PRICE SEVEN CENTS

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Our natures are so constituted that we most frequently hold in contempt that which we fear and do not understand.

Retrospection is like looking into a rear view automobile mirror with its constant variety of scenes, each becoming the embodiment of what is immediately ahead, and the manner in which we cope with the fleeting privilege of change.

A government belongs to the people only so long as they have the opportunity and the will to use it. If they do not exercise the ballot's authority, they most certainly will be subjected to authority without it.

The traffic problem would be greatly relieved if all the unnecessary driving could be eliminated from streets and highways.

Nature can get in a hurry when autumn comes and the southward ground thorn vines begin blooming almost as soon as they come up. They are provided with an intelligence that hints fruiting before frost.

Health is a temporal measure of a man's life work, and merely a tool of opportunity which will perish after it leaves his hands, except it be enameled with benevolence.

The stench of gossip is not easily buried beneath a few words of toleration or the applied apathy of circumstances.

Winter enjoys flexing its muscles in the mild sunlight of a West Texas autumn, then suddenly leaping out of the skies and shaking everyone in their boots.

If this nation has a financial problem, it may be that it has more active charge accounts than bank accounts.

Youth Reports Made to Legion

Reports by Mike Peacock, Roaring Springs, and Joanie Barton, Matador, delegates to Attorney General Waggoner Carr's Youth Conference on Crime, and Karen Elliott, delegate to the Farm Bureau's Citizenship Seminar in Huntsville, comprised the program Monday night for the American Legion and Auxiliary, following the usual covered dish supper.

Gifts were brought by the Auxiliary members, to be sent to a Veterans Hospital, where disabled veterans will select Christmas gifts for their loved ones.

The Legion Post voted to purchase a new flag to replace the old one which has been in use for so many years.

Approximately 50 members and guests, including parents of the youth speakers, were present to hear the messages.

In a letter dated September 15, to Tribune publisher Douglas Meador, Attorney General Waggoner Carr expressed his appreciation for the cooperation which his conference had received, as follows:

"Dear Douglas: I just want you to know of my deep gratitude for the support which your outstanding newspaper gave to our recent Attorney General's Youth Conference on Crime.

"As you know, more than 1,600 young people from all over Texas came to Austin to study the problem of juvenile crime in this State, and to recommend ways in which this alarming rise could be halted. Their behavior while in Austin was completely beyond reproach, and they rendered valuable service to their State in carrying out these important responsibilities.

"Your local delegation played a large role in these proceedings, and it was a great honor to meet and become associated with them. I hope that all of your area citizens will continue to support these delegates as they begin to implement these ideas, gained at the State Conference, at the local level. Again, my thanks to you for your help. Yours very truly, Waggoner Carr."

Spooks Take Caps Off Fire Hydrants

Halloween "spooks" Sunday night turned on fire hydrants over much of the town and wasted an estimated 200,000 gallons of water.

City Water Superintendent Sonny Jackson is now more concerned about a large number of expensive fire hydrant caps which were removed. The caps are badly needed and will need to be replaced if those taken are not returned.

A valve cap to a butane storage tank at the school Agriculture Building was broken off, causing the loss of some gas before it was found and cut off.

The escaping gas caused a serious fire hazard, it was declared. Otherwise it was one of the "quietest" Halloweens Matador has experienced in a number of years. Windows were not marked and debris was not left in the streets.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

I am a bit late in reporting this test conducted on bermudas, but due to the interest in the plant, the following information may be of value to those interested in establishing one of the bermudas, or managing the crop they have.

J. M. Hill—Coastal bermuda—160 lbs. of 30-30-0 applied, and irrigated twice, applying 4 in. of moisture each time. Crude protein at two weeks growth, 14.7%; 3 weeks, 18%; 4 weeks, 17.2%; 5 weeks, 16.9%; 6 weeks, 15.9%; 7 weeks, 13.4%. The area under test was fenced so that no grazing would affect the tests, which were started May 15, 1964 and completed June 19th.

J. W. Pritchett—Midland bermuda—70-20-5, two irrigations of 3 in. each time. Bermuda was grazed from April 6 until start of test on May 22nd. 1st test for crude protein, 16.8%; 1 weeks growth, 17.4%; 2 weeks growth, 14.1%; 3 weeks growth, 14.2%; 4 weeks growth, 18.2% (Rain received prior to

Other samples of the improved bermudas have ranged from 7% crude protein to 18.8%, indicating that management is the key factor to the quality of the feed. Roughly, digestible protein will be about 70% of the crude protein figure, but if you are interested in knowing the value of the feed you are testing, why not submit a sample for test. Cost for protein analysis is $1, and this test will probably tell why you have good looking grass or feed, and the cattle aren't eating it.

One word of advice. Inadequate automobile insurance placed in companies of which you know little, can add only to the misery and hardship in case of accident. Just buy the best. It pays!
