Pollination Of Cucumber Crop Aided By Hives of Bees

By TOM WENGO

On May 21st, Oscar Allison planted the seed to start his first cucumber crop now 8 weeks later he is making preparations to start the harvest of what seems at this time to be a bumper crop. A shipment of Bees were delivered to his farm, located 7 miles East of Muleshoe this week. These bees will pollinate the blooms of the cucumber plant to aid in the production. It will take about 10 hives of the bees to serve the 10 acres of land. Mr. Allison has been watering the cucumbers about once a week and will water twice a week during the harvest. More water is required for this crop as the cucumber is 95 per cent water. The cucumber takes about 6 days to mature from the bloom to the peak size cucumber, therefore the hands harvesting the crop will work daily going over the crop time after time for about 8 weeks, they will reach peak production in about 2 weeks after the beginning and the peak will last for about 4 weeks and begin to decline, altho it will still produce for the next 2 weeks profitably. Altho this is the first year for Allison to produce this crop, he is well satisfied with the progress of the crop and plans to continue raising cucumbers. Elvon DeVaney, Representative for Western Texas Labor Association reports that there are about 200 acres of cucumbers in the Muleshoe area. This amount of acres will require some where in the neighborhood of 300 bee hives; and some 250 hands to harvest the crop.

The cucumbers will be graded at the Western Texas Labor Association yard, and they will require about 4 semi-trucks a day to transport the product to the cannery's. DeVaney stated that each truckman will be used as much as possible. This is the first year that the farmers have had a guaranteed cut for this product.

1/4 of the crop will be shipped to the Arnold Pickel Co. in Phoenix, Ariz., and 1/4 will be shipped to the Dalton Canning Co. (Mrs. Daltons) in Fort Worth, Tex., and the remaining half to the Western Canning Co. in La Junta, Colorado.

Cucumbers crops have been pricier, more profitable year by year, because of the large amount of water and fertilizer applied to the land during the crop. The largest producer of cucumbers in the area is Kenneth Hanks, who is raising 25 acres of this product.

The numbers are raised on plots ranging from 5 acres to 25 acres. This crop necessitates on the average of 1 hands per acre to harvest. It is anticipated that the crop will produce an average income of $400. per acre in the duration of the harvest. The hands are paid by the share basis receiving 1/2 of the income, of the crop. The hands have a guarantee of 70 cents per hour.

FARM SAFETY WEEK
JULY 19-25

Be Wise! FOLLOW THESE SIX SAFETY SUGGESTIONS

1. Keep all equipment in good repair -- know and use the safety rules in operating machinery on the farm and highways.

2. Treat animals with caution - always speak to an animal as it is being approached. A frightened animal can be deadly.

3. Eliminate all fire hazards around your farm -- and be aware of fire dangers at all times. Don't smoke in barns!

4. Many accidents can be eliminated by keeping your farm clean and neat. Keep buildings in sound condition, too!

5. Be careful around water holes, wells, and lakes. Learn how to swim and never go out in or on water by yourself.

6. Learn the methods of first aid - keep a kit handy - and always apply first aid promptly when an accident occurs.

Make Sure Your Family Knows These Safety Suggestions, Too.

IRRIGATION WATER MANAGEMENT PAYS OFF

Irrigation water management is a necessary conservation measure in the Blackwater Valley Soil Conservation District. It is the planned use of water according to the needs of the crops and soils.

Several factors must be taken into account when planning water use. These include the kind of crop, the rate at which the crop is using water, the water holding capacity of the soil, the slope of the land, type of soil, the amount of water available, and the type of irrigation system. Each field is a different situation and must be treated accordingly — Often, several areas within a single field need to be treated individually as the soils, crops, and slopes vary.

In a row water system, slope, soil type, and water intake rate are important as they are factors used in determining the maximum length for each run. For example, on sandy soils runs should be short. This is due to the rapid intake rate of the soil. If runs on such soil are too long, too much water soaks in at the start of the run before the narrow stream reaches the far end.

The best use of water in surface irrigation can be attained by cutting the initial furrow stream. This gives a more even distribution from one end of the furrow to the other. Determining the proper amount of water to use and using the same amount each time requires considerable skill and practice.

When operating a sprinkler system additional factors must be taken into account. Average operating pressure for most systems should be around thirty-five to forty pounds. Pressure in each lateral should not drop more than twenty per cent from end to end.

The reason for this is that a nozzle puts out more water at a higher pressure than a lower one. Therefore, if the pressure drop in a lateral is too great, one end will get considerably more water than will the other.

Such pressure loss can be regulated by size of pipe, pressure at the well, and nozzle size.

Nozzle sizes should be uniform for the entire lateral to get the most even distribution. If more than one size is used on the same line, one nozzle may be putting out a far different amount of water than the one next to it.

Here again water intake rate, slope, etc. are important. If water is put on the soil too rapidly, it cannot soak in and will run off. Also as in the case with any system, if too little water is applied, it is rapidly lost through evaporation and efficiency is lost. If too much is applied, it soaks below the root zone or runs off and is lost.

Another factor in irrigation water management is the intelligent use of pipelines. These may be underground or portable, but their purpose is the same. They prevent water from being wasted due to soaking into the ground, evaporating, or breaking out and running off. They can also be used to carry water to areas which ditches cannot properly reach.

Proper application of water is important, but knowing when to water is equally important. Appearance of the crops is an indication of when they need water. However, water should be applied, if possible, before plants show signs of distress. One simple test is to take a handful of soil in the hand and squeeze it. Generally when the soil forms a weak ball and is moderately crumbly, it needs water. Such a sample should be taken about one foot deep near an average sized plant. All crops should be irrigated when about half of the water in the top fourth of the root zone is used. This is usually to a depth of one or one and a half feet.

Irrigated water management consists largely of applying the right amount of water at the right time through an efficient system. This may take more time and effort, but it pays dividends in the form of water saved, uniform crops, and control of water erosion.

IT'S THE LAW in Texas

YOU CAN'T ENFORCE A BET

Is a bet with a friend, with witnesses present, a valid contract upon which you can collect in court? Can you force a person to pay off a bet that he made with you?

Jim was the town's most loyal supporter of the Marysville baseball team, even though the team was having a disappointing season. Tom, a supporter of Johnstown, a rival team, offered to bet Jim a sizable sum of money that Johnstown would beat Marysville.

Jim was quick to accept and asked several bystanders if they would be witnesses to the bet.

That weekend Marysville won, but Tom refused to pay. Jim claimed that the bet amounted to a valid and binding contract. He wanted to bring a lawsuit against Tom to collect the money that he felt Tom legally owed him. However, he was advised that he did not have a case.

The bet that they made was a gambling contract, and as such was illegal. Where both parties assert rights founded on a contract which is illegal and void, the court will refuse to enforce it, leaving the parties just where they placed themselves, and as they were before coming into court. The court has said that they owe it to public justice and to their own integrity to refuse to enforce contracts essentially violating morality or public policy. It is a judicial duty always to turn a claimant upon such a contract out of court regardless of how the character of the contract is made to appear.

In this case, even though Jim could prove that he had made a contract with Tom, and regardless of the number of witnesses Jim could call into court to swear to the terms of the contract, the contract itself was an illegal one, made for an illegal purpose, gambling, and as such the courts will refuse to enforce it.

The courts will allow great freedom to people in the making of agreements between themselves, but they draw the line when the agreement made is illegal. The courts will not aid people in breaking the law.

The colorful pirate of old captured your imagination but not that of the shipowners of the governments that lost their cargoes and treasures.

Pirates were "enemies of mankind". Their acts became crimes against that government as well as against the "law of nations." A government would try to catch and to punish them no matter how and where the piracy took place.

From these early days, a rule of international law called "the piracy principle" came into being, as to crimes against mankind. Any nation might seize and punish such a person. He did not need to be one of its citizens. The crimes could be committed inside or outside its territory. Jurisdiction is worldwide.

Nations often punish their own people for crimes beyond their borders. Nations can punish aliens for crimes within their borders. They can punish aliens for crimes committed against that country when they later come into that country. A nation can also punish an alien for piracy under international law.

What about war crimes done or orders of superiors? The World War II allies have declared that certain Nazi leaders committed punishable crimes against nations.

Now and then some nations may allow a court to try a person in "absentia." Such trials without the accused present were once popular but little comes from such trials, and they are not as highly regarded as trials in which a person has a fair chance to defend himself.

Trades Winds Gives Complete Car Service

If you want good products and the fastest service you ever had, drive into Trade Winds Service Station at West American Blvd. and 8th St. This station is owned by H. M. Freeman who has lived in Muleshoe many years and who knows the service station business.

H. M. Freeman shown above offers complete service to motorists. Has special price on Washing and Lube.

the attendant cleans your windshield, checks your oil, water and tires so that you know just how your car is operating.

Phillips 66 products are manufactured in one of the world's largest refineries at Borger, Texas and are sold all over the south and West. They have built a great reputation for top performance and deliver more power to the engine than some other gasolines. These products are constantly being improved by a large staff of research chemists and the Phillips products today are far superior to the gasolines and oils of ten years ago. They give more mileage and better performance with less carbon formation in the engine.

In addition to good petroleum products, the thing most motorists like about a service station is fast and courteous service. Most of them are usually in a hurry and do not want to waste too much time buying gas and oil. They also appreciate having their windshields and rear window cleaned so that their vision is unobstructed. They get all this extra attention at Trade Winds 66 Station and they like it.

Mr. Freeman takes pride in his washing and lubrication service and tries to make every car look like new when it comes off the rack. It is thoroughly cleaned and vacuumed and all dirt removed inside and out. He is now offering a wash and grease job for only $3.50 while the usual prices nowadays is $4.50. Customers can get not only a first class job but save money as well. Try this station next time.

Bovell Motor Supply Has Complete Stock

When you need a part for your gas buggy, go to Bovell Motor Supply at 107 E. Ave. B and 99 times out of a hundred you will find what you want. This firm is owned and operated by Mrs. W. T. Bovell who has been in this business a number of years and who knows what you need to repair your car.

She is assisted by Carl White and Richard Hawkins, both of whom are thoroughly familiar with this business. When they sell you a part it will be the one you need and you won't have to bring it back to exchange it.

This company handles only first class, nationally advertised parts and supplies and they are guaranteed to do the job. Whether you want piston rings, bearings or a new crankshaft these men can get it for you in a hurry.

Many car owners like to do their own repair work and they can save many dollars in that manner. The men employed here can give good advice to amateur mechanics and help them solve their repair problems.

A full line of auto accessories such as horns, tires, batteries, head lights, spot lights, mirror and many other items are carried in stock at this store.

If you want to find out about a part for your car without making a trip downtown - call 2880 and order it. They will deliver any part in stock anywhere in Muleshoe.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Frank Ellis:
Please let me extend my sincere thanks to the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce and all the people of your community who were so nice and friendly to us while we were in Muleshoe July 4th.

Although we have heard much about the celebration held each year this was the first time I have had the opportunity to attend such an enjoyable event.

You may also be assured after the nice surprise of winning third place in the talent contest. The Chamber of Commerce and the city of Muleshoe are pretty well known over Hart way now.

I not only enjoyed being one of the participants, I thoroughly enjoyed the entire evening. The fireworks were beautiful.

Please thank Mr. Roger Albertson and Marie White and her son, Clifford for being so very nice and patient.

We received the negatives, hope they got a good picture.

Thanks Again For a Wonderful Evening.

Miss Becky Burress

FRANKLY SPEAKING

By J. Frank Peery

RELIGION AND THE CONSTITUTION

History tells us that the men who designed the government of the United States related their religious beliefs to political action. A remarkable consistency existed between spiritual roots, their basic religious beliefs and the full-flower of political actions, their concept of human government, one cannot understand or fully appreciate the Constitution of the United States in its deepest dimensions unless you are aware of its theology.

What was the religious background of the Founding Fathers? Their background was highly varied. It represented a cross section of the religious bodies of that day. Of the framers of the Constitution, 19 were Episcopalians, 8 were Congregationalists, 7 were Presbyterians, 2 were Roman Catholics, 2 were Quakers, 1 was Methodist, 1 was Dutch Reformed, and Edmond Randolph was a deist who later believed in man. They had faith in man's possibilities. They believed a human being is capable of making free and basic decisions concerning his religion, his politics, his business, and his personal affair. They saw man as a child of God.

Frankly Speaking - This was theological basis for the writing of the Constitution, which in turn gave shape and character to government. During this month of July let every American be thankful for his heritage and strive to keep God in the heart of our future.

herbicides and flame cultivation can be found by using herbicides at an early stage in the growth of crops to control the weeds before the crop gets to flaming size.

Flame cultivation may not be the total answer, but at this time it is apparent that by following recommended practices and procedures, it can be an effective and economical weed control.

A cost of production survey done by the High Plains Research Foundation shows the expense cost to produce a dollar on the farm. In 1940, to produce $1.00 on the farm cost $1.00. In 1962 - 63, the cost had jumped to 79.8 cents to produce $1.00 on the farm. This ever increasing high cost of production is what the Texas farmer, as well as farmers everywhere, must face. The cost of production is what is causing farmers to move off the farm.

The economy of the use of heat through flame cultivation is one of the important steps in any farming operation that can mean the difference between a profit or loss in farming.

Instructions on the use of flame to all farmers and businessmen cultivation have been forwarded who support the Foundation's private enterprise research work.
