THE PASSING OF A FRIEND

Claud Jeffers

April 14, 1937

The day had been delightfully warm and pleasant; one of those days when a blue haze hangs about the Caprock and lays athwart the shinary ridges and in the vale, like a curtain of smoke.

The whole world seemed still, and at peace when the sudden news was borne to us; as stunning as a thunderbolt, out of the clear sky, that our friend, Claude Jeffers, had passed away the evening before and arrangements made for an immediate burial.

True, we had known that Claude had recently passed through a siege of flu that left his heart weakened, doubtful, and uncertain. Prior to this, all back through the years of our acquaintance, I never knew of Claude being sick a day in his life; and knowing the remarkable rider, he had always been, we somehow found ourselves pulling for him to ride this bad one, as he had often done down through the years. It was just not to be, and Claude met his Waterloo in the arena of death, as we all sooner or later must do.

Forty-seven years is quite a long time, and when it is forty-seven years of pleasantly warm association of friendship, it becomes the tie that binds, and we feel lost and saddened when it is broken.

Claude Jeffers was as good and abiding friend as I ever knew. I, you, and all of his friends, acquaintances, and associates are inexpressibly shocked by his untimely passing.

Our loss is indeed great, and great as it is, we must stand aside in recognition of the greater bereavement which has been visited upon his wife and sons.

Our lives have been enriched by knowing Claude Jeffers.

Claude had started the forty-seventh consecutive year's work as a cowboy in West Texas. He came into the West late in the fall of 1890, with Jim Ward's herd of JG Cross cattle. Spent the winter of 1893 as a sweater in a 00 camp on the banks of the Salt Fork with Tom Davis who now resides in Lubbock.

In the spring of 1894, Claude landed on the 8 0-0 Ranch in King County, Texas, remaining there up to and through the year 1897. Claude and Marion McGhenty were the bronco snappers for the 8 0-0 Ranch, both riding at the Seymour Reunion in 1897. McGhenty placing first, and while Jeffers was left out of the money, he rode his bad one without pulling leather. The following years at Haskell, Texas, Claude rode again and won second place, as I recall.

His services were transferred to the Pitchfork Ranch about that time, where he remained about one season, breaking horses in most part.

In 1899 he was on the Swenson Tongue River Ranch still breaking the bad ones. Then in 1900, he went to the Matador. All of these ranches lay in a block together. The Matador being the larger and with more horses to be gentled, was possibly the prevailing incentive for Jeffers going there.

For many years Claude Jeffers broke and helped to break from fifty to more than a hundred Broncos a year on the Matador. It has been said "Fifty-seven hundred head in all." When the number is spread over forty-five years or more of constantly taming the untamed, it doesn't seem so very far out of the line of reason.

In 1900 Claude rode at a reunion held at Roaring Springs on Tongue River, riding an old spoil "fifty" horse, known as "THC Brown". That horse had dumped many a man on the Matador, but failed to shed Claude. Again second money!

In later years Claude became Range and Wagon Boss, and continued to take his share to ride and to gentle. The last few years, he has relieved in a measure from such constant, strenuous riding. Became, so to speak, an assistant to the General Superintendent, Mr. Reilly. He still rode daily, but the duties were robbed of some of their severity.

The profound mystery is why Claude Jeffers, for more than forty years, could be catapulted in the air on the back of a muscular spring board, taking the jars in his system that a pitching horse is capable of giving his rider, standing up under it, as though he had a heart of iron. Then suddenly pass away, because that heart refused longer to carry on, and send blood through the system to sustain life.

Sort of strange, when you think of it, isn't it?

Mrs. Elliott Is Hostess For Recent Garden Club Program And Silver Tea

Mrs. Ted Elliott was hostess for the Matador Garden Club when it met December 14 for a Christmas program and silver tea for State Garden Clubs Headquarters. Mrs. Edgar Lee, president, called the meeting to order, and plans for Arbor Day planting of a tree commemorating the bicentennial of the Constitution of the United States was discussed.

Mrs. Lee called attention to an article in the December issue of Cop Power, "The Rise of the Lowly Mesquite," which stated, "Most all of Texas is stuck with the mesquite - the Rodney Dangerfield of trees. It doesn't get any respect." She also displayed a September issue of The Philadelphia Inquirer featuring "Inventing America and the Making of the Constitution."

Theme for the year is "Trees: Nature's Bounty," and for the December program, a paper on "Flowers and Trees of the Bible," was given by Mrs. Douglas Meador. The material noted that according to botanists, more than three thousand species of flowers grow in the Holy Land.

"Hundreds of references to flowers and trees adorn the pages of Scripture," Mrs. Meador read from the introduction. "In the very beginning of creation (Genesis 1) The Lord God planted a garden, and in this beautiful Garden of Eden grew plants of the field. 'Green herbs' and 'every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food.' "Adam was commanded to 'dress it and keep it' -- thus gardening was man's first vocation.

"Many interesting incidents referring to trees are found in the Bible," Mrs. Meador noted as she presented the paper, concluding with this thought: "If we garden club members wish to flourish like the palm and grow in grace and beauty like the Cedars of Lebanon, we must adopt a characteristic of these trees - establish deep roots. Trees grow only as high as their roots give strength and nurture, and maybe Paul was thinking of this when he said we should be 'rooted in Christ' and 'grounded in love.'"

Mrs. W.D. Lipscomb was leader and roll call was "name a conifer in your yard." A poem, "Christmas Trees" (Sawyer) was read by Mrs. J.D. Craven, and several Christmas arrangements were brought for exhibit. Mrs. Lipscomb concluded the program with the thought: "Despite wars that shake the earth, there still exists a mighty power which can shape a rose or lead shepherds to a King." (Margaret A. Ahlers) Others present were Rachel Patton, Mrs. W.N. Pipkin and Mrs. Artie Wason.

Refreshments were served at the dining table and included a variety of holiday cookies, cakes, finger sandwiches, nuts and candy, spiced tea and coffee.

Spur Trying To Supply Large Enough Work Force For Clothing Company

Editors Note: Taken from the Regional Forum.

With hard times as they are for Texans these days, success and growth are a rare commodity. But in a little West Texas town with a population of almost 1,700, there seems to be a contradiction. Spur, Texas, cannot seem to find a large enough work force for its job market.

This all began July 12, 1987, when a man named Jim Vineyard came to town from Durant, Okla. Vineyard owns United Sewing Foundation and had wanted to buy sewing machines for his factory. He became aware of a sewing factory in Spur which had recently closed down and had left the employees with their sewing machines but no work.

This posed an interesting opportunity for both Vineyard and Spur. Vineyard contacted the Spur Industrial Foundation and told them that if they would provide the sewing machines and the space, then he would bring his company to Spur.

This was attractive to the Industrial Foundation because Vineyard's company is contracting out with a successful clothing company called Units. This, in turn, could result in a steady and growing work force for Spur.

But the Industrial Foundation needed the help of the community to provide all the sewing machines that United Sewing Foundation had requested. At this point Bill Hoover, a member of the Industrial Foundation, played a major role in bringing this business to Spur. Because of Hoover's insight and persistence, the Industrial Foundation "asked for help from the community and newspapers." Hoover said to the citizens, "If you want this community and labor force to grow, you need to contribute to this sewing factory."

As a result, "The community bought nine Zig-Zag sewing machines, which met the goal in order to bring United Sewing to Spur," said Robert Pierce, Industrial Foundation president.

Pierce and Vineyard concur that

"what Bill Hoover...did to get these sewing machines saved the community." Vineyard stated, "Bill put himself on the line for me by asking the community to pitch in."

Due to this creative approach to economic development by the foundation, not only has Spur seen growth within the economy, but more importantly, Pierce states, "There has been a turnaround in attitudes. A pride has come back into the community."

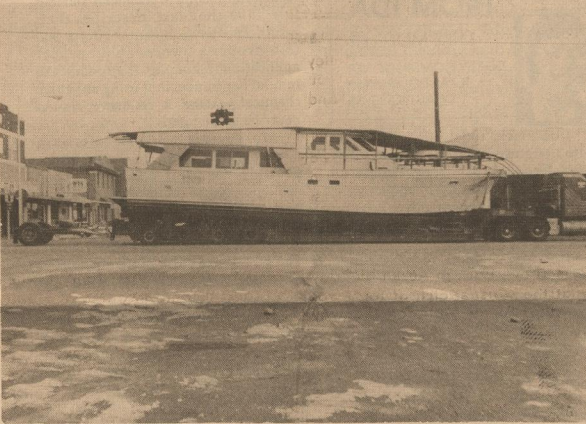

Overall results have been astounding. Hoover states that when United Sewing first came to Spur, it "promised to put 20 people to work." But Vineyard did not exactly keep that promise. Rather, he exceeded it by "employing 42 full-time and 5 part-time people in less than three months. Additionally, he expects to have 60 full-time people by the end of January."

Pierce noted that "the company is growing so quickly that the only thing stopping future growth is the town of Spur being able to supply a big enough work force. Right now Spur's work force is at a saturation point, and we will have to either find more employees or locate another plant in a town that can provide enough workers." Already families have moved into Spur from Crosbyton and Dayton, and other people drive from surrounding towns to work at the plant.

One area that Vineyard is particularly proud of is that "the business has come about without any government intervention on the federal, state or local levels." He says, "It has been the individual citizens of Spur that have been good to me and have really supported the organization."

To what does Jim Vineyard of United Sewing Foundation attribute the success of this plant in Spur, Texas? "Hard work and long hours give this plant the top quality work for sewing the Units clothing line. Business has gone out of sight. These employees are doing so well and producing so much, the sky's the limit!" he said.

DPS URGES SAFETY FOR NEW YEAR'S TRAVELING

Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety said, "Unlike last New Year's holiday, this New Year holiday period will make for a long weekend for many Texas motorists. The additional highway traffic and the traditional New Year celebrations could lead to tragedy for some Texas motorists."

Major Cawthon said, "All available Department of Public Safety Troopers will be on patrol throughout the holiday period in an effort to prevent traffic accidents and fatalities. The troopers will be watching for traffic violators, especially the drunk drivers, which is the leading cause of traffic fatalities in the State of Texas. Department of Public Safety Troopers will also be available to assist motorists with any problems they might have."

Major Cawthon stated, "If the campaign to reduce fatalities is to be successful, then motorists must do their part." He suggested that adequate travel time be budgeted in holiday plans, stop frequently and rest, reduce speed for road conditions and drive defensively, always watching out for the other driver's mistakes, buckle up and don't drink and drive.

Major Cawthon also stated, "If you are going to host a New Year's party, you need to be a responsible host." He offered these suggestions: Non-alcohol beverages should be made available for guests, don't center the party around alcohol, don't double up drinks and don't rush the refills, have food available and above all do not allow anyone who has had too much to drink to drive.

Authors Begin Second Search For Texas Quilts

Austin --- Phase two of the Texas Quilt Search, a massive effort to document the state's quilt heritage, has begun. The first phase, which focused on antique quilts made between 1836 and 1936, is featured in the book Lone Stars: A Legacy of Texas Quilts, 1836-1936.

The authors of Lone Stars are now conducting a second phase of the Search. This time they're seeking quilts made by Texans between 1936 and 1986.

Karey Bresnahan and Nancy Puentes are researching these contemporary Texas quilts for a companion volume to their award-winning book, Lone Stars II will also be published by the University of Texas Press.

"More than 3,500 quilts were discovered and documented during the first part of this project, which was conducted for the Texas Sesquicentennial," said the authors, who are cousins.

"We anticipate fully that many quilts, perhaps more, will be discovered in the period covering the last 50 years of quilting in Texas."

They add that those 50 years have seen three wars, Texas' move from a rural to essentially an urban state, and the changing role of women and the family, and that they expect those changes to be reflected in the quiltmaker's art.

"Our state is one of the most active and exciting places to be for contemporary quiltmakers. There is a long-standing tradition of fine quilting here, as well as a very strong network of quilt guilds and quilt specialty shops. Furthermore, Houston is the home of both the America/International Quilt Festival, the world's fair of quilts, which annually brings the world's largest quilt show and sale to Texas. There is so much stimulation for quilters that we're sure to see some wonderful work," the authors said.

Quiltmakers, their families, or friends should send nonreturnable color photos or slides with a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lone Stars II, 10885 Katy Freeway, Suite 968, Houston, Texas 77079. They will be given a documentation form for completion on each quilt submitted. All photos, slides and documentation forms will become part of the information resources of the non profit Texas Quilt Archives.

The authors' current book, Lone Stars: A Legacy of Texas Quilts, 1836-1936, is selling briskly, according to UT Press, which notes that it is available in book stores, quilt specialty shops, and some gift shops for gift giving. The hard cover version is $24.95 plus tax, the soft cover is $18.95 plus tax. Copies can also be ordered directly from UT Press by writing University of Texas Press, P.O. Box 7819, Austin, Texas 78713, or call toll free 1-800-252-3206.

Education Programs Linked To AHA Research Successes

At year's end, many people make contributions to nonprofit organizations for tax advantages. The American Heart Association, Texas Affiliate, recently released its 1987 Annual Report, showing an increase of two percent, to 30% on public education and a total of 35% spent for research.

Over 50,000 Texans died in 1986 from heart disease, our state's number one killer. A contribution to the American Heart Association in Texas helps in its mission of preventing premature death and disability from cardiovascular diseases, including heart attack and stroke through community service and professional education, in addition to research and public education.

"Using the knowledge gained from research, the American Heart Association has helped improve patient care, educate medical professionals, and increase public awareness of the threat of cardiovascular disease," said Texas Affiliate of the American Heart Association President Michael H. Crawford, M.D.

Based on research, the American Heart Association has developed many programs targeted at the public to inform them of the importance of having a healthy lifestyle.

Here is one example that is helping Texans to care about their hearts.

In 1956, the link between dietary fat and serum cholesterol was discovered. This discovery was the basis for the AHA's emphasis urging Americans to change their eating habits. Since cardiovascular disease is directly linked to the level of cholesterol in the blood, lowering cholesterol levels reduces the incidence of fatal heart attacks.

With this in mind, in 1985, the AHA ventured into supermarkets across the country with a nutrition education program called American Heart's Food Festival. The Food Festival, a weeklong event in September, focuses the public's attention on nutrition. The essence of this nationwide awareness campaign combines activities in supermarkets, schools, and worksites with educational materials and media promotions to get the work out on the relationship between a high fat, high cholesterol diet and heart disease. This is the only national program that educates consumers about the role of diet in heart health.

"AHA-supported projects have contributed to the overall reduction of cardiovascular disease," said Dr. Crawford. "The American Heart Association will continue to fund research and develop programs to further the success of its mission."

Free or inexpensive materials on nutrition, cholesterol, and AHA contribution information are available from your local office of the AHA, listed in the White Pages of your telephone directory.

STRAIGHT TALK FROM TDA

MIKE MOELLER

DEPUTY COMMISSIONER TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Consumers today are bombarded with literature about the products they use. From ingredient labels to directions for use to manufacturers' warranties, the amount of fine print we need to read, understand and remember can be overwhelming.

However, a good, old-fashioned principle of democracy underlies this information explosion. It's the principle that knowledge is power; that citizens should have the facts about matters that affect their lives.

The new consumer-information sheet for subterranean termite control is a case in point. Informed decisions about termite control are extremely important because some termite chemicals stay potent for years in the soil under and around your house.

Under a new state regulation, effective January 1, 1988, all pest-control companies proposing to treat a house or any other building for underground termites must give the owner or manager an information sheet about termite-control treatment before a contract for work is signed.

This first-of-its-kind advisory was written by the Texas Department of Agriculture with help from concerned consumers and pest-control businesses. Its comprehensive, plain-English format will complement the information already available on individual termiticide labels. All parties involved hope that informing consumers will improve the overall quality of pest control in Texas.

The information sheet itself lists the legal termite-control chemicals and tells how long they last, describes their health and environmental effects and tells property owners about proper application techniques. It also serves to remind consumers that using any toxic chemical around a residence should never be taken lightly.

More and more, consumers are asserting their right to know about possible chemical exposure. That includes requests for information about termite-treatment options and about government-agency contacts and phone numbers in case problems arise. The consumer information sheet is designed to address these questions and concerns.

Also starting January 1, new regulations require pest-control companies to put a permanent tag on buildings they treat for termites. This permanent tag will be attached to a water heater, electric meter or under the kitchen sink. The tag will give current and future residents facts about the building's chemical history. That includes the pest-control company's name and address and, most importantly, when the building was treated and what chemical was used.

The information sheet and tagging requirement have the potential to benefit all Texans, since subterranean termites threaten wood structures in every part of the state. The key, however, is for consumers to make every effort to read the information sheets and put the information they provide to good use.

For information about termite-control chemicals or for copies of the new consumer information sheet on subterranean termite control, write the Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

BRAZOS ELECTRIC REPORT

Sen Lloyd Bentsen introduced legislation Dec. 8 requiring the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) and the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) to maintain an agreement to enable electric cooperatives to borrow REA-guaranteed loan funds from FFB. On Dec. 9, Rep. Joe Barton introduced similar legislation in the House that was co-sponsored by Reps. Marvin Leath and Charles Stenholm.

"The active support we have gotten from Representatives Leath and Stenholm, and particularly from Senator Bentsen and Representative Barton is gratifying," said Richard E. McCaskill, executive vice president and general manager of Brazos Electric Power Cooperative. "Sometimes people ask what their representatives in Washington are doing for them. Ours are going to bat for Brazos and especially our consumers."

Earlier this year Brazos, a generation and transmission (G&T) electric cooperative, had difficulty getting loan funds that were already guaranteed and approved by REA because no agreement existed between REA and FFB. Brazos got the assistance of Barton and other legislators from Texas. Barton was instrumental in getting REA and FFB to sign an agreement for 1987. If approved, the recently introduced legislation will ensure that such an agreement is in effect at all times. The legislation will also benefit other G&T cooperatives and their consumers.

The Federal Financing Bank is an arm of the Department of the Treasury that lends money at rates close to the Treasury's borrowing rate.

With headquarters in Waco, Brazos Electric Power Cooperative provides wholesale power to 20 member distribution cooperatives and 7 municipal customers. These wholesale customers serve 229,000 consumers in 66 counties of Texas.

VA Announces Increase In Pension Benefits

More than 706,000 veterans and dependents nationwide will receive up to a 4.2 percent increase in Veterans Administration Improved Pension checks payable Dec. 31, 1987, the VA announced.

According to Waco VA Regional Office Director Stephen L. Lemons, the increase, effective Dec. 1, 1987, applies to 431,000 veterans and 275,000 surviving spouses and children nationwide. Lemons said that 36,000 parents of deceased veterans receiving Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) benefits would also get increases.

The new payments are automatic and require no action by recipients. They range from annual maximums of $6,214 for a veteran without dependents to $13,976 for a veteran with three dependents who is in need of regular aid and attendance.

Unlike compensation benefits paid to veterans disabled by illness or injuries related to military service, pensions are affected by income from other sources, so the exact amount of the increase varies. Increases in Improved Pension and DIC payments to veterans and deceased veterans' parents are set by law at the same rate and date as Social Security benefits.

VA pensions other than the Improved Pension remain fixed at the rates in effect in 1978. The income limits that control eligibility for these programs, however, are also increased by 4.2 percent, effective Dec. 1.

Recipients of these pensions may request transfer to the Improved Pension plan at any time. The VA reviews each request to advise beneficiaries which program would be most advantageous for them.

VA pensions are paid to wartime veterans totally and permanently disabled from circumstances unrelated to their military service, and to needy survivors of wartime veterans.

The VA has also announced an increase in the maximum amount of reimbursement that may be paid for headstones or markers purchased in lieu of government-furnished markers. The increase, from $71 to $76, was effective Oct. 1, 1987.

VA News Feature

Q. -- My 17-year-old son has been awarded Dependents Education Assistance (DEA) from the VA. Will he be removed from my award of Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC)?

A. -- He will remain on your award until his 18th birthday. DEA and DIC benefits cannot be paid concurrently after age 18.

Q. -- Can a non-veteran assume a GI loan?

A. -- Yes. VA approval is not required before a veteran or a non-veteran assumes a GI loan. However, before the veteran-seller can be released from liability in the case of a loan default, the buyer must be a credit-worthy obligor who is acceptable to the VA.

Q. -- When I purchase a home using a VA loan guaranty, will the income of my spouse be considered?

A. -- The veteran's and the spouse's income are considered in determining ability to repay the loan.

Letter To The Editor

A HOLIDAY MESSAGE FROM THE FIRST LADY

At this time of year when the nation's capital is aglow with holiday lights and the season's spirit of love, peace and goodwill, I'm always reminded of another special kind of love. And that is the way in which Foster Grandparents give so generously to children with special needs. These children include those youngsters who are at risk of losing their lives to drugs and alcohol.

For decades, I have supported the Foster Grandparent Program. I have seen hundreds of "grandparents" working with youngsters in schools, hospitals, juvenile detention centers, shelters for neglected children and homes for the mentally retarded. If there is one place where the holiday spirit truly shines all year, it's in the hearts of these senior volunteers and the relationships with their "grandchildren."

Foster Grandparents often reach children who may seem unreachable. They bring hope and light to youngsters who have known only confusion and loneliness. Yet the volunteers will tell you that they benefit as much as the children. Their service brings them the chance to give and learn and grow as well as a wonderful sense of satisfaction. I have never seen another program where the old and the young benefit so much from one another.

During this holiday season, as we pray for peace and thank God for the gift of love and our precious freedom, let us also open our hearts to children who are threatened by the horrors of substance abuse. At the most appropriate time, I ask every citizen to join in helping our Foster Grandparents touch more young lives at risk. You can help fulfill our dream that in holiday seasons to come, the faces of all America's children will shine with love and laughter, and their lives will be drug and alcohol free.

Sincerely,
Nancy Reagan

"Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth."

Psa. 127: 3, 4

And now abideth Faith, Hope and Love. These three, but the greatest of these is Love.

I Cor. 13:13
