100,000 Chinese Move Upon Mukden

The movement led by E. F. Robbins to repair Scenic Drive and thus further relieve unemployment conditions deserves the support of the citizenship.

Additional donations were reported Thursday from the Settles Hotel, the Crawford Hotel and the Crescent Drug store.

It is hoped that this work can be started Monday morning. Mr. Robbins says that if enough cash is not donated to hire men to repair the road he is going to get a gang of men to donate labor and go out there and do the work.

That "Weatherford cut-off" scrap is going to pop down at Austin next month, it appears.

It looks tough for a town like Mineral Wells to be "by-passed," as it were, by a road that naturally will cause most of the transcontinental traffic to pass it by.

If towns do not look out for themselves in road matters their interests won't be protected. That is why Mineral Wells is opposing the cut-off and also why Ranger, Eastland, Cisco and other towns are fighting for it.

Whether such a road should be built ought to be decided by figuring how many people it would benefit, compared with the number that might be injured thereby. On this basis there is no real argument against building the cut-off.

And anyway, the highway commission long ago decided to build it and all this scrap, we predict, is of no avail. It will be built.

A guy handed us this yesterday and asked that we print it. What got him that way is unknown. But since no names are called reckon its safe to comply with his request:

BELIEVE IT OR NOT
A problem has arisen in our city, causing a great deal of speculation from both bystanders and scientists—the question is: Do mice or rats have hydrophobia? Would a rat's bite cause the unfortunate one bitten to be addicted to fits? There is a certain young man that "is not at ease, and I fear will not be, until some one has solved this problem. He is very thankful however, that the bite was inflicted upon his hands, instead of on his feet, thereby leaving full control over his feet in dancing. Then this young fellow is more than willing to suffer many more such bites, if they leave no permanent injury, for the husband of a certain member of the fairer sex, arrived home a little earlier than was expected, and was greeted at the front door by a frantic young man who in his excitement threw the biting rat in "friend husband's" face. And this young man is thankful that the husband did not "bump him off."

Big Spring Tennis Players To Abilene

Big Spring high netters will make a bid for fame upon the Abilene courts Saturday and Sunday, according to Coach Wayne Matthews, who announced that the Steers racqueters would meet both Abilene high school and Simmons university Saturday and might possibly face either Sweetwater high school or Abilene Christian college in a third dual meet this weekend.

Matthews plans to take only three men on the road trip, with Kent Bishop due to see plenty of action as ranking singles player and a member of the No. 1 doubles team. Joe Davis will be paired with Bishop in the doubles, while either Harry Jordan or John Stripling will play as No. 2 singles in the two out of three meets. Davis, who fractured his leg last fall, is expected to be in shape for intercollegiate meets later in the spring, but will be confined to doubles play for at least a month.

The Big Spring-Abilene high contest will be watched with interest, since netters of both schools are ranked as favorites in the district intercollegiate tournament to be held early in April. Willard Foster, last year a co-holder of the district doubles title, is captain of the Abilene club this year.

Mrs. John Clarke who has been in the hospital and narrowly escaped pneumonia has returned to her home on Runnels street and can now receive visitors.

Dr. White formerly taught foreign missions in southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and has traveled in a dozen countries. The day's program was in charge of Dr. P. W. Malone and Dr. Charles K. Bivings, who presided.

John Cohen, who is assisting in the Baptist revival, favored the club with two solos. Mrs. Bruce Frazier played the accompaniments. Mr. Cohen possesses a wonderful voice.

Rev. R. E. Day, Y. C. Gray and Mrs. Ira Thurman and small daughter were guests of the day.

Dr. White termed the Japanese "the world's greatest imitators," that French bankers had "outsmarted" those of this country in recent years, and that Mussolini, regardless of individual opinion of his doctrines and methods, saved Italian democracy from disintegration.

Capitalism Is Given Defense

President Of Cattle Raisers' Association Speak At El Paso

EL PASO (UP)—If capitalism is on trial for causing the present appalling crisis then capitalism should be declared innocent. J. M. West, Houston, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association told delegates in his annual address at the annual convention here Wednesday.

President West vigorously defended capital and denounced Communism.

"What other system than capitalism would have better survived the destruction brought about by the World War, suspicion, class hate, bitterness, pessimism and a rapidly changing and complicating civilization?" he said.

"Most of the industries of the United States are owned by men and women stockholders. . . . Any blow aimed at the so-called capitalist system usually falls on the thrifty."

West said that a radical reduction in the cost of Government is needed, and demanded an immediate retirement of the Government from commercial activities in competition with its citizens.

West said the "bottom has fallen out of the livestock and agricultural industries, as well as all other businesses, and mankind stands perplexed and bewildered."

"Taxes are indeed heavy," he continued, "but we are taxed twice as much by our extravagance and careless business methods—or, I might say, our folly."

Harold Robb, In Letter, Comments On Play, 'Freaks'

When one of the south's most successful motion picture exhibitors comes right out and declares that "I do not know how to advertise this picture" there must be something very unusual about the picture.

That is what Harold B. Robb of the R & R Theaters writes in a letter to the editor of The Herald concerning "Freaks" to be shown Friday and Saturday at the R & R Ritz theater here.

"In a few days we will play in our theater in your city what we consider the most interesting, weird, fantastic and unexplainable picture ever made." Mr. Robb writes in a personal letter to the editor.

"The cast of the picture consists of a side show and its freak attractions, each of which has very nearly as much part in it as the other.

"Inasmuch as we are personally endorsing this picture and as we can not at the present time conceive of any manner by which we may adequately describe the picture to the citizens of Big Spring we wish you would extend to our manager there all of the editorial and advertising advice possible," Mr. Robb's letter reads.

The editor came to the conclusion that the people of Big Spring, who know the Robbs so well, would gain a greater conception of the true importance and strangeness of the picture by giving them these words of Harold Robb than by any other manner.

This is the first time in four years Robb and Rowley have placed their unqualified personal endorsement behind an attraction.

Dempsey, Grammarian

ALTHOUGH he lost the decision in his meeting at fistfuffs with one King Levinsky, William Harrison Dempsey won an important lesson in another field at Chicago last Thursday evening.

The former heavyweight champion was honor guest at a banquet attended by many leaders in business and the professions. Various speakers wound up their talks with expression of the hope, "may the best man win." When it came Dempsey's turn to speak, he concluded his remarks with a little lesson in grammar—"may the better man win."

Gene Tunney, Dempsey's conqueror, has a sort of monopoly on high-brow pretensions now. Tunney insists on writing his own autobiography, without the assistance of a ghost. Anyone who has read his life story now current in a popular magazine will agree readily that he wrote it himself.

But the point of the Chicago incident, if any, is that Dempsey is great as a spectacle, but through as a prizefighter. His showing against Levinsky was rather poor. As an exhibition of boxing it was pretty tame. But as a spectacle it was good. The crowd was a record-breaker for an indoor event of the kind, and the receipts were $75,000. The question is, was the crowd paying to see a scientific boxing match, or a real fight? The answer is that they were paying to see Jack Dempsey—and even if Dempsey lost the crowd got its money's worth.

The truth is that Dempsey at his poorest is still a better show than any of the existing heavyweight contenders in the gentle art of boxing. His comeback effort is probably hopeless, but he will give the spectators their money's worth every time.

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

BOY CRAZY
 by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: Elopement with Dickey Dale tops Hope Ross's career of popularity in Westchester. The marriage is quickly annulled by her father, since Hope and Dickey are minors. Lies told Hope by her family made her believe Dickey has not tried to see her, since she was kept prisoner by her father.

Chapter 21
ANOTHER HARMOUTH FROM
 Hope found, with a touch of bitter disdain, that her wealth and her family position placed her far above open criticism or unkind treatment for her "wildness."

As a matter of fact, her reputation in town seemed only heightened by her sensational romance. Nobody knew the entire story, and nobody dared to ask details. Elaborately they made their own explanations. And with magnificent gestures, they bent themselves to show Hope and her folks how much they understood, admired and sympathized.

All of which thoroughly irritated and bored Hope.

In spite of her continual activities, Hope was increasingly lonely, unable to readjust herself, unable, no matter how hard she tried, to forget Dickey. Even hating him, she remembered. If only she could forget! And somehow, the more she remembered, the less she hated him. The more she brooded over him, wondering how she had ever so totally misjudged him. Most of all, was she unable to find anyone to take his place.

Only Rusty Crandall remained of the steady old line. In all her broad little world, only Rusty Crandall and Judy Hunt seemed truly to care. Without Judy, and without Rusty, who was wise enough (or perhaps disillusioned enough) no longer to speak to her of love, Hope could never have seen the long Dickeyless year through.

Such a year as it was! Angel, cornered by family affairs, was forced to leave school and, hardest of all, quit Hope's crowd as a regular member. Head high, and proud, Angel commuted to a New York secretarial school—only to become transported with joy when Rusty got her a position in his firm as a stenographer (no, not secretary) to two or three of the lesser lights in his father's main office.

an adventure, Betty wrote to Twosome, and Twosome, after considerable bribing and counter-bribing, dug up a "blind date" for Hope for the Prom. A boy, wrote Twosome, named Tuck Hall, who was a sophomore like himself.

After accepting the invitation from her blind date, Hope sought Judy's confidence. There are friends in whom you can confide and feel safe with your secrets. There are other friends who do not even demand confidence, Judy refused to listen to why Hope wished her to lie. Judy waved aside explanations.

"You're old enough to know what you're doing, Hope. I'll help you to be a lady or a chump. Either way, it doesn't matter. Poison or poison. And if you're being a chump, I'd just as well not know about it. What I don't know I can't talk about."

Gratefully Hope explained she was going somewhere for a weekend. And her family mustn't dream of her whereabouts or question her absence.

Historic Civil War Ride

Mrs. Flaniken Recalls Desperate Ride For Medical Help When She Was Girl of Nineteen

Mrs. J. C. Flaniken, mother of the late A. W. Flaniken, formerly superintendent of the Big Spring public schools, and of J. R. Flaniken, of Lamesa, is now making her home in this city. She is living with Mrs. Ida Mann on South Main.

Mrs. Flaniken is in her 89th year and her memory is still active. She recalls vividly one of the experiences of the Civil War, in which she made a ride for help that deserves to rank along side that of other famous rides. She was only a girl of 19 and the ride occurred shortly after a battle between the Union and Confederate soldiers; it was a trying and exhausting experience and for this reason belongs to those annals of heroism and courage that will go on being written so long as survivors of that memorable conflict live to tell their tales.

Farmington, Tenn., was Mrs. Flaniken's home. She was then unmarried; her maiden name was Martha Ann Ford and she was a cousin of Gen. Bedford Forrest. Farmington was near the border that separated the two sides in the conflict. Therefore its citizens were greatly divided in their sympathies; the Unionists had the better of it, since the town was in Unionist territory.

Only people who lived through those days, says Mrs. Flaniken, can imagine the daily terror under which the Confederate sympathizers lived. They dared make no move that would reveal them to the Unionists. When she procured letters for many of her acquaintances in town, written by the sons at war, Mrs. Flaniken did not even dare go to the homes of those she was not accustomed to visit daily. The slightest suspicion that she was carrying messages of any sort would have endangered her life.

Famous Ride.
 On this particular occasion, when she took her famous ride, Gen. Wheeler had crossed Muscle Shoals from the southern territory and with his men, was almost trapped in Farmington by an army of 1400 Yankees. After the battle, the captain and his surgeon brought an Alabama soldier, Pot. Ledbetter (Mrs. Flaniken has never heard anything more of him to this very day) into the Forrest home and asked the women to nurse him. A bullet had pierced his chest, entering from the back and going thru one lung.

The girls of the family took turns about sitting up with him through the night. After two days, when cold cloths compresses did not seem to make him better and they were unable to get a doctor's aid, it was determined that someone should ride to Chapel Hill, ten miles away to summon the help of the Forrest family physician.

There were no men in the family; so it fell to this nineteen year old girl to make the trip.

She had to pass near the battle field, where the dead bodies of the soldiers were still unburied (the whole town being occupied with nursing the wounded).

She rode her pet horse, but when she came to Duck River, the water at the ford crossing was so high that the horse refused to enter it and she was not strong enough to make him. The bridge was burned so the river must be crossed at the ford.

Crossing The Mill Dam
 In desperation she went to the miller who lived near the ford. It was sundown and she called to him and told him that if he would get her horse across, she would walk over on the mill dam. The mill dam was safe enough except for one spot, where a narrow plank had to be crossed.

The miller, seeing that she was worn almost to exhaustion after two nights of vigils beside the sick man's bed and no rest in the day, guided her over this plank. Then he forced the horse into the strong stream, and rode him across.

Once over, there were only two miles to cover until Chapel Hill was reached. The doctor insisted on her spending a night at his home resting. Together they set out the next morning and his administrations saved the soldier's life, although the family nursed him for more than a month.

This story, which Mrs. Flaniken says, she had almost forgotten, was sent into the Loubourg, Tenn., Gazette, by an ex-soldier, living in Blissfield, Mich., for the pioneer stories in this paper.

The courage of the nineteen-year-old girl was one, he said, that all soldiers remembered with great pride.

Sunny skies and balmy breezes send West Texans out of doors and set some of them digging into the soil in hope of producing something that looks like Grandmother's old-fashioned garden back East.

Mrs. E. V. Spence and E. B. Ribble have been bitten by this garden fever since the first warm days of that false spring which descended on the country several weeks ago. They have a big yard to work in—the City Park.

Whereas shrubs and trees have been planted in the past two years to carry out the landscaping design of the park, this year flowers will be the addition.

The hills of the City Park can stand color and lots of it and that, says Mrs. Spence, is what they are going to get. All the old-fashioned flowers that will grow in this country are going to be planted in profusion. Brilliant reds and startling yellows, the true colors of the West, will be the most popular. They will include verbenas, zinnias, calendulas, marigolds, nasturtiums and cannas.

Bluebonnet seed will be scattered and larkspur. If the gardeners can get some of the flowers started which will seed themselves from year to year, so much the better.

Under the trees dedicated to the soldiers will be sown seeds of red and yellow popples.

Vines will be planted around the pump houses and the rock houses and flower beds laid out near them. People in town who are dividing their Shasta daisies, their October

Lovely Saint Patrick Party

Mrs. Ballanfonte, Westbrook Entertains At Crawford

One of the loveliest spring luncheons of the year was given by Mrs. Joe Ballanfonte, of Westbrook, for her friends in this vicinity, Thursday at the Crawford Hotel.

The cool, green colors of Saint Patrick furnished attractive table notes. When the guests arrived the tables were set with miniature pots of maiden hair fern, tenderly nursed by a local florist from the Moss Spring stock, for centerpieces. Shamrock satin boxes contained salad almonds. The tallies were attractive St. Patrick motifs.

'Platform' Is Announced By The Fergusons

The following statement has been issued in behalf of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, candidate for governor, with a request from her husband, James E. Ferguson, that it be published.

In line with my promise, I hereby publish this my platform upon which I base my candidacy for governor, subject to the Democratic primary.

If our government is to endure care should be taken to see that our government does not invade the liberties of the people or oppress them with tax burdens which they are unable to bear.

In the beginning let me say that a reduction of taxes all along the line shall be my chief concern as the necessary and extravagant habits of our state government.

Most everybody is in favor of economy provided they are not touched and economy is enforced against the other fellow. In this crisis everybody must be called on to bear at least one part of the sacrifice that desperate necessity compels us to make.

First Plank
I would set aside from the funds now collected from the gas tax now amounting to some thirteen million ($30,000,000) dollars:

- One-third to the public schools.
- One-third to the state highway department.
- One-third to the state ad valorem general revenue fund.

From the funds collected from license fees from motor vehicles now amounting to some thirteen million ($13,000,000) dollars, I would set aside:

- One-third to the state highway department; two-thirds to the counties, as at present.
- This arrangement will provide for the demands of an increasing yearly scholastic enrollment and will remove the state ad valorem tax entirely from the homes, farms and ranches in the country as well as the homes and all other real estate in towns and cities, and with the Federal aid allotted would leave some twenty-two million ($22,000,000) dollars for the support of the state highway department.

If a $12,000,000 tax reducing governor, yes twelve million dollars, looks good to you as a tax reducer just get behind me and we will bring home the bacon.

Second Plank
I am opposed to any alleged economy at the expense of the public schools.

Third Plank
I am in favor of such regulation of trucks and busses as will prevent the destruction of our roads and insure the safety of life and limb of the traveling public.

Fourth Plank
I am in favor of the State Highway Commission being elected by the people.

I am opposed to the issuance of bonds by the state for highway purposes.

The present Highway Commission and its policies should be removed for incompetency and vicious extravagance.

I am in favor of using hand labor instead of machinery on public highways wherever possible, such as fine grading and unloading material shipped in and unloading machinery that is purchased from foreign manufacturers to take the place of men and teams who can thereby be employed at home.

Fifth Plank
I urge the equity of redemption law favored by me in the last campaign giving owners of real estate two years in which to redeem same after foreclosure. Foreclosures on homes are becoming inhuman and there ought to be some relief.

I am in favor of the constitutional amendment exempting from all taxes the homestead to the amount of $2,000.

I also favor taxing only the owners equity in real estate and favoring the vendor's lien notes against the real estate for the balance.

I favor extending time for payment of taxes accruing before January 1, 1932, for two years, and remitting of interest, costs and penalty if paid in two years from that date.

Sixth Plank
I favor reducing all interest charges to six per cent and making all notes uncollectible by law that have not been rendered for taxation.

Seventh Plank
I favor combining and co-ordinating wherever possible different departments of government. I would combine the duties of tax assessor, collector and county treasurer all in one office and save alone $700,000 a year to the tax payers. Enough to educate 4000 children every year.

Eighth Plank
I promise the Ferguson usual and successful operation of the state prison system, accomplished mainly by a liberal pardon policy to meritorious and energetic prisoners.

Ninth Plank
To insure the purity of the ballot box I would require that every clerk or election officer who calls the ballot shall sign his name to each ballot called by him. Intentional mistake to be punishable as a felony.

Tenth Plank
I favor such legislation by statute, compact or constitutional amendment as may be necessary as will conserve our oil and gas resources by control of the production of same so as to prevent the physical and economic waste of said minerals of more than the market and necessary demand there for upon a just and fair division of the price for which said minerals are sold between the producer and the retail buyer.

As supervision by the state and at state expense through the proper authorities being necessary to prevent physical and economic waste and insure economic production, it is but fair that those who buy gas, oil and gasoline at retail should receive part of the profits of those who sell; such division to be fixed by the railroad commission by either a graduated tax or through proportion laws or otherwise as may be legal and just.

his schools. We can put off until tomorrow many obligations, but we can not permit the plastic mind of the childhood of Texas to become the fruitful and prolific field of ignorance, and therefore the state must educate its children today.

I am also in favor of as liberal appropriations for the higher institutions of learning as present financial conditions will justify.

Third Plank
I am in favor of such regulation of trucks and busses as will prevent the destruction of our roads and insure the safety of life and limb of the traveling public.

Fourth Plank
I am in favor of the State Highway Commission being elected by the people.
