Barbara's Briefs

How wonderful to see America still get excited over celebrating July 4 and the freedom we have as Americans.

Seeing all the fanfare over the renewal of the Statue of Liberty was exciting to me as I remembered seeing 'her' in 1961. At that time people could still walk to the crown and what a sight that was, even to a teenager.

To God be the glory that we are still a free country.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Tribune will be closed for vacation the week of July 21-25. We will be putting out two papers next week, so we will want all copy by Friday noon, July 18. Thank you for your cooperation.

Rodney Long Showing Improved Condition

The latest report on the condition of Rodney Long, after being severely burned in an accident on June 12, indicated he was showing some improvement. According to his wife, Nona Long, who had talked to Long's nurse at Lubbock General Hospital's Burn Intensive Care Unit today, July 8, he was able to sit up and walk for short distances in his room.

Long has been in severe pain much of the time since his accident and continues to run a moderately high fever.

Mrs. Long states that the community has been so good and she feels that Rodney is alive today due to all the prayers that have been prayed in his behalf. She just hopes the prayers will continue for his recovery.

Lightening Strikes House In Roaring Springs

Lightening struck a tree near the Charlie Long house in Roaring Springs the evening of July 2nd, around 6 p.m. causing a fire in that home. The lightning struck that tree and then ran down a chain link fence when the top of the tree fell across the fence. The heat from the lightning welded the gate to the fence post. The electricity then went through a copper pipe and ignited 2x4's under the house.

Long's daughter, Jenelle, was home at the time and called the Roaring Springs Volunteer Fire Department who responded quickly to contain the blaze by chopping through the floor and putting the fire out. Long stated that a two foot square below the wall under the floor was damaged with minimal smoke damage.

New Era of Agriculture For Texas Panhandle

(CHILDRESS)--"We're turning over more than few shovels full of dirt," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said here today. "What we're really turning over is another page in the history books. Today begins the latest chapter in a new era of agriculture for the Texas Panhandle--an era when family farmers and ranchers are finally turning quality production into profitable food products. The Texas Department of Agriculture is proud to 'co-author' this latest chapter with Bill, Minnie and Mary Lou Bradley, who have become something of modern-day agricultural pioneers in this area.

"B3R Country Meats 'ain't no bull," Hightower said. "It's a grassroots family enterprise that will put new cash money into the Bradleys' pockets, it will create new jobs, and it will return to the Childress-area economy the 'value-added' money that previously was going out-of-state. The overall economic impact to Childress of this one facility will approach $4 million-a-year."

Texas Department of Agriculture marketing specialists Gregg Boggs of Amarillo and Angelo Piccirillo of Austin have worked for nearly one year with the Bradleys to obtain financing for construction of the meat packing plant and retail store. TDA helped the Bradley to determine both the cost and the economic feasibility of the project, evaluate different sources of financing, and find markets for slaughtered beef. The Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA) is providing a key portion of project financing. TDA and TDCA have been cooperating on a wide range of agricultural enterprises like this one to improve producer returns and local economies.

B3R Country Meats will specialize in high-quality, natural, corn-fed beef. When completed, the B3R Country Meats plant will have the capacity to slaughter over 3,000 head of cattle annually. The initial market area for B3R Country Meat products is a 45-mile radius of Childress, with TDA helping the Bradleys find markets for their beef in area grocery stores, restaurants and directly to consumers.

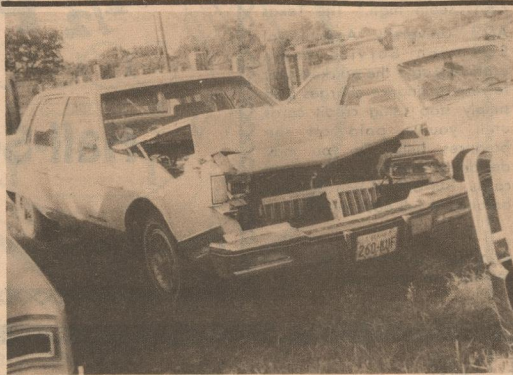

The Bradley 3 Ranch and B3R Country Meats will be a fully-integrated production, processing and marketing facility. It's different components will be as follows: cow-calf operation; feedlot; corn purchased from area farmers to feed cattle; slaughterhouse to process meat; retail facility to meet sales demand; and utilization of Taste-of-Texas logo, developed by TDA, to identify Texas-grown and Texas-processed food products.

"The addition of this slaughter plant and retail shop will allow the Bradleys to receive as much as $2.09-a-pound retail for corn-fed beef, as compared to today's average price of just 55 cents-a-pound for choice steers 'on the hoof,'" Hightower said. "More importantly for the Childress economy, this new rancher-owned operation is projected to create as many as 40 new jobs over the next two years.

"Texas farmers and ranchers now receive an average of only 26 cents out of the consumer's food dollar, with 74 cents going to the processing and marketing sectors. Texas is the second largest grower of food in the nation, yet we process only six percent of the country's food. Every additional one percent of the national food processing market that Texas captures, means an additional $1 billion to the state's economy.

Accident Injures Local Couple

A minor accident on Hwy. 70 West of Roaring Springs sent Matador residents, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Meason to Caprock Hospital in Floydada. Man Shoulders Cross To Spread God's Word

By John Rigg
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WALKING WITH THE WORD--Mike Gainer hauls his wooden cross across Lubbock Monday during a trek he said is intended to emphasize the word of God and call for the nation to return to the faith. Since leaving Oklahoma five weeks ago, he has walked 350 miles. (Photo by Mark Mamawal, Lubbock Avalanche Journal)

His burden is heavy, his road is long. But to Mike Gainer who has walked more than 350 miles pulling a wooden cross since leaving Verden, Okla., June 2, the pain is worth it.

He says he's walking across America spreading the word of God. He found his way through Lubbock Monday.

Walking up to 20 miles a day, depending on the people he meets and talks with, Gainer walks with a 12 foot cross draped over his shoulder.

A wheel attached to the base of the cross makes the going a little easier. Tied near the base is a small knapsack containing food and maps. Above the knapsack is a thermos for water.

At the end of each day he hitchhikes back to his car which has a small trailer attached to it. He then drives to where he left his cross and picks it up. Sometimes he sleeps along the road, he said.

Gainor, 31, said he was inspired to carry the cross by a vision he had nine years ago. The vision, he said, was of him, carrying a cross and leading people.

"I knew that God was calling me," he said. "I was coming out of sin at the time, and he gave me the vision."

He said his decision to take up his burden was cemented several months ago when he met a man in Oklahoma who was walking across the country carrying a cross. Shortly afterwards, he turned down a job offer and took up the cross.

"I have three aims," he said. "The first one is to call sinners to repentance; the second is to call the church back to being pure and whole; and the third is for the United States to turn back to God."

After leaving Lubbock, Gainer plans to walk along the Mexican border to California, he said. Eventually his walk will take him along the Canadian border, down the Atlantic seaboard and then back across the south. He said the journey should take two to three years to walk.

(Editors Note: Several Motley County residents saw Mr. Gainer walking with his cross, and some talked with him.)

Trails End

As the Wagon Train ended its long trek around Texas in Ft. Worth on July 3, local residents, Mr. and Mrs. Bundy Campbell and Laura Grundy were on hand to celebrate the finale.

After the 3000 mile trip, the 150 wagons and 1000 horses were paraded through downtown Ft. Worth to the legendary Ft. Worth Stockyards. Although the rain had poured down the morning the wagon train pulled into the stockyards, sunshine beamed on the exuberant wagoners to the cheers of thousands of spectators.

On Friday, July 4, more than 100 items from the Wagon Train travels were auctioned off. Also auctioned were 75 horses and mules, 15 wagons and buggies, two surreys, art work, firearms, stick horses and a chicken. A street dance, display of the original Goddess of Liberty Statue, a symphony orchestra concert, a rodeo and fireworks display commemorating the wagon train end as well as the 4th of July.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were excited to see former Motley County residents, Doc and Mary Helen Cross of Plainview, roll into Ft. Worth in their wagon. Mrs. Campbell (Lucretia) was especially thrilled to see Walt Garrison. As the wagons circled for the last time in Billy Bob's parking lot, the wagoners were left with treasured memories of a long arduous journey.

Jo Ann's Jots & Jingles

I am an avid maker of scrapbooks. While looking through some of them recently, I came across an article called My Daughter, The Teenager written by Helen Bottel.

Recently I had the pleasure (?) of having three granddaughters in my home for a week. Although they are only 6, 7 and 8, I was aware that before long their mothers would have teenagers on their hands.

To all mothers and grandmothers who are or will be dealing with teenagers, this article is dedicated.

My Daughter, The Teenager "Shoots down last year's wardrobe as creepy, then goes out and buys an outfit straight out of the Fifties.

Exercises a half hour every night - at dishwashing time - but can't possible manage an eight block walk to school.

Spends forty minutes twice a day in the shower and shampoos her hair four times a week; yet is the happy occupant of a bedroom no self-respecting pig would enter.

Considers bearded teachers and boys as "groovy" but would run away from home if her father grew whiskers.

Invites the whole gang over to help themselves to the contents of the refrigerator; but heaven help the family member who touches her specially purchased low-calorie pop.

Spends an hour applying makeup that doesn't show, straightens her hair, whitens her lips and turns out looking sweet and beautiful - even to her parents."

But, remember, mother and grandmother, this, too, will pass!

"Son Beams"

By June Keltz

Necessity is truly the Mother of invention. No doubt someone grew weary of misplaced keys and became the inventor of the beeping key chain. It is activated by a loud noise, so if you can't find the little evasive critters you whistle or clap your hands and they reveal their hiding place.

Would that we could all have a beeper to remind us that we have the keys to the Kingdom of God. They are not found in a drawer, pocket or purse, but in Matt. 18:18. "Truly I say to you, whatever you shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

So, what do we bind (constrain with legal authority)

here on earth using the name and authority of Jesus who is in us but also in Heaven? We are to bind the evil hindering spirits and all of their activity. We are to loose the ministry of the Holy Spirit upon people and nations. This is just one more privilege and responsibility given to us when we accepted Jesus as our Saviour through the shedding of His blood.

Many times we become "Instant Christians" binding and loosing in obedience but giving up when we fail to see immediate results. Faith, patience, and persistence go hand in hand building a stronger fortress against the enemy than a quickly erected pre-fabricated wall.

Home Economically Speaking By Carolyn Halsell

IT'S SUNSTROKE SEASON AGAIN

The combined effects of sun, exercise, heat and excessive perspiration can cause the loss of fluids and salts in the body. These conditions may, in turn, cause heat exhaustion, heatstroke and sunstroke.

To prevent these serious conditions, remain in the sun and excessively hot places for only short periods of time.

While working or playing outdoors, wear loose-fitting clothes, such as cotton t-shirts, to help the body perspire and keep it cool.

Drink sufficient amounts of liquids to help replace fluids lost in perspiration.

The body's normal reaction to high temperature is to pool blood near the surface of the skin so that sweat is formed and then evaporated into the air, releasing heat. This process works very well in most instances.

However, when a person is exposed to high temperatures combined with high humidity for a long period of time, the vessels deep in the body can lack sufficient blood and heat exhaustion may occur.

The symptoms of heat exhaustion include muscle cramps and weakness. The body temperature may remain normal, but the pulse may be weak. The skin is usually cool, but pale and moist.

Treatment consists of getting the person out of the sun immediately. Slowly sipping cool (not cold) water will help cool down the body.

Heatstroke, or sunstroke, is more serious than heat exhaustion. A breakdown of the cooling system of the body which causes the body temperature to rise uncontrollably causes heatstroke. Because the sweating mechanism is not working, there is very little perspiration.

Watch Those Credit Cards

NOW IS THE TIME TO REDUCE CREDIT CHARGES--If you have large unpaid balances on your credit card accounts, now may be a good time to analyze your credit spending habits. Why now? Family economics specialist Nancy Granovsky says that the tax reform proposals now in Congress call for eliminating the deduction for interest paid on credit cards, so it may be advisable to begin reducing interest expenses this year. Another good reason for reducing credit expenses is the difference in interest rates for credit cards and for other forms of borrowing. "Depending on the kind of charge card and where it was issued, consumers are paying annual percentage rates ranging from 12-13% to over 20%," she says. "Since home mortgage rates are in the 10% range, auto loans are somewhat less, and your savings dollars are earning no more than 6-8%, interest rates for credit cards seem high." The Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist says the quickest way to reduce finance charges is to simply stop using credit cards until you've paid off the balances fully. Or you may decide to continue using credit cards, but only if you pay the balance in full each month.

Admistr change, Lord, be constant as my guide.

TRACKING CREDIT COSTS--"Families often wind up overextending themselves--and paying excessive finance charges--because they don't pay enough attention to how they're using credit cards," says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service family economics specialist. Nancy Granovsky suggests entering each credit purchase in a small notebook, similar to what you would do if writing a check. For example, if you use three credit cards regularly, keep a list with three columns. Each time you use a credit card, write down the amount and what it was for. When the credit card bill comes, you'll be able to monitor your spending and make sure all the charges were legitimate ones. You'll also be able to keep track of how much you're buying on credit, manage your cash flow more easily and therefore reduce your finance charges, says the specialist.

Mountaineer's Treks to Himalayas Offer Peak Experiences

By Barbara Boughton, Reporter, Houston Post

In Fran Morris' house, the guest room walls are covered with masks from India, Africa, New Guinea, Tibet and South America. The living room paneling has been built to look like paneling of Buddhist monasteries in India. The room is filled with carvings and rugs Morris has collected on her treks through the Himalayas in India.

Morris is a mountaineer extraordinaire, with a love of travel and Eastern culture. Her attraction for the Indian Himalayas has propelled her there each summer for more than 15 years. She's climbed a 21,000 foot peak - Deo Tibba - in northern India. She's gotten lost in the fog and faced a carnivorous bear atop an Indian glacier. This summer she'll ride horses in the grasslands of inner Mongolia and trek across two Himalayan mountains - Emei Shan and Tai Shan - that the ancient Chinese regarded as sacred.

"I love the mountains and love getting away from civilization," says Morris, 51, an art teacher with Houston Independent School District. "I like seeking how self-sufficient I can be."

Morris, whose husband, Ned, is chief prosecutor with the Harris County District Attorney's office, began climbing at age 17, when she took a summer job at Glacier Park in Montana. Raised in a small town in West Texas, she found the mountains of Montana a challenge. Several years later, the thrill of mountain climbing led her to Switzerland, where she took two courses in mountaineering and rock climbing in the Alps. Fascinated by Eastern culture, she then ventured to the Himalayas.

"I wanted to move on to a higher level," she says, explaining her fascination with the Indian mountain peaks. "I wanted to get into snow and ice climbing. The Himalayas afford a real primal kind of mountaineering."

Her husband has accompanied her on some of her more sedate travel trips - to Switzerland, for instance. But he prefers to stay home when she climbs high mountains or glaciers. "He doesn't like the rugged stuff," she says with a chuckle.

Since the early 1970s, Morris has spent six weeks every summer trekking in the mountains. Preparation for these trips often includes a year of strenuous workouts in the well-equipped exercise room in her house in the Memorial area.

On her treks, she enjoys getting away from civilization, and enjoys being able to paint and write in the wilderness, she says. Too, there are the "wonderful" people of India, who've become her fast friends.

Each summer, she travels from Houston to Manoli, a town in the Kulu valley of northern India. The lush valley, filled with apple and plum orchards, is often called the "valley of the gods" because of its beauty, Morris says.

She discovered this Indian country town while on a trek in Tibet nine years ago. "The area (Tibet) was very dry and arid, and one of the porters, who was from Manoli, would often stop, look off into the distance and moan, 'Manoli. Manoli. This is no good. Manoli is better.'"

"I thought to myself, 'I have to see this place.' When I did, I wasn't disappointed."

A fellow mountaineer referred her to Gokol, an 18-year-old Indian from Manoli who has since served as her guide.

One of her more engrossing journeys took Morris to Manala, a strange village in an isolated Himalayan canyon last year. Established more than 2,000 years ago by deserters from the army of Alexander the Great, the village stands atop a 3,000-foot mountain, rising from a shady glen of gigantic ferns and lora. A kind of Shangri-la, it has now become a village of Hindus who worship the fierce god, Jamlu. The village, Morris says, is a refuge for many fleeing from trouble - including many criminals.

All who enter the village - except for caste Hindus - are given the lowly status of "untouchable," which means they must live in segregated areas and walk through the village only on a specially designated path.

To reach Manala, Morris and her party - porters and a fellow mountaineer, Nancy Barrow, who is an Austin psychiatrist - hiked 150 miles. They followed a vague and precarious trail with rickety precipices. They walked through a forest, forded silvery streams and sang folk songs with Indian mountaineers they met along the way.

Morris will never forget her first sight of the village. Long wooden spools hung like fringes from the roofs of the houses, craggy-faced men smoked water pipes and played dice in the sunny streets and primitive carvings of camels and elephants adorned the facades of hand-hewn timber and stone houses.

Careful to stay in the unapproachable path, Morris offered the villagers a gift of a silver charm, emblazoned with a unicorn. "It was like being in another time," she recalls.

Her treks are often dangerous. Once she and a guide became separated from their party, while crossing a glacier. Deciding to descend the glacier, they went without food for three days and took refuge with an Indian shepherd, who lived in a cave. Finally, they were reunited with scouts from their party.

On another trip, she encountered a bear (without mishap) while hiking across a glacier. Last year, climbing past glaciers and idyllic villages, she reached a 17,300 foot mountain pass called Sara Unga La - dodging boulders and crevasses (deep cracks in the glaciers) along the way.

The scenery always is spectacular and no matter where Morris goes, she is fascinated. So her love affair with the Himalayas continues year after year. She recently left for San Francisco, where she'll visit a friend, and then she's off to inner Mongolia.

"When summer comes around," she says decidedly, "my bags are packed."

(Tribune Editor's Note: Frances Morris is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Albert Traweck and Nancy Barrow is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Traweck.)

"Rather than just wait and hope that the Texas oil industry can recover, or that Toyota will locate an auto plant in our state, or that high-tech conglomerates will ride in from out-of-state to save us, the Texas Department of Agriculture has been working to help Texans restore our economy ourselves by building on our own natural resources--good soil, water, sunshine and the natural entrepreneurial spirit of the Texas people. What we're talking about here is a reinvestment in the pioneering spirit that built the Texas economy in the first place," Hightower said.

"The real force that will drive this shift toward a diversified agriculture is not technology or systems or universities or agricultural commissioners--rather, it is our enterprising people who will make it go. The Panhandle is home of some of our most enterprising agricultural entrepreneurs, and they are showing the way for others to follow," Hightower said. "The Panhandle has been a center of progressive agricultural thought and action from the earliest days of our state, so it is not surprising that seeds of a vigorous new agricultural economy already are sprouting here."

Late last year, Hightower participated in groundbreaking ceremonies for the Panhandle's first flour mill, a farmer-owned facility at Dawn, which is 17 miles southwest of Canyon in Deaf Smith County. As it has done with the Bradleys, TDA worked with nine area wheat farmers to obtain financing and find markets for the flour that the mill will begin producing in early 1987.

"It's not just this meat packing plant and flour mill that are important, but the exciting economic potential that projects like this represent for all Texans. TDA is at work with local people in various other regions of Texas developing processing plants for everything from cowpeas to cucumbers, wool to poultry, shrimp to crawfish and cotton to kenaf. This approach works, and it works by the one measure that means most to people: It puts real cash money in their pockets."

The amount of capital invested in value-added food and fiber projects assisted by TDA more than doubled from $31.8 million in 1984 to $65 million in 1985. When completed, these processing and marketing facilities are estimated to generate first-year sales of $260 million.

"That's $260 million which will be placed into local communities at a grassroots level and allowed to generate three and four times through the entire Texas economy. It's not trickle-down economics, but percolate-up economics that creates genuine wealth at a local level," Hightower said.

"Working with enterprising Texans on a local level, we've proven in just three years that the new marketing and agricultural development programs authorized by the Texas Legislature and implemented by TDA work--and work well," Hightower said. "We're finding new sales outlets for Texas producers and food manufacturers. We are also finding new ways to benefit local communities and to keep food dollars in Texas, working for the Main Street economy. Based upon the progress we've made in the past three years, TDA is committed to doing even more marketing and to seek out more grassroots economic development opportunities for Texans in the years to come."

Farmer's Market To Open In Plainview

Plainview Area Farmers Market will open at 8 a.m. Saturday, July 12, in Hale County Agriculture Center with vegetables and fruits being offered by many of the 26 farmers who are members of the market association.

Farmers Market will open on Saturdays at 8 a.m. and on Tuesdays at 5 p.m. throughout the season. Although the market will begin operation on July 12, the grand opening ceremony will not be until Tuesday, July 15.

Other area producers who desire to join the Plainview Area Farmers Market should contact Hale County extension agent Bob Benson for further information. Farmers may join on any of the local market days. The building will be opened one hour before market time with stalls being assigned on first come, first serve basis. Membership fee is $20; stall fee is $5 per market. Also, Plainview Area Farmers Market has a reciprocal agreement for a $10 non-voting membership with the Lubbock and Amarillo markets.

Organization of the farmers to market area produce and fruits was done through the cooperation of Plainview Chamber of Commerce officials; Bob Benson, Hale County extension agent; Johnny Turpin of the Texas Department of Agriculture Lubbock office, and other TDA officials.

Officers of Plainview Area Farmers Market are Larry Comer of Silverton, president; Russel McNally of Lockney, vice president; Carolyn Reed of Kress, secretary; and Ellen Boedeker of Lockney, treasurer. Also on the board of directors are Andrea Reed of Kress, Thelma Nimmo of Plainview, J.D. Hahn of Hale Center and Barney Barnswell of Petersburg.

Spur Teacher Anger Expressed At Hearing

Taken from The Texas Spur; (Spur Editor's Note: The following are remarks delivered by Mila Marion, a teacher in the Spur Public Schools, at a hearing June 18 in Abilene with Linda Gail White, wife of Texas Governor Mark White.)

We are a financially poor, rural school district, but we are rich in talent.

I must preface my comments by stating that the teachers of Spur are concerned that these hearings are merely a political sham using the teachers once again as a political soccer ball to be kicked around! We have been asked before by the current leaders in Austin about our concerns and suggestions on ways to improve education in Texas and our suggestions fell on deaf ears only for people such as H. Ross Perot and his money to be the one the legislative leaders, namely Governor White, listened to! Mr. Perot's credibility as a good judge about what is good and necessary for education in Texas is very suspect. We are not in the process of trying to undo the great damage done by those people in Austin who have not spent enough time walking in a teacher's shoes to have the expertise to tell us what is best for education in Texas! The teachers are the experts! The teacher's expertise, knowledge and firsthand experience with the students are the key elements in making sound educational decisions.

We thank you for this opportunity to express our views and concerns. Additional comment added:

1. Teachers deserve same number of days of sick leave as other State employees.

2. Because of new funding for personnel unit, it is more practical for local school boards to hire inexperienced teachers over experienced, tenured teachers.

3. HB72 was enacted too quickly. It should have been handled in the same manner as Chapter 75. With a grace or time period, giving teachers and administrators an opportunity to become more familiar with its components.

4. The teachers in Spur support the training of local board members.

5. We support an elected state school board rather than an appointed board.

TSTA supports the concept of teacher evaluation; however, the new evaluation is too extreme and totally unrealistic.

7. Spur teachers do not support the "quickie" certification of teachers.

8. No pass-no-play: Three weeks not six weeks.

There are some aspects of HB72 that are approved and acceptable to the teachers of Spur. The positive aspects are the reduction of class size, equalization funding and its attempts to upgrade the teaching profession by increasing teacher salaries.

The teachers of Texas have been through a very difficult year. We know that and you know that. Now is the time to recognize the problems and move toward solutions. Platitudes and half steps will not do. The points outlined in this presentation must be addressed with strong measures.

NEWS OF SAFETY

Bug Bite Hazards

An insect repellent can make the difference between pleasure and pain in the outdoors.

In addition to the usual itching and swelling, mosquitoes, ticks, and other biting bugs can cause, they can also be a real health hazard. They can spread serious illnesses such as encephalitis, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever and Lyme Disease.

Here are some tips to keep mosquitoes from biting:

- Use a good repellent, such as Cutter Insect Repellent. It should be applied to all exposed skin before going outdoors. Non-synthetic clothes can also be sprayed with it for more complete protection.
- Dump out pails and open containers after rain. Get rid of old tires or puncture them to drain water. Mosquito eggs must be in water to hatch and these containers make ideal breeding grounds.
- Fill drain areas where water stands: gutters, ditches and low areas in your yard. Mosquitoes even like holes in trees that collect water.

DID YOU KNOW ?

Freedom's spirit lives: For one hundred years, the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor has been a beacon of freedom for people around the world. Here are some facts you may not know about one of the world's largest—and best-loved—statues:

- The statue's proper name is Liberty Enlightening the World.
- Ever wonder what's written on the tablet the statue holds? The date of the Declaration of Independence.
- The torch, its highest point, rises 305 feet one inch above the base of the pedestal.
- The famed poem inscribed on its pedestal... "Give me your tired, your poor..." is called the "New Colossus" and was written by Emma Lazarus.
- An identical model of the statue stands on a bridge that crosses the Seine River in Paris.
- Many American corporations are doing special things to celebrate the statue's centennial this year. One bank that's been around even longer than the statue is making available nationwide a limited-edition Statue of Liberty Visa card. It's all part of Chemical Bank's series of contributions made this year in connection with the centennial.
- For every Liberty Visa card it approves, the Bank will donate $3 to the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation. If you'd like to apply for the card, you can call 1-800-621-3111 or look for applications at a store near you.

For we are Gods workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do. Eph. 2:10
