Early deadline for next week's paper

The deadline for next week's pa per, the July 27 edition, will be 10:00 a.m. Friday, July 21. All news and ad copy must be brought to the office no later than this time to be included in the July 27th issue.

The Motley County Tribune will be closed for vacation the week of July 24-28, but the paper will be printed and mailed out on the regular day of Wednesday, July 26.

We understand that this is somewhat of an inconvenience, but it is the only way possible to take some much needed time off.

Your cooperation is very much

Summer Cooler

These young men are getting a real summer cooler, as the water from the fire hose splashes on them, and they seem very serious about learning to hold the hose. Jacob Woolsey, 4, and Tanner Bearden, 3, are being instructed by Matador Volunteer Fireman, David Blanco, at Sunday's family day held on the Courthouse square for local firemen's families. Kids, young and old, had their chance at cooling off when they took a shot at water polo, as Jacob and Tanner are doing in this picture. Jacob is the son of Les and Kim Woolsey and Tanner is the son of Brandt and Amy Bearden, all of Roaring Springs.

"This year, I am able to make one administrative change. Customers who put clothes and shoes costing less than $100 on layaway during the Sales Tax Holiday weekend will be permitted to take those items out of layaway at a later date without paying sales tax," Comptroller Rylander said. "This will allow hard-working families with limited budgets to pay for their purchases a little bit at a time and still receive the tax break."

"In the future, I think backpacks should be tax exempt, because kiddos need them for school," Comptroller Rylander said. "I also would like the Sales Tax Holiday to include fabric, buttons, zippers and other items people use to sew clothes, and I would like to see the Sales Tax Holiday last a couple of weeks, instead of just three days. "Good Neighbors"

There is a need across our land. We are in need of the teachings of Jesusparticularly His teachings on how to be a "good neighbor." Once we have learned the principles taught by our Lord, we should put them to practice.

In order to model good neighboring, we must understand how to treat people. That may sound over simplified, but neighboring is a concept which escaped those of Jesus' day and often eludes us today. The Scriptures provide us with understanding.

In Luke, Chapter 10, the one who proved to be a good neighbor, according to Jesus, was the one who had shown mercy when mercy was needed. Most would agree, that we need a lot more mercy showing in our communities across this land. Can we not begin with those near and then practice mercy to those who are distant?

The standard which Jesus gave us for Christian living is to outshine what this world has to offer. This world offers very little, if any, mercy. Can we not be like the song says, "Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in me"?

The Motley County Varsity Cheerleaders and sponsor Kay Bingham, attended cheerleading camp at the University of North Texas in Denton, June 20-24. It was five days of grueling work, dedication, and sometimes forced spirit. Even though camp was tough, the received two Stunt Smart awards, girls ended on a positive note with a which are given to the squads that terrific record.

At the end of each day of camp, the staff gave out Spirit Sticks to the most spirited, coachable, and punctual squads that day. Motley County received one every day. They also show great technique and a high level of safety during stunt executions. To add to their accomplishments, they also received a Motion Award, which is awarded to the squads that had great motions in their cheers and chants.

Every night each squad at camp was evaluated on a cheer and chant learned that day and received a ribbon for their performance. Blue -Superior; Red - Outstanding; and White for Excellent. The squad received nothing less than Superior ribbons -- 16 total, to be exact. To top it all off, each girl on the squad (including the mascot) was nominated for All-American, which is a great honor. Motley County Varsity Squad was one of the five elite teams nominated for Top Team of the entire camp.

All in all, it was a very successful week. Be sure and keep your eyes on the 2000-2001 Varsity Cheerleaders!

held at the same time - 2:00 p.m. Sunday. Pearl was the wife of Ward Rattan and the mother of a son, Garland. They were married March 11, 1932. Ward was the son of Rev. and Mrs. W.H. Rattan, pioneers of Motley County. Pearl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Scott of Lamesa, Tx. Ward was a musician who came to the rescue of the young Matador Drum and Bugle Corps and the Hep Cat Jazz Band. They were organized in Matador High School some time in the late '40s or '50s when instruction in marching and using wind instruments and drums was needed. He was always on call for kids, and Pearl sided with him. Pearl was 87.

The other friend was Ottis Brandon of Quanah, 94, who was a Methodist Church friend and neighbor for 15 years. There are the remains of two pies in my refrigerator as I write. I used the recipe for pie crust that she taught me to use. She mixed the shortening, salt, and flour, then kept the mixture in the freezer ready to add water and have ready-mix on hand in a jiffy. There was always a bed of blue bonnets that bloomed early between the sidewalk and the street in front of her pioneer home. Neighbors were free to come and gather seeds when they were dry. She and her husband Orval Eugene Brandon, who died in 1988, were married almost 62 years. She was still thought of as the Custodian of the Methodist Church, because she and Orval took care of their church as long as he lived.

Both of these friends will be remembered with affection by many. They were faithful and true friends of God and people.

Elaine and I first knew H.C. Lewis as a beautifully uniformed usher at the ornate old Lindsey Theater, and we could attend afternoon matinees if we had a dime each. We took a fancy to the young usher, but Elaine got him. They were married and moved to Amarillo when construction business was very good during World War II. After H.C. came home from the service, he worked for Melton Thacker in Roaring Springs for a time. This last information is fresh from La Voe and Buzz Thacker as of last Sunday.

Farm and Ranch News

Long-term brush control is a cost-effective, profitable strategy for cattlemen

Leaving brush intact on rangeland over the long-term increases the cost of running cattle, lowers forage productivity, and cuts into ranchers' profitability, say three Texas A&M University researchers.

Dr. Jim Ansley and Dr. Richard Teague, range ecologists, and Dr. Bill Pinchak, range animal nutritionist, are studying ways to economically control mesquite and other brush species at the Kite Camp on the W.T. Waggoner Estate ranch. All three Texas Agricultural Experiment Station scientists are based at Texas A&M's Agricultural Research and Extension Center here.

The goal of their research is to determine the optimum balance between chemical, mechanical and prescribed burning brush control methods. All three methods have merit, but a combination of one or more may provide ranchers with an effective, long-term strategy to combat mesquite and other undesirable, forage-robbing brush species.

"The method, or combination of methods, a rancher chooses for brush control depends on the level of brush infestation and the rancher's management objectives," Teague said. "Fire is a good, fundamental low-cost tool, but you cannot count on fire alone to convert mesquite thickets into productive savannas or grassland."

One goal of their Kite Camp research is to boost forage production and livestock grazing profitability by using repeated high-intensity fires to top-kill mesquite. This method helps keep mesquite constantly suppressed, but it is only one brush management option, Ansley said.

"That's a good way to manage brush for grazing alone. But if your goal is to increase income from livestock grazing and wilding, you may want to consider using a low-intensity fire and herbicides to create a mesquite savanna," Ansley added. "Repeated, low intensity winter-fires say, three to four fires over a 10- to 15 year period-are a good first step in creating a savanna. These types of fires will suppress smaller mesquite, and kill some of the seedlings and even some of the seed lying on the ground. Many of the larger mesquite will not be top-killed, which is a goal for savanna management."

Ranchers who use this combination to convert rangeland thickets into a savanna environment may find the wildlife value of the land exceeds its value as a grazing lease, Pinchak

The researchers say ranchers have three viable options for controlling brush with herbicides alone.

One option is to use lower-cost applications of herbicides such as Remedy to achieve brush suppression. Similar to a top-killing fire, the effect of these treatments is shortlived, however, and a re-treatments are necessary to maintain suppres-

One drawback is that surviving mesquite puts out multiple stems and becomes more competitive with grass, and more herbicide-resistant, in coming years. The denser brush foliage can also complicate routine chores such as finding and gathering cattle for branding and weaning.

A second option is combining herbicides such as Remedy and Reclaim to achieve a high level of brush root-kill and top-kill. This may be ideal if the rancher's goal is to turn mesquite thickets into brush free grasslands. Fire, as a maintenance treatment, can then be used 10-15 years later.

A third option is to go for a moderate level of mesquite root-killing using a low rate (about 1/4-pound per acre) of Reclaim herbicide alone, which may leave a few-foliage producing stems on surviving plants. Known as the "Mesquite Savanna" option, this is a good tool for boosting grass productivity for grazing and for providing screening cover for wildlife, Ansley said. Low-intensity fires which do not top-kill the larger mesquite are also part of this management plan.

Before choosing a brush control strategy which utilizes fire, ranchers should ensure their grazing system will provide adequate fine fuel for fire. A rotational grazing system that factors in grazing deferral periods, stocking rates, available forage and "working time" for the brush control treatments may also be necessary.

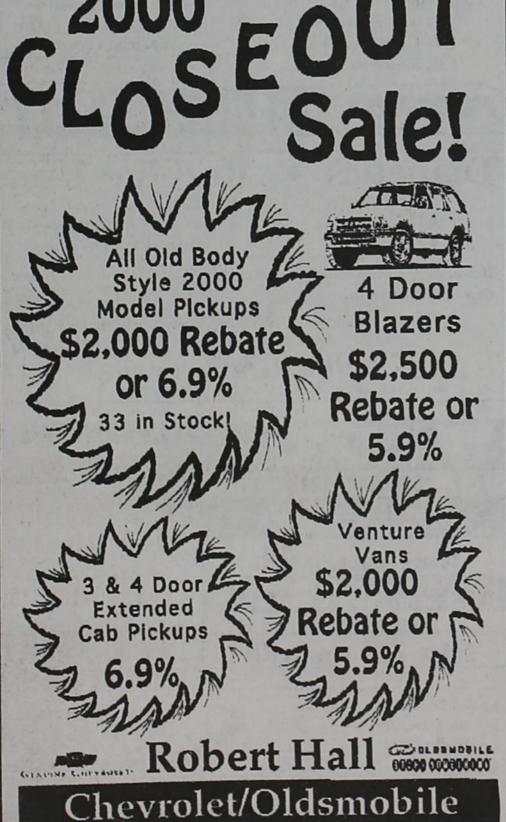

An ideal scenario for using prescribed burning includes removing cattle from the land early enough to allow the grass to build up adequate fuel for the fire, followed by a winter burn and subsequent light stocking-grazing in April after growth-activating spring rains occur. A full stocking rate would not be used until late-May or June.

Pinchak said ranchers should also be ready to regularly evaluate forage quality and quantity after they employ a brush control strategy, so they can capitalize on improved grazing by adjusting their rates for maxi-

PCG BOARD APPROVES

BUDGET/OFFICE RELOCATION Members of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Board of Directors came together Wednesday, July 12, for the organization's first meeting of the 2000-01 fiscal year.

Topping the agenda for the PCG Directors was approval of an operating budget for the organization's new fiscal year which began July 1.

The PCG Board unanimously approved an operating budget totaling $526,841.48 to see the organization through the next budget cycle.

The Board also approved a relocation of the organization's offices to 4517 West Loop 289. The new location is just around the corner from PCG's current offices and will provide an improved level of functionality for the organization's activities.

In addition to the budget and office relocation the PCG Board also approved the support of legislative internship programs within the Agriculture Colleges at Texas Tech University and Texas A&M University.

The endowments, which will total $125,000, will provide the foundation for support one semester-long student internship from each university each year.

Legislative internship programs have long been considered a valuable source of support for agriculture since many of the participants go to work in legislative staff positions after college.

In other business the PCG Board discussed the recent meeting between PCG officers and House Ag Committee Chairman Larry Combest and the status of important crop insurance reform legislation and the cottonseed assistance pro-
