Reading Stressed In Club Program

The home of Mrs. C. P. Waybourn was resplendent with Christmas symbols for the meeting of El Progresso Club, November 30.

The business session, presided over by the president, Mrs. W. Pipkin, was opened by the pledge of allegiance to the flag, led by Mrs. G. E. Hamilton.

Mrs. Pipkin expressed appreciation and gratification for the success of the recent Fine Arts Festival which the club sponsored.

As program director of the program on "Education," Miss Sue Glenn, Chairman of the Department of Education, stressed the importance of increased reading of good books by everyone.

Miss Glenn substituted for Mrs. J. L. Woodruff in a talk, "How our community needs a library." Mrs. Ralph Stapleton spoke on the subject, "How you can wear an ESO pin." Our GFWC Scholarships, was the topic of a talk by Mrs. Ben Keltz, and "Some startling facts about illiteracy," was a discussion by Mrs. Vance Gilbreath.

A guest, Mary Jane Hamilton gave the reading, "In School Days," by John Greenleaf Whittier.

In the absence of Mrs. W. F. McCaghen, Miss Glenn led the closing prayer, said in unison: "Education is such a slow process, O Lord, but it is the way Thou has made to grow a mind or a soul or a nation or a world. May we have the patience to keep on studying and struggling until we are prepared to do the job Thou has planned for us to do, and then may we go on studying to learn to do it better. Amen." (Author, W. M. Stowe).

Other members present included Mesdames Elbert Reeves, J. R. Whitworth, W. D. Lipscomb, D. E. Pitts, Joe Bloodworth, Robert Darsey, Miller Robinson, U. L. Willie, Forrest Campbell, Jack McCallie, A. J. Daffern, F. G. Simpson, Eldred Seigler, Harry Willett, and Roy Patterson, and Miss Amy Glenn.

BAPTIST WOMEN TAKE LEADERSHIP COURSE

Twelve women of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union recently completed a Leadership

Course, taught by Mrs. Eddie Sims, and will receive certificates, qualifying them for leadership positions.

The group includes Mesdames John Barnhill, Ronald Christian, D. P. Keith, Elbert Reeves, Odie Killingsworth, Eldred Seigler, Ben Keltz, Edgar Lee, James Price, C. D. Garrison, Ed Cammack and Mrs. Miller Robinson, Miss Verlin Reeves and Mrs. V. A. Rattan attended several sessions, but did not complete the course.

Garments Styled By FHA Classes

A cornucopia, containing a goat to represent the wool garments, and cotton bolls to represent cotton dresses, painted on white paper, encircled by the outline of the United States was the background setting for the annual FHA Style Show, November 27, in the high school auditorium.

A table arrangement for a tea completed the stage decorations. Virginia Nichols served as tea hostess as the girls modeled their garments.

Scottie Robbins was first place winner in the freshman group, while first place in the sophomore group was a tie between Mary Irwin and Sue Stevens.

A tie for first place was also the decision of the judges, with Pat Cooper and Jane Hamilton sharing the honors in the third year class.

Freshman girls modeled garments made of cotton materials. Placing second was Marianne Damron, with Ruthie Lynn and Lynda Elliott sharing third place.

Dresses of both wool and cotton were modeled by the sophomore girls. Betty Sandefer was second, and Joyce Scaff placed third in this group.

Judy Hart placed second and Ann Garnett, third in the third year class and each of these, together with first place winners, modeled a lined wool sheath.

Miss Christina Damron served as narrator and Mrs. John Stevens played background music at the piano.

The audience was entertained by students of Mrs. J. R. Whitworth, Mrs. G. E. Hamilton and Tommy Wheeler while the judges were making their decisions.

The program included a reading, "Thanksgiving Day" by Wanda Matney; a poem, "Too Much Turkey," by Judy Marrs; a duet, "It Is No Secret," sung by Judy Gwinn and Frances Martin, and an enjoyable version of the song, "Dream" by five freshman girls, Faye Lynn Cook, Patsy Hankins, Ruthie Lynn, Marianne Damron and Scottie Robbins.

To conclude the program, Linda Vinson played two piano selections, "The Yellow Rose of Texas," and "Glowworm."

General Meeting Held By W. S. C. S.

General monthly meeting was held Tuesday night by the Methodist Woman's Society of Christian Service. Theme of the program was "A Christmas Card."

A soft medley of Christmas carols was played by Mrs. Roy Patterson, and carol singing was led by Mrs. Frank Pohl.

Mrs. John Hamilton was assisted in presenting the program by Mrs. Olive Russell and Mrs. Pohl who read Christmas cards from missionaries throughout the world. During the program, Miss Roberta Jameson played other Christmas carols and hymns.

The worship center featured a large greeting card, surrounded by yuletide greenery and ornaments.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Dirickson visited in Tipton, Okla., recently with her sisters, Mrs. A. S. Edmondson and Mrs. Lemmie Day, and the four went to Fort Worth where they attended the Moslah Temple Shrine's Circus on Monday. They returned to Tipton on Tuesday, and the Diricksons returned to their home here, Thursday.

PIED PINIONS

By Mrs. M.

Comes now the box season. You've had boxes stored in boxes, and last year's Christmas decorations, wrapping paper and ribbons and bows in other boxes stacked away on the top shelf of a closet, taking up space and gathering dust, and now you're getting them all down.

The fact that they clutter up some corner of the house, or are spread all over the dining table or bed in the spare room, and have to be cleared off at regular intervals, adds to the general confusion of Getting Ready For Christmas.

Addressing Christmas cards and mailing them usually comes first on the getting-ready list. For most people, that is. It's usually the last thing we get done, after giving up in despair that we'll even have any cards to address; and always we leave off half the things we intended to do, since each task is an interruption of the one before it, and nothing is ever completely finished.

Used flash bulbs make attractive tree ornaments, when they are covered with finger-nail polish and sprinkled with glitter. A loop is made with fine wire extended over the neck of the bulb, and held in place with several strands of wire wound around it. To facilitate the painting process, a box lid can be punched with holes, and the neck of the bulb pressed in, to keep the bulb upright.

An elevator operator grew weary of constantly being asked the time of day, so he hung a clock in his cage. Now everybody asks him, "Is that clock right?" (Cheer).

Unique Program Is Presented at Baptist Church

Flomot Baptist Church was the scene of an unusual program presented Sunday evening at the Training Union hour.

The Cooperative Program, presented by L. D. Bilberry, and Mrs. WMU, in the person of Mrs. Bilberry were united in faithful service. The pastor, Rev. Jack Terrill performed the ceremony. Clois Shorter, a Royal Ambassador, was best man and his twin sister, Joyce Shorter was bride's maid, with Mrs. Jack Terrill at the piano.

Mrs. WMU was attired in a street-length dress. The bodice was fashioned of broadcated taffeta and the full skirt was net. Long sleeves came to the finger tips, and the bridal hat with rosettes across the front, and the short wedding veil added to the wedding atmosphere.

The impressive words of the preacher charged the congregation with the responsibility of the success or failure of this union.

Pictures were made of the group during the ceremony and as they retired from the church.

Foreign Missions Program
Monday evening at seven o'clock a Foreign Missions program, entitled "Good Tidings to All People" was presented with the entire church participating, followed by a church supper.

The Girls' Auxiliary sang, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," and a playlet, "The Dreamer" was given by Primary and Beginner departments.

Mrs. L. E. Shorter spoke on "The Gospel in Evidence," and the pastor, Rev. Jack Terrill told "Tidings of Great Joy to All People." Benediction and Prayer of Thanksgiving by C. W. Starkey concluded the program.

Visit Matador!

By Vada Nichols
 The little town of Matador, Texas, is beautifully located at the base of the caprock of the great South Plains. An artist could find his shangri-la here, for picturesque scenes are to be found in all directions.
 West of Matador there is grassland and cattle pasture. Rising above is the caprock, dotted with brush and evergreens. Deer and antelope find their natural habitat in this area, and the sunset in the evening completes a picture of indescribable beauty.
 To the north stretches more prairie, but human hands have touched a great deal of it, turning it into rich, fertile farmland. Tons of cotton are shipped from these farms annually.
 Beautiful scenery lies to the east. Sandy river beds and rounded hills covered with cottonwoods and mesquites form a perfect setting for the highway which winds its way toward the next town.
 About twelve miles south of Matador is the biggest tourist attraction we have to offer—Roaring Springs. It is a historical monument with many signs of primitive Indian life. A modern swimming pool nestles down among the hills, and one end is graced by a beautiful, natural waterfall. The water comes from several springs up in the hills, and part of it is used to fill the pool. The remainder empties into the South Pease River at the opposite of the pool and picnic area.
 The abundance of wild game lures Matador's assets as a resort, but the paramount asset is the warm hospitality extended by the townfolks. Welcome to Matador!

Kampus Kapers

By Vada Nichols
 If MHS students were asked to name their favorite television character, Carol Burnett would probably win by unanimous acclaim. It seems as if all of the students are at home by 9:00 on Tuesday nights in order to watch the Gary Moore show, and then the school is upside down with laughter on Wednesday with everyone reliving Miss Burnett's antics of the night before.
 Don't be alarmed if you should see a high school girl acting as if she has lost her mind. More than likely she is imitating Carol Burnett. Several of the girls do try to give demonstrations to those who weren't lucky enough to see the show, but we all agree that no one can quite live up to Carol!

Judy Hobbs received the paramount compliment recently when a local comedian told her that she "looked just like that thar Carol Burnett on TV."

Senior Sidelines

By Cheri Barton
 The gymnasium was the scene of a senior class covered-dish supper, Monday, December 4. Everyone had a good time eating and playing games.
 We are so proud of our football team. The senior boys on that team, Ros Bearden, Jimmie Green, Dale Dixon, Bob Johnson, and Kenneth Davis, played an excellent ball game Thanksgiving Day. Each boy played his best and won that game, according to our estimation. The score may have showed our team behind, but in the hearts of all fans these boys had won.
 Report cards were handed out for the second time this year. If you had been around when some of us received them you might have heard statements like this: "My goodness, they must have put the wrong grade on mine," or "The teacher's fountain pen must have been out of ink because he wrote with red pencil this time."

 About twelve miles south of Matador is the biggest tourist attraction we have to offer—Roaring Springs. It is a historical monument with many signs of primitive Indian life. A modern swimming pool nestles down among the hills, and one end is graced by a beautiful, natural waterfall. The water comes from several springs up in the hills, and part of it is used to fill the pool. The remainder empties into the South Pease River at the opposite of the pool and picnic area.
 The abundance of wild game lures Matador's assets as a resort, but the paramount asset is the warm hospitality extended by the townfolks. Welcome to Matador!

 The little town of Matador, Texas, is beautifully located at the base of the caprock of the great South Plains. An artist could find his shangri-la here, for picturesque scenes are to be found in all directions.
 West of Matador there is grassland and cattle pasture. Rising above is the caprock, dotted with brush and evergreens. Deer and antelope find their natural habitat in this area, and the sunset in the evening completes a picture of indescribable beauty.
 To the north stretches more prairie, but human hands have touched a great deal of it, turning it into rich, fertile farmland. Tons of cotton are shipped from these farms annually.
 Beautiful scenery lies to the east. Sandy river beds and rounded hills covered with cottonwoods and mesquites form a perfect setting for the highway which winds its way toward the next town.
