Sand, Gravel Deposits Give Motley County Key Industry

Motley County is being hauled away. Approximately 200 cubic yards leave daily but there is no immediate alarm since it has been estimated that 25-million years will pass before the present rate of depletion affects the more than 1,000 square miles of gravel. Besides, good gravel deposits cover a minor and limited area of the county.

Ellison and Thrasher gravel pits on the J. K. Crews ranch about 3 miles north of Matador are an important commercial industry. It provides employment for seven or eight men, except seasonal slumps and during the periods the plant on the bank of Middle Pease River operates 20 hours daily.

Leo Thrasher, the manager, does not sit at a paneled desk in an executive capacity. He may like the wheel of one of the big 40,000-pound capacity tractors and deliver three loads after the regular driver has completed a day's work. He may change a defective tire on a truck, help overhaul an engine or take a shift at the dragline. It is almost certain to be working much of the 20-hour day.

The gravel pit, like many in West Texas, runs predominately to sand, and to supply the gravel hungry Plains area, highway contractors and other demands for gravel, it is necessary to process mountains of sand. Thrasher has built a low mountain range of washed sand which contains over 20,000 cubic yards. Demands will finally consume it.

At present the plant processes approximately 95 per cent of the pit's output through the washing, crushing and screening equipment. Four years ago when Thrasher began operating the pit most of the sales were of pit-run materials.

Cost Is Slight

The cost of washing and screening adds little to what the customer pays and actually saves him money. A yard of mixed concrete made with washed materials is stronger and better than pit-run, although the mixture contains one less sack of cement.

The company operates eight trucks, four on the road making deliveries and four in the plant operation. Two of three big automatic dump trucks have a capacity of 15 cubic yards each and the third is rated at 10 yards. License fees alone on the three trucks is about $1,800.

Water for the washing operation is obtained from a "scrapped-out" lake in the river flat. The supply is limited and despite the fact that water is reused repeatedly, the 600-gallon per minute pump may have to be shut down on a long run.

Likes Machinery

Thrasher likes machinery and is an inventive genius. He has two patents on submerged irrigation well motors which he perfected when he lived at Pampa before coming to Matador.

"I did not have money to promote the inventions after I secured the patents," he said, "but I

Runs Itself

"It runs by itself," Thrasher explained, "you just set it in the rate of gear you want it to advance and it stays there." He also explained that it had extreme mobility because of its gears and would "do 40", although it is hardly possible "The Thing" will ever become popular as a highway vehicle.

Many strange rocks and formations are unearthed in the gravel pit operation. Last week the drag line picked up a large petrified tusk almost 70 feet below the surface. The petrified ivory broke up and only one section about 18 inches long and 12 inches in circumference, was salvaged. Almost a year ago another tusk was found in the same area and it measured 64 inches in length.

Has Strange Machine

Most amazing machine at the plant might be termed "The Thing" although Thrasher declined to name it. Designed to move into a gravel pit, loosen the materials, load a moving conveyor belt and elevate the materials into a truck, it looks like a mechanical nightmare. It works and is used every day.

"The Thing" was built by Thrasher and his brother at a material cost of $400, yet its work is as satisfactory as machines costing $10,000. It contains parts of a Farmall tractor, a road grader, three sets of transmission gears and is powered by a Ford engine. A big wheel of welded steel looks like the paddle wheel of a river boat and its function is to load the loosened gravel on the conveyor belt. Two heavy spiral rims on either side of the wheel loosen the gravel and feed it to the big wheel.

Announcing Arrival

Rev. and Mrs. G. W. James of Roaring Springs have received word of a new grandson born to Mr. and Mrs. William Melton (Dub) James of Ballinger. He was born Aug. 15, at 9:10 AM and given the name Larry Dean Weight was 7 lbs. 4 ozs. The mother will be remembered as the former Leah Jean Bearden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bearden, formerly of Matador, now living at Rankin.

Ancient Tusk Was Crushed

The big tusk was buried to give later to a museum but a caterpillar tractor was accidentally driven over the spot and reduced it to dust. Pieces of giant animal bones are frequently found on the plant conveyor belts enroute to the rock crusher or the washing and screening machines.

Besides his crew of hard-working men, Thrasher has a partner. "I guess you would call him a silent partner—I haven't seen him in two years. He is E. B. Elliston of Amarillo. He is truly a fine fellow and leaves the operation of the plant entirely to me.

Currently the plant is delivering materials to the State Highway Department for the construction of bridges and culverts on the new Highway 70 cutoff in Hall and Briscoe counties. The road is expected to be opened about January 1.

SERVICEMEN EXPRESS THANKS FOR TRIBUNE

A recent letter from Milton Ray Locke, formerly of Matador contained news of his discharge from the U. S. Navy on July 26, at Seattle Receiving Station.

He wrote: "Thank you so very much for being so nice and sending the Tribune to me the past 3 years. It was a great help during the long months overseas. Thank you again."

Appreciation for receiving the Tribune was also expressed by Cpl. Leslie Kingery of 28th AAA Gp. Proving Firing Det. Camp Claybanks, New Era, Michigan, in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Kingery of Roaring Springs. "He said it was like a nice visit home each week to sit down and read the Tribune; he wants you to know that the boys in service feel that you are doing a wonderful thing in sending them the Tribune and they really appreciate it," his mother said.

Home Ec Teachers Take Tech Course

Mrs. Arthur Fair and Mrs. Albert Rattan, homemaking teachers in the Matador and Patton Springs high schools, respectively, recently completed a two-weeks clothing course at Texas Technological College, Lubbock. The course was under the supervision of Mrs. Kinchens, Miss Erwin and Mrs. Bishop of New York City.

During the first week of instruction, figure problems and pattern alterations were stressed. Easier and quicker methods of construction were taught during the second week and Mrs. Bishop demonstrated five points in sewing and what goes to make a dress sell for $600 and up.

"The Bishop Method of clothing construction is being taught in all major schools," Mrs. Rattan explained, "and if the mothers of home ec girls would express a desire to learn the methods, mother and daughter teams could turn out the sewing and have time left for all family members. After learning the principles, it is my aim and goal to sit down and make a dress in 45 minutes, although it will take time and practice to accomplish this feat."

Pled 'Pinions'

BY MRS. J. M.

Something that thrilled Johnnie and Charles Ezell on their recent trip to Glacier and other National parks (besides the bears), was cooking facilities at one of the camps where they stayed. They were greatly intrigued with the wood-burning cook stove and the bucket of water with a dipper in it.

When we remember how our feet used always to hurt, regardless of the season, or dress, we view with gratitude the flats and sandals that have become so popular and acceptable for all ages, during the past several years. Even sensible oxfords designed for comfort, were usually so heavy one was soon tired out just lifting one's feet.

We're not alone in our aversion to dress-up shoes. We've observed recently that a number of our friends kick off their shoes first thing when they get home, after attending church, or a dress-up social function. If the Greeks had a word for it, it must have meant c-o-m-f-o-r-t.

Double-column head in the Stanton Reporter: Tough Luck Kids' School Opens Soon. James E. Kelly is publisher.

Orchids in the waste basket is something few of us can boast. Margaret Whitworth had that novel experience when she and Randall attended the Lions International convention in New York last month. Seems the Hawaiian delegation supplied the ladies with orchids daily, and fresh ones were furnished before those already in use had wilted. So it got to the point that the day-old ones were discarded so the new ones could be worn while fresh. Just think how we board them for days in the refrigerator! We're remembering our one and only, on our anniversary several years ago!

Our jaunt to N. Y. via Margaret, was most interesting. We enjoyed the rides through the subways (we always like to get places but quick; that's why we like flying), and the tours over the city, etc., and of course the slums are very depressing. Margaret says it is easy to understand how a youngster could live to be grown without ever setting foot on the ground—nothing but pavement and tenements.

When they reached Washington and made the rounds there, the Whitworths were met by the M. P. Leavings who took them to their Arlington home for dinner. There, Mrs. Leaming brought out a number of articles (linens, plates, etc.) Matador friends had given her from time to time when she lived here, and reminisced with Margaret about each gift.

No doubt everyone has wondered at some time or other about "heaven and eternity." Clergymen are often asked about that place called heaven—and also, the place called hell. The atheist insists that when you close your eyes for the last time—that's the end of everything—there just isn't any such thing as "eternity" for the individual human being. And at his funeral the only song appropriate is "All dressed up and no place to go."

The Rev. Fred A. Rinehart has an answer ready when questioned about eternity. It's a story about a patient on his deathbed

Who asked his doctor: "Will you tell me about eternity, doctor?"

"For a moment there was no sound except a persistent scratching at the door. 'Do you hear that scratching at the door?' asked the doctor. 'The patient said yes. 'Well,' said the doctor, 'that's my dog trying to get in here. He doesn't know a thing about this room except that his master is in it. That's enough.' (Duluth Publicity, Minnesota.)

Teachers' Pay Raise

(The Dallas News)
Under the orderly processes of Texas State Government, this happens: The Legislature finds a worthy purpose, a psychiatric hospital for instance. It provides for same. It enacts a bill, appropriating X dollars for the purpose. Senate and House have whooped it through. But it does not go to the Governor for signature. It goes instead to the Comptroller of Public Accounts.

Says Art III, Sec. 49-2 of the State Constitution: "No bill containing an appropriation shall be considered as passed or sent to the Governor for consideration unless the Comptroller endorses his certificate thereon showing the amount appropriated thereon is within the amount estimated to be available within the affected funds." If the Comptroller does not find the funds available he returns the bill to the house of origin without certificate. The bill stops right there.

Astonishingly, The News has found Texas teachers who think that the pay raise enacted in 1953 had to wait on the special session in 1954 because Gov. Allan Shivers vetoed it. What happened, of course, was that the Legislature passed the bill and Comptroller found no funds available. The Governor had no bill to veto.

Instead, he had a problem to solve. And he did solve it. He called together a committee to work out ways and means. They came up with both the bill and the necessary appropriation to cover it. The Legislature was called into special session to provide both, and did.

You would think that every Texas teacher would know that. Yet a great many teachers are unaware either that Shivers did not and could not block the pay raise, or that his determined action got it for them in the only way constitutionally possible.

Mr. and Mrs. McElton Skaggs and children, Sheryl and Connie and her sister, Mrs. John Avara, all of Corpus Christi, are vacation visitors with relatives and friends here and at Roaring Springs.

Relatives Attend Funeral Of Uncle

Funeral services for Claude Holcomb, pioneer Hardeman County businessman and rancher, held Friday at 3 p. m. in the First Methodist Church of Quanah, were attended by a nephew and two nieces from here.

Jim Rateliff, accompanied by two sisters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Creed Jameson of Matador and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Farrar of Brownfield, were those attending.

Holcomb, 71, had lived at Quanah for 63 years. He engaged in coal, feed and grocery business until about 1933 when he sold his business interests to devote his full time to ranching. He owned ranches in the southern and northeastern parts of Hardeman County. He had been a director of the Security National Bank of Quanah for 30 years. He was a leader in the Quanah Methodist Church and was a Scottish Rite Mason.

Survivors are his wife and five children; and seven grandchildren.

Mr. Formby explained the farm road to Northfield, which enters four counties (Childress, Motley, Hall and Cottle) between Childress and the remote Motley county community.

"Farm Road 1441 was badly needed," Mr. Formby said and I think the system of farm road is the best thing in Texas. Through out all history roads have shaped the history of nations."

Mr. Formby received much applause when he assured the people of his own community that the farm road (8 miles) between McAdoo and Dougherty would be constructed in the near future.

"The people of Texas have spent over 2-billion dollars on highways," Mr. Formby said, "and must continue to spend vast sums of money to maintain them. Approximately 9,000 people are employed by the Highway Department."

"Texans like to travel. They drive 90-million miles daily. They will go any place they can reach by automobile. People used to fear highways because they believed they would draw away the people. They have found that highways which take people away, also bring people in, frequently in greater quantities. We strive to make Texas highways the finest system in the world."

Mr. Formby, appointed by Governor Shivers, is the first member of the Highway Commission ever appointed from the Panhandle.
