Motley County Sewing Club which consists of two sisters, Chloe and Dode Gleghorn, has been busy, not only preparing for the District 3 Fashion Show, but with many community service activities. This is Chloe's second year in 4-H and her sister's first. Chloe has taken on a leadership role by helping and showing her sister with both sewing and service to others.

In honor of their aunt, these two sisters have been busy making head turbans for cancer patients. They delivered the turbans to the Lubbock cancer treatment center that took such good care of their aunt in her time of need.

Chloe has shown her sister how to sew goody bags to be used during patient's recreation. These were delivered to Hackberry Creek Care Center.

The two sisters have also been busy constructing their outfits for the contest. Dode is making capris and will enter them in the pop-over category which is for a quick to make skirt, shorts or pants, with simple casing and elastic waistband and hem for first time participants. Chloe, who is really an excellent seamstress, has made a complete outfit consisting of shorts and a halter top for the casual category. Both girls were judged locally for the experience of competing and being in front of a judge and they also modeled their outfits at Hackberry Creek Care Center.

Chloe received 4th place at Chillicothe and Dode did an excellent job for her first year. Congratulations to both these hard working girls.

Commissioner's Court hears favorable wind energy update Agri-Life Extension reports stats on MC volunteerism

By Carol Campbell

The Commissioner's Court met in regular session on Monday, April 13, covering an 11-item agenda including a favorable wind energy update by the county attorney, and two briefings by the county judge on the Rolling Plains Organization of Rural Transportation (RPORT) and the Caprock Community Action group.

Attending the meeting were Commissioners Russell Alexander, Franklin Jameson, Roy Gene Stephens; Donnie Turner, Ed D. Smith, County Judge, and Kate Hurt, County Clerk: Also in attendance were Sheriff Michael Crutchley, Tom Edwards, County Attorney, and Carol Campbell, Assistant to the County Judge; and Ben Kautz, TxDOT.

Edwards reported to the court that he had met in Paducah last week with representatives building the new wind energy transmission lines, running east-west, north of continued on page 3

Matador City Council sends Letter of Intent to wind energy group

By Carol Campbell

The Matador City Council met in regular session on Thursday, April 9. Attending were Mayor Pat Smith, City Secretary Debra Scott and Councilmen Pat Seigler, Shane Jones, and Alvin Alexander. Absent were Councilmen Chuck Ream and Kay Bailey, and City Superintendent Steve Barton.

The mayor informed the council that the chemical stabilization product that was to be placed on a test road had been put on temporary hold. On February 9, Motley County Commissioner's Court voted unanimously to allow the city to use about $1600 of the county's designated TxDOT allotment for a roller and distributor to spread a chemical stabilization product on a test road. The product claims to eliminate grading for 4- to 5-years. The city will be coordinating with TxDOT and councilman Alvin Alexander to set a start date,

Smith said.

City Secretary Debra Scott reported that the city had received permission from the U.S. Department of Justice to change the May polling location from the courthouse to city hall. In addition, she reported that the first hotel occupancy tax was collected for the quarter in the amount of $837.00. This amount was only collected on one hotel. The projected income for the quarter is $1600.

Mayor Smith reported to the council that a "non-binding Letter of Intent" was sent to U.S. Wind Energy group. In February, Foster Cannon presented a development plan for city municipalities at the regular council meeting. Cannon said U.S. Wind Energy was the first to recognize the opportunity for an innovative solution for city municipalities to cash in on the wind energy initiative. U.S. Wind Energy model will focus on windmills that generate 10 megawatt wind farms or less which will not require changes or upgrades in transmission lines, he said. Recently, in a conversation with Cannon, Mayor Smith said he was informed that "this (Matador) grid can handle five megawatts." In addition, the city is seeking grants through the South Plains Association of Governments to see if the city can qualify for "some of the $30 billion set aside for wind energy," Smith said. A wind energy initiative for the city has the potential of generating income to improve the local economy and bring new families to Motley County, he said.

On April 9th, Pre K students from Motley County came to the Hackberry Creek Care Center to hunt eggs and sing Easter songs to the residents. It's exciting to see news about the sewing club and to know that sewing continues to be an inspiration for young women in Motley County. Actually I think there is a resurgence of sewing across the country and fashion shows of homemade clothing are showing up everywhere. My designs will be featured in a fashion show in Lexington, Kentucky.

began in Stella Tilson's back bedroom, (or was it the front bedroom depending on which door you came through?) in her home in Whiteflat. The one still standing, yet falling down. I've made frequent visits to that abandoned home site, tentatively marching through the brush, collecting stickers on my pants while on the outlook for snakes, just so I could peer though the window and hear the hum of the old sewing machine and see the fabric I had purchased from the Variety Store spread out across the bed and remember the conversations my cousin, Linda Tilson, and I had planning our designs and plans for tions, call us anytime. the week end in Matador.

other in about forty five years, however, recently, via the internet and email, we have picked up that conversation about sewing. Now, we are not only sewing, we are painting the silk fabric we use and making wearable art and selling it. Linda stretches her silk across large frames that accommodate five yards of fabric. I wrap my fabric around pvc pipes and ropes. The skills we learned in home ec-classes and 4-H have transferred to My sewing career actually running our own businesses and creating our own designs. I look forward to seeing more work from the young women in the sewing club. And I encourage others to consider sewing their own clothing. It's a great way to save money. If my mom hadn't been such an excellent seamstress, I wouldn't have had nearly as nice of clothes that I had while growing up. And if you can't fine new fabric you like, consider using old fabric from recycled clothes, or paint your own. Check out Dharma Trading Company online for supplies and ideas. Jessie Powell got along quite well in life, no doubt with aplomb, long before running water became "modern" in her way of life and, certainly, before and after the masses allowed television to become an intrusive force in homes beginning midway last century.

A lovely and gracious lady of stamina in mind and spirit, she was petite of frame, forthright in speech, well-disciplined and long in life just beyond 100 years. She was strong of will, which was reflected in her brilliant, resolute and sensitive blue eyes, which she passed on to her only child, Ralph Powell, who, like his mother, followed his bliss, his dreams, which weren't necessarily hers.

"She was always a happy kind of person, always friendly to everybody," recalled Bob Midkiff, a Midland rancher and bosom friend to Ralph Powell, 71, since their youth in the Midland Country. "I don't guess she ever got mad at anybody but Ralph."

They, mother and son, shared an independent nature richly basked in love and somewhat conflicted with willpower on what to do with his life – preach or ranch for a living.

"She was a tremendous lady, hardworking lady, very conservative, very religious," Midkiff said. "She didn't waste any money or any time either, not a bit." Like her son, her late husband (E.R. "Gene" Powell, 1896-1974) was a "fine fellow, a prince," Midkiff said.

A celebrated Midland public schoolteacher, faithful Sunday School teacher and, like her son, an avid reader, "She didn't spend any time watching television."

remembrances written at age 93, Jessie Powell noted that the "advent of running water" perhaps was the "most useful change in daily living" in America's country and small-town life well into the 1900s. "We used a bar of soap and a wash pan of warm water to 'clean up' " before she was introduced to piped-in household water. She acclaimed the "rugged individual characters" of earlier years and bewailed the popularity of television. "Most everyone reads a newspaper daily. But, TV may have more to do with making us like robots. We buy the things advertised. We go along with the opinions expressed, so that in every way, we are becoming more alike. If our leadership is worthy, this happening could be for our good, but it is frightening how easily we can become people who quit thinking for ourselves.' Jessie Powell wanted her son to be a preacher. Ralph Powell, a kind, hearty and adventuresome soul on rangeland where livestock graze on either side of the Rio Grande, wanted nothing more in his career beyond working cattle. He was a cowpoke at heart and remains so. Forebears on either side of his family ranched. "She tried to keep me in line. All I wanted to be was a cowboy," the goodhumored Ralph Powell said last week at his mother's funeral in Midland. "She had those brilliant blue eyes, is "very smart" rather for me to be a preacher." That was not his calling. It was hers for him.

And neither did he want to be a schoolteacher like his mother nor a geologist like his father, who ranched in New Mexico.

Jessie Powell, nearing her 101st birthday, died at Matador near the Mott Creek Ranch, a former line camp of the sprawling Matador Ranch, where her son and his rancher-wife, Marisue Powell, live. The Mott Creek Ranch is on the West Texas. Rolling Plains at base of the Caprock Escarpment and just south of the Texas Panhandle.

Jessie Powell, increasingly frail but nonetheless spirited, moved up there from Midland in her 99th year to be near her son and his wife in another West Texas ranching country.

By accident, she fell, broke her breastbone, was laid up in pain and drifted into depression but only for a while.

"It was the worst three days of my life," Jessie Powell told her daughter-in-law. "I prayed, but God didn't answer. He had never deserted me before. Then I realized I had only been thinking about myself. I vowed to put other people first. And once again God was there for me."

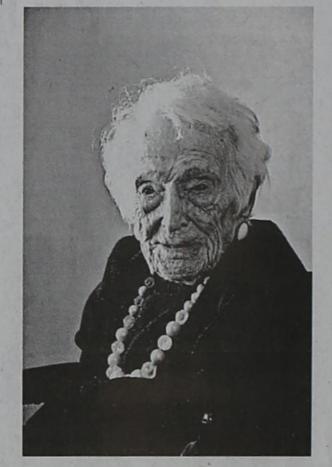

Born in 1908 in Seymour near Wichita Falls, Jessie Powell at age 17 in 1925 enrolled in the College of Industrial Arts and Sciences (CIA, now Texas Woman's University), studied English and took up teaching as a vocation from the Rio Grande Valley to near the Red River.

In 1929, she married geologist E.R. "Gene" Powell, and together they survived the Great Depression. They got around in a $35 Model T Ford and lived for a spell on a farm after his job played out. It was on In the foreword to her manuscript of the farm where Jessie Powell was severely burned while cleaning clothes on a winter's day. Fortunately on the payroll once again, Gene Powell took his wife to his new work assignment: heart of the Great Dust Bowl in Kansas where Ralph Powell was born in 1937. On the town-to-town work trail once again, the Powell family eventually landed in the Midland Country where Jessie Powell resumed her teaching, and Ralph Powell pursued his quest to be a ranching cowboy, never a preacher. Midland's Judy Jackson, who hails from the Stamford ranching country between Abilene and Wichita Falls, became a friend to the Powell mother and son by way of her late 1950s college roommate at The University of Texas in Austin. Her roommate, Betty Cole Ashcraft, was married to Ralph Powell in 1961. Bob Midkiff introduced the couple to one another. "She was a wonderful lady, very hardworking, a tiny little thing (at 5-foot tall or so) - a Mighty Mouse. She loved her family dearly, for sure," Judy Jackson said. "She was always helping people any way she could. She was a great seamstress, a wonderful cook. She shared her talents with many people." Jessie Powell's son, who was hell-bent on ranching and cattle-trading, has and well-read. His father was "quiet and smart as a whip," said Judy Jackson who, as a dear friend to the Powell family, observed throughout the years that "all of the women loved Ralph Powell." And he "loved to waltz" and to dance to the Western Swing Music of Bob Wills and to the honky-tonk tunes of Ray Price.

Bobby and Martha Matthews, dear friends of the Powell family, expressed their deep love for Jessie Powell.

Glenna Sommers Gifford, who works at Midland's Haley Memorial Library and History Center, recalled Jessie Powell as her second-grade teacher at South Elementary School in 1952. "She was great a dedicated, kind person, very caring." While she was "easy-going," she all the while "kept our attention and required work from you. I can't remember a whole lot of my teachers, but I remember her."

Haley's director, J.P. "Pat" McDaniel, described Jessie Powell as "one of those old-timers . . . a community builder."

Jessie Powell, "a gentle lady . . . who radiated the love of Christ," taught Sunday School at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church for decades, noted Joetta Franklin Harris.

Her funeral was held at the church where Doug Lamb, in eulogizing Jessie Powell, said that she was "a conduit of the grace of God" and "never, ever, gave up (on life)." And in extolling her faithfulness, the preacher said that Jessie Powell overall taught Sunday School for 80 years from age 13 to age 93.

Jessie Powell was "gracefully elegant," reflected West Texas rancher Candi Cowden, who worked in the Midland Ranch Rodeo with Ralph Powell. She possessed "an inner strength and an inner peace which you could feel in her presence."

the county. Later that week, the judge and Edwards met with representatives of the company building lines from Carson through Briscoe County to the new Dickens substation. "While this is still in the preliminary stages, both representatives anticipate a completion date of 2013 for the lines," he said. "As opposed to what we have seen and heard from others, these folks are a breath of fresh air," Edwards added.

"Both reps affirmed that once the substations are sited, they will come up with three to five routing scenarios for the transmission lines, based on geography and other factors," Edwards said. "The Public Utility Commission will make the final decision where they will be routed."

In other business, Judge Smith reported that RPORT completed their quarterly meeting at TxDOT in Childress, where they were informed that a proposal was in the works to create a TxDOT regional headquarters in Lubbock. There are 13 counties in this district that would be affected, Smith said. "We were informed by Marty Smith, Tx-DOT Regional Director, that the State of Texas received $474 million in stimulus money to be funneled into Tx-DOT," he said. "The Childress office asked for $20 million much money for road projects Judge Smith said. The Burn

Every 12 years, state agencies in Texas undergo a sunset review process. TxDOT has been under scrutiny by the Sunset Advisory Commission, conducting an in-depth review of the agency. In June 2008, Sunset staff issued a report highlighting several issues and recommendations related to the operations and functions of the Texas Department of Transportation. Recommendations include combining this region with four other districts, with headquarters in Lubbock.

"This move would eliminate jobs in our county," Smith said, encouraging the court to put pressure on elected officials to locate regional offices in Motley, Hall or Childress counties to better serve the rural area. There are four districts in the Lubbock region, Smith said.

Further, Smith said "we owe TxDOT a big thank you for helping us with the fire." A Matador Ranch fire claimed about 200 acres of ranchland on April 9. TxDOT responded to the fire with a motorgrader. "At best, we provided traffic control," Kautz said. "The local people already had a handle on the fire when we got there." Anna Geneva C. Griffin Geneva Griffin of Lubbock passed away Thursday, April 9, 2009. Graveside services will be Monday, April 13th at 10:00 a.m. at Resthaven Memorial Park. A memorial service will be held at Westmont Christian Church at 2:00 p.m. with Rev. Clint Stephenson officiating. Visitation for family and friends will be from 4:00-6:00 p.m. Sunday, April 12th at Resthaven Funeral Home. Geneva was born August 2, 1918, in Matador, Texas, to Ivy Odella Hodges and James Juryens Cooper. Geneva's aunt, Nora C. Cooper, was memorialized by the State of Texas as the first white child born in an all Native American area, Motley County. Graduating as Valedictorian of Matador High School in 1936, she continued her education at Texas Wesleyan College in Fort Worth and later attended Draughons Business College in Lubbock. She engaged in a lifetime of ranching. She married Jimmie Boyd Worsham November 11, 1939. On July 23, 1971, Geneva married James Elvin Griffin.

Geneva worked for the ASCS in Stinnett, Texas, as well as in Aspermont and Crosbyton, Texas, where she retired in 1979. Geneva was a member of Westmont Christian Church. She was also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star serving as Worthy Matron for the Stinnett chapter and later for the Floydada chapter. Flomot News

Roaring Springs News By Monta Marshall

It is fun when someone asks me about Lil' Toot or tells me whatever I wrote the previous week starts them remembering something similar that happened to them. The purpose of my writing is to bring a smile.

Another elder citizen or Roaring Springs has died. Onie Bell died on Friday morning. Onie had been ill for some time. Onie was a kind loving person. Onie was a 'saver'. She saved many things thinking she or someone else might have a need for her collections. One time her saved stuff was needed by Kids Camp for a craft project. She was always eager to be of help to anyone needing help. She made many caps for the children at St. Jude's cancer center. She will be missed.

About thirty members of the Bell family were able to attend Onie's funeral including her twin sister Ona Bell (they married brothers) from Hereford, TX. Devonne said four generations of the Bell family were represented. The family was served sandwiches, cookies and coffee at the Community Center by Devonne Dillard and Pearl Patten after the service. Matt Crawford officiated at the service.

A surprising thing happened early Friday morning. Someone unknown erected a tall cross on the lawn at the First Baptist Church. White stones were put at the base and red stains to represent Christ's blood that was shed for us were on the wood and puddled on the rocks below. There was a crown of thorns made from a cat's claw bush. Whoever made this graphic display surely made a very appropriate reminder for Easter. On Sunday, Roaring Springs churches had a larger than usual crowds in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Rusty Ingram or Plainview and their son and his family; and Ray Rice of Matador visited at the First United Methodist Church: Several visitors attended the Church of Christ, among them were Casey and Jackie Bell and son of Clarendon, daughter Harold and Barbara Parks; Bruce and Dorothy Lefevre's son Billy, wife Christie and children of Lockney; Bradley, Welsyn, Charlee and Edie Thacker of Amarillo and Blair Thacker Wilson of Lubbock, children of Jeff Thacker and the Danny Davises. The Full Gospel were blessed by several of Kim Woolsey's family, Debbie Braselton's children and Sut and Francine Braselton of Paducah. Matador News

Gathering at the Hotel Matador last weekend were friends and family of Brad Peterman of Lubbock and Shannon Phillips, formerly of Midland, who were married Saturday on a hilltop near Afton on property owned by the groom's father.

Dawn Peterman of Lubbock, mother of the groom, hosted the celebration along with Jeffrey Peterman, also of Lubbock.

Also gathering in Matador for a celebration of the nuptials was Shirley Lawson of Portland, Michigan (in the summer), and Mobile, Alabama (in the winter), who is the grandmother of the groom.

Lawson traveled to Matador from Portland with the groom's aunt and uncle, Rocky and Tom Teitsma, and their sons, Keegan and Kendall. Keegan studies criminal justice at Michigan State University, and Kendall is in junior high school in Portland, where his father is a policeman.

Joining them at Hotel Matador were Jill Melson of Lubbock and Addie Lawson of Mobile, Alabama, both aunts of the groom.

Other guests were Julie

Mosher, also an aunt of the groom, and cousins Jackie Mosher, Ann Mosher, Jennifer Mosher, and Michael Shauver, all of Michigan (even though Michael is a Tech graduate who came to Texas to learn to coach football). Also attending was Rosemary Southwell, a high school friend of the groom's mother, Dawn.

First Baptist Church Matador to hosting FREE Dave Ramsey Town Hall for Hope Event April 23, 2009 at 7:00 p.m.

Town Hall for Hope is your opportunity to sit down with people in your community for a nationwide town hall meeting led by Dave Ramsey.

Thousands of venues across the country will host the event, broadcasting Dave's live presentation. In the opening half hour, Dave will offer straight talk about the economy, recession, foreclosures and more. He'll carefully explain where we've come from, where we are now, and what we should be doing with our money during this time. Then, Dave will spend an hour answering your questions live!

"THIS WORLD IS NOT MY HOME"

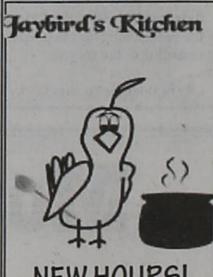

We find ourselves inhabiting a worldly, physical body with all of its imperfections and limitations. We know, somewhere in the back of our minds, that our time on this earth is limited. And we also know that there imore to this life than what is seen with the eye.

It was C. S. Lewis who said, "If I find in myself a desire which no experience in this world can satisfy, the most probable explanation is that I was made for another world."

The fact is that God made us for something more than just this earth ... something much better than this earth. In reading II Corinthians 5 we find that our God "prepared us for this very purpose," i.e. to inhabit a "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Since we are a people who have a marvelous inheritance waiting for us in heaven, shouldn't we be a people of purpose. A "purposed people" who are seeking to be well pleasing unto God. Why not join me in worship this Lord's day as we examine God's eternal purpose for us?

It's been a while since I've shared the library monthly statistics with you, but I didn't forget. March was just as busy as ever! We checked out a total of 624 materials. 179 people came to use the computers. 408 folks visited the library! We issued five new library cards, three meetings were held at the library, and a whopping 24 overdue books were returned!

As many of you know, Earth Day is April 22. And here at the library, we try to be conscious of Mother Earth throughout the year. But I'm using this day as an excuse to answer the library's number one most frequently asked question: "What do I do with books I no longer want?" The Motley County Library would love to have them. I personally HATE to see a book thrown away! So, as you think of ways to celebrate Earth Day, remember that the Library can use your clean, old books and videos. And what we don't use gets placed in the annual Friends of the Library book sale, where they're destined to find a new home. And the best part is, it's keeping books out of the waste stream.

The Month of April also celebrates another very important cause. National Volunteer Week is April 19 to 25. The Motley County Library certainly wouldn't be where it is today without the help of so many generous volunteers. Because of the dedication of people like Suzanne Abbott, PK Green, Ruby McGuire, D.A. McGuire, Marihelen Wason, Pina Sturdivant, June Moss, Lyn Montgomery and Penny Kline, the library is able to be open an additional 156 hours each year. That seems like a huge amount, when the only compensation these folks get is a "Thank You." But, I'm saying it again, and it won't be the last time. . . "Thank You Volunteers!!"

2008 Farm Bill Meeting – April 21

On April 21 at 9:30am in the Library Annex Building, the Motley County FSA Office and the Motley County Extension Office will sponsor a 2008 Farm Bill training to educate producers on the new farm bill.

Amy Hackler, Motley County FSA Officer, will be presenting information on new Payment Limitations, AGI eligibility criteria, and the SURE program. Ryan Martin, Motley County Extension Agent, will present information on the new ACRE program along with a decision ad program developed by the Agricultural & Food Policy Center to help producers make the best decision for their farms. New information on Certificate of Origin Labeling requirements for producers will also be discussed.

Free Beef Quality Training Offered in Lubbock

LUBBOCK - The Texas AgriLife Extension Service and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association will conduct a free Texas Beef Quality Producer Program on April 21 in Lubbock.

Registration begins at 9:30 org. a.m. at the Texas AgriLife Research and Extension Center located three miles north of Lubbock International Airport on East Farm-to-Market 1294. Robert Scott, AgriLife Exten- Extension. sion agent for Lubbock County, said the Texas Beef Quality Producer Program is a management system that helps producers improve the quality and safety of their beef product.

"We'll also be updating ranchers on changes occurring in the beef industry and what they must do to increase the demand for their cattle," Scott said. "The program clearly demonstrates how a producer's actions on the ranch can have a big impact on their final product."

The half-day training and certification will cover the program's principles, record keeping, environmental stewardship, genetic selection, cattle handling, culling, and vaccine and drug use.

"The program's bottom line is to teach producers what consumers want; beef that's not only delicious, but safe, wholesome and raised responsibly," Scott said.

The program is free and includes a catered lunch. Those planning to attend are asked to RSVP by April 15.

To RSVP or for more information call Stacy Fox at the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association at 800-242-7820, sfox@texascattleraisers.
