A Memorial Day Service was held in front of the American Legion Building Monday, May 27. Those attending gathered around the flag pole for a patriotic service.

The invocation was given by Joe Campbell. The speaker, Mike Crowley, was introduced by R.C. Giesecke.

Mr. Crowley, who is Minister of the Matador and Roaring Springs Church of Christ, served in the Marines in the Vietnam war. The foundation of his speech was based on World War I quoting famous men that went to fight for their country in honor and dignity as well as our freedom.

J.M. Russell and Charles Keith raised the flag. The pledge of allegiance was led by Luther Green, who also played Taps.

The Veterans then retired and went to the Cemetery to put flags on the graves of the Veterans.

This is the first in the state of Texas in his division.

As an All-State awardee, Dumont was invited to play his required piece, Spring Carnival by Jane Smisor Bastien, on a grand piano at the Honors Recital at Southwest Texas State University. He also received a plaque at the recital naming his All-State Musician.

Accompanying Dumont to the state contest and attending the Honors Recital were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robin Darsey, both of Matador.

Dumont, a fourth grader at Motley County Elementary School, has received four years private instruction in piano as Mrs. Traweck's pupil.

While in San Marcos, the group also visited in the home of Mrs. Traweck's daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Barrow, Laura, and Bryan.

FINALLY, RAIN!

Rain finally came to Motley County Saturday night. Amounts varied all over the county.

Three official reports were recorded by NWVS recorders - in Matador by Don Baxter, 1.80; Buzz Thacker, Roaring Springs, 1.25; and Tommie Cruse in Flomot, 3.

Other reports were from the Roaring Springs Ranch Golf Course, 2.50; Hamilton Farm, east of Roaring Springs, 1.50; Tim Washington, Russellville camp, 3.50 (the gauge was broken off at 3.5); Bird Ranch, 1.50 plus. The catfish tank at Bird Ranch was full Sunday and had been completely dry on Saturday. Rain gauges at the ranch were broken or knocked over by the hail. Three windows were broken on the ranch house.

East of Matador, Tammy Palmer reported the Willie Ranch had 1.30; north of Whiteflat, Wilson Barton reported 3 inches and M.C. Jones, 4.90; Una Simpson, Northfield, 2 inches.

Hopefully this is just the beginning. Keep praying for rain.

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN GENES AND OSTEOPOROSIS

Some people may develop osteoporosis because of a defect in the gene that codes for the vitamin D receptor (VDR).

Whether one will have a fracture due to osteoporosis depends on the peak bone mass that is formed by early adulthood and the rate of bone loss in later life. Genetics have a strong influence on the amount of bone mass or the peak bone mass that can form, according to recent research findings.

Research indicates "an association between common allelic variants in the gene encoding the vitamin D receptor (VDR), bone mineral density and turnover in adults." An allele (pronounced ah-leal) is one of two or more alternative forms of a gene such as the allele for brown eye color; blue eye color alleles are alternate forms of the gene.

The loss of bone mineral density, especially in the lumbar spine (lower back) of postmenopausal women may relate to this genetic coding in the form of a gene for the VDR. A good bone mass can be maintained in some older persons with calcium and vitamin D supplements. (Vitamin D is generally added only to fluid milk but is made naturally in the body when sunshine on the skin causes the body to form it. However, excess vitamin D in supplements can cause a loss of calcium from bones).

A group of 72 elderly men and women of similar age but with different alleles for the VDR gene were given 800 mg. of calcium daily for 18 months. Bone density of the femur (thigh) and the lumbar spine (lower back) was measured every six months. The amount of calcium consumed had very little effect on the amount of bone mineral density in the femur but there was a significant difference between individuals in the lumbar spine.

The men and women were divided into three groups based on the VDR alleles in their genetic coding. One group referred to as "BB", had no vitamin D receptor on either of the two alleles. The second group, "bb", had vitamin D receptor sites on both alleles. The third group, "Bb", had one vitamin D receptor on one allele but not the other.

Thirty subjects had a net loss of lower spine bone mineral density of more than 48 percent per year. However seven (78 percent) of those with no vitamin D receptor sites (the BB group) had lost more than 48 percent per year compared with 15 (41 percent) of those with one receptor site (the Bb group) and eight (31 percent) of those with two receptor sites (bb group). None of the groups had any significant changes of bone mineral density in the femur.

The rate of change of lower spine bone mineral density over the 18 months in both the bb and BB groups was not related to calcium supplementation. The rate of change did not correspond with net daily calcium intake for either bb (-1 percent per gram of calcium per day) or the BB group (negative 3% per gram of calcium per day). However among the bb group, there was a strong positive correlation between the rate of change and median or mean daily calcium intake (7% per gram of calcium per day.)

Therefore, different forms of the vitamin D receptor-gene allelic forms are associated with the rate of bone loss in the lower spine of elderly persons. This genetic marker has identified a small subgroup of persons (BB group with no vitamin D receptor gene forms) who will have a high probability a net bone loss. A larger group (bb group with both vitamin D receptors or restriction sites) are unlikely to lose bone at the lumbar spine regardless of their calcium intake. However in half of the elderly persons (Bb with one vitamin D receptor or restriction site) the rate of change was related to overall calcium intake.

Such variation in responses in elderly, and "presumably the younger, people in the response of bone mass to calcium intake and supplementation may be explained partly by the interaction between environmental and genetic factors." In the future, analysis of the vitamin D receptor-gene forms "may allow better definition and prediction of these responses." Also, in the future you can look forward to having gene replacements which could eliminate not having the vitamin D receptor gene.

Without the benefit of individual genetic analysis and technology that we'll have in the future, it is wise for all individuals to consume at least 800 mg. of calcium on a daily basis, to stay active and to avoid smoking. One should also exercise the long and weight bearing bones by walking and/or repeating weight lifting daily if possible. Use even one pound cans of food in each hand for weight lifting. Talk with your doctor about estrogen replacement therapy and a calcium supplement if you are unable to consume more than one cup of fluid milk daily. Your doctor may advise that you purchase and take lactaid tablets before drinking any milk to help digest the lactose in milk or calcium supplements. Also, as you select by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Guide Pyramid, choose other calcium rich foods in the dairy group as well as dried beans, dark green leafy vegetables, fruits, fish with small bones such as salmon and tilapia, and tofu. Choose a wide variety of foods to eat from each food group everyday.

Educational programs of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age, or national origin.

LIBRARY NOTES
by
Suzanne Abbott

The Library has a copy of the 1996 AT&T Toll-Free National Directory, now in the reference section ready for your use. Did you know that toll-free numbers can be either 800 or 888?

Letrica K. Dickinson, former resident of Motley County, now living in Alpine, Alabama, attended a sidewalk sale in Pensacola, Florida, and found a copy of a book about Dickens, Texas. It's a small world, isn't it? How do you suppose that book got to Pensacola? Anyway, Mrs. Dickinson bought the book and sent it to the Motley County Library. We appreciate this gift that will be a welcome addition to our Texas Collection. This book, Prairie Shadows, by Rehnm Rickey Graves, mentions the Matadors, Duncan Tank, schools in Dickens and Spur, and many of the teachers there in the 1920's.

Pizza Hut and the U.S. Department of Education have joined together to sponsor READ*WRITE*NOW! -- a National program to improve the reading and writing skills of America's children, from preschool to sixth grade. The way this program works is that children agree to read and write just 30 minutes a day, five days a week. One day a week, children meet with a learning partner (a reader who is a family member, a teenager or a senior citizen).

Learning partners tutor children and provide extra help in reading and writing.

When the learning partner and the child decide that the child has met his goal for the summer reading and writing program, the learning partner fills out and signs a coupon that the child may exchange for a free Personal Pan Pizza at any participating Pizza Hut restaurant. The kits for this READ*WRITE*NOW? program are available here at the Library. If you know a child who would like to participate in this program, come by the library and pick up one of these kits. The kit includes a certificate for the learning partner and for the child, instructions for the program, the blank Pizza Hut coupon, and two bookmarks.

Also, children in grades K-5 are eligible to participate in Ready! Set! Read! at the Library during June. Each Thursday in June there will be a story time at the Library at 4:00 p.m. Children may read books to enter a contest for prizes during this summer reading program. Registration blanks are at the Library. As soon as a child registers, he may begin reading books that will count toward the contest to be decided by a drawing on June 27.

Motley County Arts & Crafts Complete Projects

The Motley County Arts & Crafts Club enjoyed some of their favorite things Monday, May 6.

The program for the day was odds and ends and this and that, wood and craft, taught by Lorene, Joy and Winifred Lee.

Lorene taught several how to finish oil paintings begun earlier. Joy and Winifred worked on wood crafts. Pauline Hand was present to help anyone with unfinished watercolors.

Winifred Lee brought a wooden angel for all who needed a project to work. The finished angel was a beauty to behold. These angels will be shown at the fall bazaar, also recipe holders that were unique and varied. It was a pleasant and lovely time for all who participated.

A sack lunch was fun at lunch time and joy and laughter prevailed. Many expressed what a great time it was.

Joy Archer, Club President, presided at the business meeting. Docents were appointed for May. Programs were also planned for the coming year.

The program for June will be a painting class on metal taught by Lorene Lancaster at Senior Citizens Center, a sack lunch at noon, all members are urged to attend.

Members present were Dora Watson, Verdie Neighbors, Bonnie Edmondson, Joy Archer, Lorene Lancaster, Bertha Moore, Audrey Jones, Joyce Meredith, Elsie Thacker, Pauline Hand, Winifred Lee, Toni Fellows, Lou Ann Jameson, Una Simpson, Geraldine Key, Marion Woodruff, Winifred Darsey, and guest, little Miss Hannah Rose Alexander.

Guest Speakers At Do Gooders Club Meeting

Beverly Logsdon and Charles Keith were the guest speakers at the Do Gooders Club meeting Tuesday afternoon, May 7 at the Community Center in Flomot.

Mr. Keith, representative of the Motley County Chamber of Commerce, told of plans for an observance of Shannon Davidson Day in Matador. The date is pending for sometime during 1997. The original celebration that honored Mr. Davidson of Flomot for winning the Pony Express Race in 1939 has been declared the most successful event in the history of Motley County. Mr. Keith asked for the support of the club members and residents of Flomot to make this a Motley County historical and enjoyable event for everyone. The Chamber is hoping with the success of the event it will become an annual M.C. attraction.

Mrs. Logsdon, regional Home Extension agent of Memphis, presented a program on Financial Planning. Before making a decision you could regret involving medical, retirement and Social Security, she stated you should gather facts and assess the impact. In closing, she encouraged individuals to obtain legal and financial assistance before making final decisions.

Mesdames Leona Degan and Annie B. Cloyd presided at a pink floral designed service. They served refreshments of finger sandwiches, assorted dips with vegetables, fruit and chips and strawberry slush. The table was laid with a white lace cloth and centered with a pink caladium potted plant.

President, Mrs. B. Rogers, conducted the business meeting. Chances were sold for the centerpiece plant to help with the repair expenses at the Community Center following the recent break-in. Mrs. Trula Martin was the lucky winner. In other business, they discussed painting the utility room, putting down baseboards, new mini-blinds and etc. at the Center.

Members attending were Mesdames Erma Washington, Jimmie Hunter, Judy True, Barbara Payne, Bernice Bond, Christeen Gilbert, Alma Shorter, Edith Washington, Trula Martin, Annie B. Cloyd, Leona Degan and B. Rogers. Guests were Mrs. Tom Butler of Amarillo and Mrs. Opal Hamilton of Quitaque.

Some Strange Expressions

There are certain expressions which we sometimes use that are called "Oxymoron." And they are a little strange. Let me give you several examples of what I am talking about. Here are some: "Good Grief!", "Jumbo Shrimp," "Numb Feeling," "Plastic Glasses," "Fresh Frozen," "Exact Estimate," "Working Vacation," "Negative Growth," (I like this one) "Congressional Leadership." For the golfers among us, "Metal Woods." Here are some more that are heard quite often: "Unbiased Opinion," "Oddly Appropriate," and finally "Clearly Misunderstood."

By definition, an Oxymoron is "...a two-word phrase containing contradictory elements." Yes, there are some uses in religion of the "oxymoron." One of the most common is the term, "Lukewarm Christian", which is used by many people. These are two words that just do not belong together. The Scripture says in Revelation 3:16, "...because you are lukewarm, neither hot or cold, I am about to spit you out of my mouth." The Lord shows us in this statement that one might be "Lukewarm," or that one might be a Christian. But He doesn't allow for the "Lukewarm Christian."

Some oxymoron usages are funny and indeed some are strange, but "Lukewarm Christian" is a pathetic expression.

Do what you can, with what you have, where you are. —Theodore Roosevelt

A publisher made a mistake. He printed the name of a living man in the obituary column. The man stormed into his office and said, "You've hurt me and my business. How could you do such a thing?" "I'm sorry," he answered. "But I'll put your name in the birth column tomorrow and give you a fresh start."

That's what our Lord does when you receive Him as your Savior. He gives you a fresh start. Your life becomes an affirmation, not a defamation; a tower of strength, not a cesspool of weakness.

The Bible says, "When someone becomes a Christian he becomes a brand new person inside. He is not the same anymore. A new life has begun."

CeeVee Anticipates Historical Marker

The original store was built in 1928 and burned in the mid 40's. Will Newsom and James Patterson built this rock store back. Later the Tracy Evans' bought it. It closed in mid-60's. This picture was taken in 1963, Jerry Barlow (left), and Tracy Evans.

CeeVee residents have applied to the Cottle County Historical Commission and the Texas Historical Commission for placement of a historical marker at the location of the original C V Ranch house, which dates back prior to the turn of the century. The 27" x 42" marker on an aluminum pole will depict the history of the C V and Mill Iron Ranches and the community of Cee Vee.

The proposed marker will be located on the right-of-way on the south side of FM 1440 at the site of the original Cee Vee Mercantile Store. The Tracy and Bennie Evans family has agreed to permit the use of the land where the original Cee Vee store was built for development of the Tracy Evans Memorial Park. They have also agreed to donate rock from the remains of the Cee Vee Store for landscaping the project.

Signs are planned on Highway 83 at Cee Vee road 1440 and at the Northfield crossing on the North Peace River to direct travelers to the Cee Vee Historical Marker.

The Texas Historical Commission requires $850 at the time of the application is submitted to forge the marker. A "Cee Vee Historical Marker Fund" has been established at Guaranty Federal Savings and Loan in Childress to raise funds for the marker. Anyone wishing to donate to this project may make checks payable to the "Cee Vee Historical Marker Fund" c/o Lorene Newman Rains, 1104 Avenue F-NW, Childress, TX 79201. Any money received which is not used for the marker project will be donated to the Cee Vee Cemetery Association for maintenance of the cemetery.

Drought conditions have created a serious problem for cotton producers across the Texas High Plains. According to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers the area could see a significant decrease in 1996 cotton acreage. Originally the High Plains was thought to be in line for slightly more than 3 million acres of cotton again this year.

Little or no sub-soil moisture, however, poses the possibility of a significant drop in acreage, mostly from dryland production areas. Unfortunately, many irrigated fields face similar problems. Most of the problems for irrigated fields stem from reduced irrigation capacity, high daily temperatures, and strong, drying winds.

For the High Plains, which typically produces between 15 and 20 percent of the U.S. crop, the situation could reduce production by one-half or more.

"In 1996 it appears the main focus of most producers will simply be to survive," sums up PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson. "The entire High Plains region is below average in terms of rainfall received. Without some type of relief I am not sure how this crop is going to turn out."

Johnson notes that many producers who have Federal Crop Insurance are concerned about planting requirements which would provide them access to the safety net the program is supposed to provide.

Producers have requested the help of the Texas Congressional delegation to get through this situation. Statewide the drought is causing very similar problems for farmers and ranchers.

Economically the loss of a significant portion of the High Plains cotton crop could mean a reduction of $1-2 Billion in economic activity.

It isn't only farmers and ranchers who will feel the pinch. Farm and ranch suppliers and urban retailers would also be affected.

Social Security Commissioner Cites Future Value Of Social Security

Will future beneficiaries get a fair return on their contributions in terms of the benefits they receive from Social Security? Shirley S. Chater, Commissioner of Social Security answered this question in a speech before a Senate Subcommittee recently.

Unfortunately, she said, many critics of Social Security view it only as a savings plan for retirement and as a return on investment. Some believe that if they were allowed to invest their Social Security taxes in private investments, such as stocks and bonds, they would receive a higher rate of return - in their view, a fairer return -- than Social Security currently provides. This view misrepresents the real value of the Social Security program by excluding those features that have contributed the most to society as a whole.

Social Security is successful and popular because it strikes a balance between the two complementary goals of individual equity and social adequacy, the Commissioner said. It meets its equity goal by providing benefit protection related to an individual's contributions and its social adequacy goals by allowing many citizens to enjoy a reasonable standard of living. Social Security allows almost 42 percent of the elderly - 10 million people - to live out of poverty. Some 30 percent of Social Security benefits go to young families of disabled or deceased workers that have not been able to sufficiently protect themselves against the unexpected loss of a worker's earnings.

"Because Social Security satisfies goals so vital to our national prosperity, we disadvantage ourselves if we measure its worth simply by comparing contributions paid and benefits received," Commissioner Chater stated.

She noted that any analysis of the Social Security program shows that, in the past, benefits tended to be generous relative to contributions. As the program has matured, the return on contributions has decreased, but remains generous.

For example, take a person with average wages who retires at age 65 in 1996, who paid $21,518 in the employee's share of Social Security contributions. When interest on those contributions is factored in, the result-value is $73,703. This worker will receive a monthly benefit of $890. He or she will recover all contributions, with interest, in 8 1/3 years, and can be expected to live nearly 10 years beyond the break-even point.

In the future, the rate of return, while declining, will continue to be fair, especially when viewed within the context of the broad social objectives of Social Security. For example, a "baby boom" worker with average wages who retires at 66 in 2015 will pay $59,562 in the employee's share of Social Security contributions ($258,824 with interest). This worker will receive $2,074 in monthly benefits or $1,006 in real terms, and recover those contributions in about 12 years. The worker can be expected to live 6 years beyond the break-even point based on life expectancy projections for 2015.

"We cannot accurately project what lifetime benefits for those retiring 20 to 40 years from now will be. And we know that changes to the program are required to sustain Social Security in the long term," the Commissioner stated.

"For 60 years Social Security has been one of the most important and successful government programs. Thus, those who seek to measure its value must consider the design of the program, what makes it work, rather than restrict their analysis to a simple measure of a rate of return on contributions."

CAPITOL COMMENT

U.S. SENATOR
KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Justice for All, Not Just for the Criminals

Despite victims' rights groups raising a ruckus, the Texas criminal justice system will release 32-year-old convicted child molester Larry Don McQuay after six years of serving an eight-year sentence in order to comply with the state's mandatory early release laws.

McQuay has admitted to molesting more than 200 children, and has repeatedly told prison officials he will molest again.

"I am doomed to eventually rape and then murder poor little victims to keep them from telling on me," was the chilling message he sent to a victims' rights advocacy group in Houston.

Outraged Texans found it hard to believe that state authorities would even consider setting this man free.

As of this writing, McQuay is scheduled for release April 8. He plans to return to his home in San Antonio. Dangerous though it may be, state officials have very few options. Texas prisons have been under federal court supervision for nearly a quarter-century. The prison population caps imposed by the federal court in 1982 made it necessary for the state to increase its early releases by 400 percent. Thanks to the federal court order, Texas inmates — even those who commit random murders or repeatedly molest children — have ended up serving an average of two months for every year of their sentences as a result of federal court orders.

McQuay is one of 4,000 sex offenders who will serve only a portion of their sentences before release over the next nine years — 1,000 are to be set free this year alone.

And the federal court requirements have cost Texas taxpayers $1.5 billion, forcing them to build the largest prison system in the free world and supply inmates with color TVs and with law libraries so they can continue to sue the state. The federal court has ruled they are entitled to athletic facilities and other amenities which taxpayers can't always afford to provide their communities. This certainly is not justice for law-abiding, hard-working Texans.

The Texas Attorney General filed a motion in federal court on March 25 asking that control of the prison system be returned to the state. But so far the court has not set a hearing date on this request. For the immediate future, control of Texas' prisons remains out of Texas' hands.

I have introduced legislation to allow Texas and other states to regain the right to run their own prison systems. The "Stop Turning Out Prisoners" Act, (STOP), would curb the authority of federal judges to impose standards which result in the early release of criminals such as Larry McQuay.

It would prohibit federal judges from using one prisoner's suit as an excuse for taking over the administration of an entire prison system, and it reduces the authority of federal courts to impose population caps. The STOP Act also puts limits on fees the state must pay to prisoners' attorneys. Those who filed the 1972 lawsuit which resulted in the takeover of Texas prisons received $10 million courtesy of state taxpayers.

Enough is enough. For too long the comfort and convenience of convicted felons has taken precedence over the interests of society as a whole, and victims in particular. The STOP Act will restore balance and common sense to prison systems nationwide — and put Texans back in charge of their criminal justice system.

Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day.

—Benjamin Franklin
