MATADOR, MOTLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1967

PRICE SEVEN CENTS

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Another disadvantage of being a driver is the uncertainty of where to go again.

A drinker with a bottle of bourbon on the driver's seat beside him is a situation pregnant with disaster.

Borrow or lend to a friend and you stand a chance of becoming a time loser.

Personally I am not impressed by the way a man prays in public, but more by the way he lives the Word has charged to his account in private.

What has happened to the dramatic maiden who told her swain, "Never darken my door again"? She knows full well there are other doors where his shadow would not be reviving.

Television screens have their place in a modern world as a window through which millions escape from reality.

The rewards for good craftsmanship have never been greater in this nation's history, because too many watch the clock instead of the wax in their hands. Poor work is a disgrace to the mind that conceived it and the money that paid for it. It is impossible to find an excuse for anything less than the best.

Caution is the hallmark of age, but many adopted it before they were old.

The optimist knows that the ending sun is shining above the clouds and the storm, and that eventually it will shine upon his world again.

"Spying" Declared Vital to Security

"Spying" or "intelligence" about a possible enemy is essential to survival in event of a sneak attack, which would leave no time for recovery, according to native son Tom Hamilton, former member of Army Intelligence.

Now a member of a Plainview law firm, young Hamilton was principal speaker Monday night at the regular speaker meeting of Fleming Post American Legion and Auxiliary, held in the Legion Club Room.

Hamilton said good "information" might mean the survival of a nation and that poor "information" might cause a nation's defeat. He said Washington's success as a leader was largely the result of information about the enemy, and false information which the enemy received from him.

He cited the "information" which John F. Kennedy received during the Cuban crisis, which informed the president that the Russians were not ready.

Hamilton cited the various kinds of "information" which nations give and receive, including counter intelligence. He cited the information received by Hitler and that which Russia received during the crisis of Russia.

The favorable action on the proposal came from the Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns.

Senator Hightower of Vernon, who represents the 30th senatorial district, said that he expects Senate debate on the proposal in the near future.

Theater Offers Chance At Movies Speaker Reveals In Film Forum

Movies, and the public's reaction to various types of entertainment which they offer, provided interesting subject matter for panel discussion by high school students and faculty members, Monday night in the high school auditorium.

Mrs. Billy Ray Slover was program director.

The program, "Our Movies and You," was sponsored by Eternas Junior Study Club, with Mrs. Wade Berryman, manager of the Matador Drive-In Theater, as guest speaker.

"When friends asked my husband why we bought the Matador theater," Mrs. Berryman explained, "he told them, 'My wife has always wanted to get in movies, and this was the only way I knew to get her in.'"

Mrs. Berryman gave a brief history of the movie industry and a description of the various types of films, and defined the difference between family, young adult and adult entertainment. She also explained the difference between "adult only" films and those advertised as "adult entertainment."

"We do not, ever, show the 'adult only' films... and though Virginia Wolfe will probably be an Academy Award winner, we do not intend to show it here, because of the language used." She cited "The Greatest Story Ever Told," as one of the biggest box-office attractions, and announced a re-run of the picture in the near future.

Answers to questions revealed that the teenagers often went to the movies for entertainment and to be with the crowd, sometimes without even knowing in advance, what picture was being shown.

Types of pictures preferred were varied but included principally those which provide entertainment. Door prizes were given at the conclusion of the program.

The new facility will make provision for year-round usage. The summer camping program attracts about 6,000 per season. In addition to this, conferences, seminars, church groups, area meetings, and many state denominational meetings will be held here.

Mr. E. D. Morgan, Camp Manager, said the facility will be ready for the camp season this summer. The Men's Brotherhood Meeting on June 26th is the first scheduled activity for the summer session.

Old Tascosa Newspapers Contrast Life of Pioneers

MARY KATE TRIPP
Books Editor
Amarillo Daily News

The 66th edition of The Panhandle Historical Review will be titled "The Frontier Town." Archambeau, Amarillo man and historian, aimed for quality in his selection from The Tascosa Pioneer. He picked up this issue of the Pioneer who scans these pages in June of 1886. He will know that the Pioneer, even though he knows how the story will find himself a day-to-day in Tascosa in its bid to become a railroad center and "town" of the Panhandle. He found that a newspaper of an 80-year-old newspaper quality of immediacy that can match the histories that he found in the newspaper picture book. He found that the Pioneer town much different from the large and small towns and the retold tales of its vice and violence at Tascosa.

The Pioneer turned a page to crime news. The young Charles Francis Rudolph, such news with a bland and for every account of "damning" adjectives which standard journalistic style of. But for every account of "the girls' part" of the and for every killing by the of the Cattfish Kid there are stories of routine news of the arrival of new merchandise, the frequent dances, occasional church services, the theatricals, the horse and school programs which had the interest of average of the "Queen City of the Panhandle."

Without the crime news, Pioneer pictures some as of an old West which was going fast in the late 80s. Rudolph wrote about buffalo, rare enough by 1886, and the editorial notice, and he included the roundups and trails which are a part of western life. The big stories of the new years of the Pioneer was controversy over policies of the Land Office, which Rudolph attacked because of alleged discrimination against small farmers and ranchers. Also top news was organization of Potter County and the founding of Oneida which became Amarillo and in a few years cinched its claims to "big town" title sought by Tascosa.

However, the story that lends continuity and suspense to the pages from The Pioneer is the of the railroads whose routes led the fate of Panhandle. Rudolph and The Pioneer reported diligently the building of the Fort Worth and Denver to Tascosa. They got their railroad to find that the location of railroad towns, particularly apart neighbors to the south had written a death warrant on one of the first corners among handle towns. Yesterday's newspaper may be far behind railroad news column-inch measurement was Pioneer's editorial campaign a bridge over the Canadian. Campaign was successful after big ranchers withdrew their opposition in return for scaling down plans for an iron bridge in favor of a wooden structure. When C. F. Rudolph tipped his beaver to the people of the Texas Panhandle, wandering bands of Indians were still making camp on the creeks near Tascosa, and bison steak was still sold occasionally at the Tascosa market though it had become "a rarity in these days, even in the west." Temple Houston, swashbuckling son of the swashbuckling Sam, was state senator from the Panhandle and, in Rudolph's opinion, in line for bigger things. Houston was a Democrat and apparently Rudolph's kind of Democrat because he enjoyed a consistently good press in The Pioneer.

Not all officials fared as well. Rudolph wrote the news, "as he would have put it, "without fear or favor." Occasionally he wrote hastily, as when he reported only the Levertown side of the Levertown-Arrington shooting episode. He rowed back strenuously in subsequent issues as Sheriff Arrington's version of frontier justice was vindicated.

Complaining regularly about mail service to Tascosa, Rudolph gives the impression that almost any whim, not to mention the weather, could interfere with the U.S. mail service as then set up in the Panhandle. Nevertheless, he got enough exchange papers to keep his readers informed of a smattering of national and world news as well as what he called the "razzooing" tidings from area towns. Razzooing was the 1887 "in" word for booming, and, according to Rudolph, implied a somewhat free-wheeling attitude toward truth.

There may have been an element of razzooing in Editor Rudolph's late 1887 prediction that "Gabe's trump" will find her (Tascosa) doing business at this stand only on a different scale."

Less than three years later Tascosa was in business on so reduced a scale that Rudolph closed his newspaper and moved to Channing, where he published a weekly newspaper for a time. He later published papers at Hartley and Coldwater, the new county seat of Sherman County, before retiring from the newspaper business to become Sherman county clerk. He probably was a good county clerk, but the recording of legal records must have seemed tame to a man who had worn any number of beavers in his roles as editor, crusader, promoter and chamber of commerce at Tascosa in his spring-time days in the Panhandle.

Archambeau has done a masterly job of choosing the items which tell the main story of the coming of the "venturous iron horse" to the High Plains. He has also included as many personal items as possible and has provided an excellent index. The cover drawing is by Olive Vandruff Bugbee. A map of Old Tascosa and a picture of the Oldham County Courthouse in 1887 are reproduced from John L. McCarty's "Maverick Town."

Oil Industry In Abundant Supply For Future Needs

HOUSTON - Petroleum will continue to be a growing industry which will make ever larger contributions to our national energy needs for many decades to come. According to Dr. Chas. F. Jones, president of Humble Oil & Refining Company, in an address before the Houston Philosophical Society, "Our industry is going to be around for a long time because petroleum supplies are abundant and are being converted into useful products that millions of people want and can afford to buy." Dr. Jones said, "We will have lively competition for energy markets, there is no doubt about that, but we are going to keep ourselves in a competitive position that will enable us to take on all comers."

"We now consume petroleum products at the rate of about 12 million barrels a day in the United States. By 1985 it is estimated that we will be consuming about 20 million barrels a day."

Active Competition
He noted that oil and gas as energy sources will continue to have plenty of competition for markets in the years ahead. He predicted that each source will participate in the overall growth with nuclear energy having perhaps 5 per cent of the total by 1985 and electricity having a much bigger share of the home-heating market. Coal, he said, lost ground to oil and gas in earlier years, but is now making a comeback and is "a tough competitor again." Dr. Jones stressed that the oil industry is a highly technical one, and depends to an unusual degree on innovation, or research and development. Humble, he said, currently spends some $22 million a year on research, covering the entire range of operations from exploration and production to manufacturing and marketing activities. Nationwide, he noted, the annual expenditure for petroleum research is an impressive $350 million, twice that of a decade ago.

While about half of coal's annual research bill of $20 million is government financed and practically all of the nuclear power civilian economy research bill of $216 million annually is financed by the government, he said, only about 7 per cent of the research activity in the petroleum industry comes from federal funds.

Pays Own Bill
"We prefer to pay our own research bill," he said, "and we believe that our competitors for energy markets should pay theirs. We should discourage the entrance of government research and development into all areas of private business activity." Dr. Jones also pointed to the close relationship between energy use and per capita income.

"The key word," he said, "is use, not mere availability. Thus some of the countries of the world having the most abundant supplies of natural energy remain at low income levels because of failure to provide for the effective utilization of this energy."

County Gets More Parallel Terraces
The primary activity of the local Soil Conservation Service during February has been parallel terraces. Approximately 45,000 feet of terraces have just been completed on the Jerrel Nimmo farm at Northfield. The total constructed in the county to date is 73,000 feet. Plans are being made to terrace the following farms during March: Jake Edwards, Frank Price, R. E. Campbell Sr., Mrs. Hazel Donovan. Irrigation pipelines were constructed earlier this year for France Barton and W. E. Burselson with plans being made for construction of lines on the Joe Ed Helms and Art Green farms at Flomot.

Standard Terraces have just been completed on Earl Thompson and Howard Edmonson farms at Matador Doyle Calvert of Flomot. For your conservation assistance, contact the local Soil Conservation Service Office representing the Upper Pease Soil and Water Conservation District.

"Slow down, world—this kid wants to get on"

"This is a fine little girl that got sidetracked from the rest of the world. Now she's trying to make it back."

"There are lots of kids like this. Little folks that hurt all over, trying to learn how to walk. Trying to do things other kids don't have to learn. They'll make it, too, if they don't run out of hope."

"Hope is a job for Easter Seals. Special doctors and nurses. Special equipment. Special love—special ways to keep these little ones full of hope. It costs money."

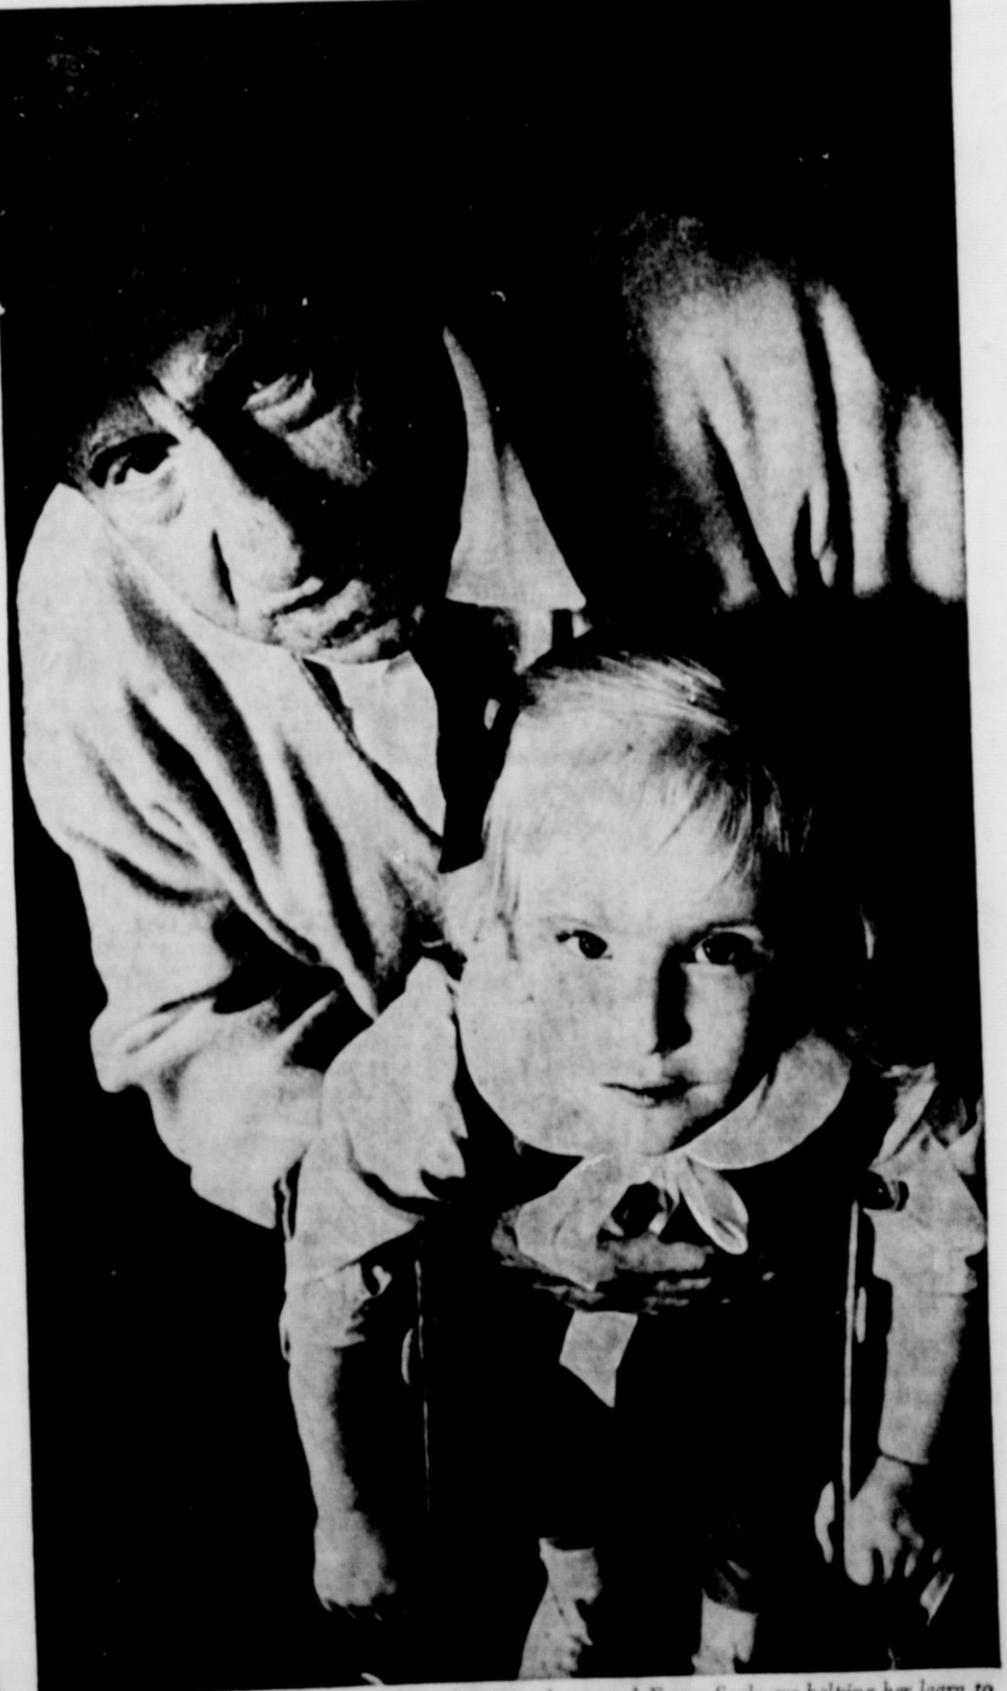

"But not a lot if we split it up."

"How about you m'friend? Slow down a minute, and reach out a hand with a few dollars in it, for Easter Seals. If you do, you'll put one of these little kids a little closer to catching up with the rest of the world. And that's a fine thing."

Students Assigned Annual Term Themes

By Shelley Stevens

Matador High School's students are once again working on the much dreaded assignment — term themes.

The themes are required by the school each year in order for a student to meet requirements for graduation. The freshmen may write on topics related to science, the sophomores, home economics and agriculture, the juniors, occupations, and the seniors, government or current events. The themes range in length from 1,000 words for the freshmen to 2,000 words for the seniors.

Each student receives two grades — three if he takes typing. His theme is graded for content by the teacher assigning the theme and for grammar by the English teacher.

Scholarship Test Given To Juniors

by Carol Martin

Members of the junior class took the 1967 National Merit Scholarship test Monday, Feb. 27, at school. The test was administered by Principal Wayland Moore.

The National Merit Scholarship program, conducted by the National Merit Scholarship Cooperation, is designed to increase financial assistance for talented students who plan to attend college. The test also seeks to help students assess their academic progress so that they may use the information when making educational and vocational plans.

The five juniors who applied are: Deborah Tilson, Vickie Holt, Ann Marshall, Jesse Perkins, and Carol Martin. Last year Gary Markham and Larry Elliott received recognition for their outstanding scores.

Senior Spotlight

by Larry Elliott

Gary Wayne Markham, a brown eyed, black haired Senior boy with an endearing effervescent personality, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Markham on Oct. 7, 1949, in Matador.

A natural master of satire, Gary's wit and intellectualism have made a favorite of Matador High School's students, and it is a well known fact that when a difficult homework assignment cannot be conquered, he is the one to see for help. At a party or just a jam session, Gary is always ready for a jest or joke, but it is the serious side of his personality which has made him many friends.

Gary has been a member of the Beta Club for two years, manager of the Matador Matadors this year, and a participant in several UIL events.

Agriculture is Gary's main interest in the way of future plans and toward this end he will enter Texas A&M University this fall where he plans a career in mechanical engineering.

Literary Land

by Billie Stockton

Anna Karenina, written by Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy, is a narration of the author's life, which he portrays through his favorite character Levin. Levin's efforts to find himself through useful work and his spiritual regeneration is parallel to Tolstoy's own spiritual wanderings.

The story centers around Anna Karenina and Vronsky, who openly disregard the code of marriage. Their personalities come from public opinion and from the love they can not control. In the beginning, both Anna and Vronsky are capable of enduring the disapproval of society but both eventually break under the pressure.

Through his main characters Tolstoy shows the ineffectuality of the nobility and intellectuals, their pursuit of diversion, their inability to cope with practical problems, and their tendency to brutalize the peasants.

A 64-ACRE BUILDING ON A THREE-ACRE SITE is this model of the world's second largest high-rise office building, being studied by United States Steel's President, Leslie B. Worthington. To be the Corporation's Pittsburgh headquarters when completed in 1970, the 64-story, triangular-shaped structure will be the tallest skyscraper in the world outside New York and Chicago. Only New York's Pan-Am Building, among high-rise office structures, will contain a greater gross area than the new building, which provides almost an acre per floor.

Mr. Worthington is holding a sample of USS COB-TEN steel which will be used for the exposed columns and exterior walls of the building. The special steel which will be left bare and unpainted will weather to a deep russet, cinnamon-like color. Originally developed in the early 1950's for use in railroad freight cars, the steel is becoming a popular architectural material for exposed and unpainted applications.

The building, 841 feet high, will be a pioneer showcase of new materials, new products, and new architectural and engineering concepts.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

By now, you should have received a "Production Guideline" on cotton, grain sorghum or peanuts. I hope that you will find these helpful, as these recommended practices have been proven through research and experimentation. I realize that all will not fit any particular farm, and the aim is not for a change of all at one time. If you are now doing some things different, and haven't tried the recommended way, why not give it a trial, at least on a limited basis. Your comments on these guidelines will be appreciated, as this is one way that we can improve them. I would also like to say "thanks" to those who helped prepare them.

Junior team members were Larry Jameson, Berry Bostick and Lamar Tison, with Eddy Jameson, being the alternate.

These team members were selected from 24 4-H members in the county who were trying for places on the county teams. My thanks to Bill Peacock, Roaring Springs VA Inst. for helping to train the boys, and to Mrs. Lewis Bostick and Mrs. Bob Jameson for helping get the boys to Wichita Falls for the contest.

Results of demonstrations carried out in Motley County during 1966 have been mailed, and in case you didn't receive a copy of these tests, and would like to have one, let me know, as I still have a few copies left.

Tests for 1967 are now being finalized, and if you have a test in mind that you would like to see carried out, let me know, and I will see if it can't be included. I think you will agree that tests of this type, where costs and returns are available are the best way to determine if a practice is worthwhile. It takes a little extra time and effort to keep the records, but this is the only way that we can put the "dollar eye" to a practice. Looks and estimates are fine, but you can't deposit them. Because of the early frost in 1966, many tests were lost, and boll counts or strip harvest had to be used in place of field yields, but I think you will agree that these methods of arriving at yields are very accurate, especially when they are properly carried out.

4-H County Officers and District Delegates were recently selected, with Jeanette Day and Randy Welch, both of Matador being named delegates for 1967. Alternates are Donna Rogers and Royce Pigg of Flomot.

County officers are Jeanette Day, President; Randy Welch, Co-vice president; Donna Rogers, co-vice president; Royce Pigg, Secretary; and Debbie Smallwood, Treasurer. Serving with these officers on the county 4-H council are the officers of the 9 club.

According to information recently received, Motley County may be in for grasshopper trouble in 1967.

A survey made in the fall of 1966 shows that all of the county except a strip along the southern part of the county may be in for serious trouble unless nature does something to help us. A similar survey made in 1965 indicated that the heaviest infestations would be in the area north and west from Whiteflat.

In the past, programs have been in operation to help combat these pests. I have written for detailed information on the operation of the program in 1967, and those interested are urged to contact me and learn what can be done.

What people are saying about... "Carried away with it!" say Natalie and Diana, daughters of the J.D. Locklears of Eden, Texas. Natalie and "Sud" Locklear echo their father's approval of total electric Gold Medalion living. Mrs. Locklear's special pride is her total electric work room complete with home laundry, ironer, sewing machine and professional type hair dryer. She also praises the comfort of electric heat. "I didn't know electric heat would be so warm. We have no need for blankets any more," she says.

"Sud" is amazed at the low cost of operation. The 2,057 square foot electric comfort includes electric baseboard heaters, total electric kitchen, water heater, home freezer, washer and yard light outside. "The children run in and out all the time, and our average monthly cost is $27.83."

The Locklears use West Texas Utilities Equal Payment Plan. "That way you know what you're going to pay every month."

Karen Jo Elliott Tapped for SPOOKS

Miss Karen Jo Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Elliott, and a freshman journalism student at the University of Texas, Austin, has been tapped for membership in SPOOKS, honorary service organization for women.

Being selected for SPOOKS is one of the highest honors attainable at The University. All freshmen and sophomore women are eligible for membership, but only those outstanding women displaying intense loyalty and showing a sincere concern for the University are considered for the "Skull and Crossbones." Miss Elliott was one of 29 selected for membership.

SPOOKS is one of four honorary service organizations on the campus of the University.

Selected recently as an assistant issue News Editor on The Daily Texan, published by the University, Miss Elliott has written a series of articles on Model United Nations, as well as several other feature articles, for which she has received a by-line.

Universities and colleges over the country are conducting MUN debates, on the order of the United Nations, and as one of her "service hours," in SPOOKS, Miss Elliott will serve as a page at the debate, as well as cover the story for The Daily Texan. Initiation into the organization will be held in the spring, after service requirements have been met.
