere in the afternoon. Otis let them in and they carried water in at night. Now one boy got the malt and another got the sugar and Delphia said he got the yeast. They then put it all together and let it 'work'. They didn't remember that they were supposed to put it on in the morning so things would work right.

AT MUVEMBER J. 130/. PAGE II

He said they worked and worked to wash bottles to put the 'brew' in after it was ready. Seems they washed them in the creek so you know they were real clean. They slipped the bottles in at night so slipped the bottles in at night so they would be ready to fill come Sunday afternoon when the Crowells left. They put it in the bottles and little did they know that it was still 'working' as it was still 'green'. They moved it all to an old house and left it at the west end and left of the dear till the west that the test of the still the second to the second the second to the second th locked the door till they could get it the next day.

After school the next day, one of the Gates boys and a Martin boy ran to town and got Mr. Gates' old Model T truck and drove it to the old house and backed it up to the south window and they loaded their 'brew' on the truck. They knew they had to get the stuff out of town so they took off down around the Post Office and turned north and tried to get out in a hurry. In their rush and the bottles getting 'shook up' they started to pop about the time they got to Robert I. Thomas' Station. He of to Robert'. Homas Station. He said it was like a machine gun going off. They kept going north for a good while before getting rid of the 'brew' along with all the glass from popped bottles. They washed and washed the truck but the smell just wouldn't come off.

Delphia said he still remembers Delphia said he still remembers how unhappy Mr. Gates was because his truck smelled so much like a brewery. I bet that ended their try at the 'brew' making, don't Thanks again to Delphia for another good story that happened way back "when". We'll get together again and "Remember When" real soon.

Some of the stipulations for the point system are that 51% or more people to benefit from this project should have a low to moderate income, which Roaring Springs has 720% and least the support of the standard to 70% and also the number of people to benefit according to the 1985 survey is approximately 258

Jamie Johnson of Ober J. Engineering was on hand to explain the purposed water system as he showed a map of Roaring Springs and the new water main layout. This includes new 6" and 4" pipe and new fire hydrants to replace the existing mains and hydrants. Johnson explained that the cost
