TRAIL DUST

When a man's heart goes into his work, that which he creates achieves special distinction, because he seeks satisfaction that will arrive alone with his best.

Political security is the beginning of degeneration. It is, perhaps, true that we as a nation, are prone to vote our prejudices rather than our convictions, but the practice freshens our political river with springs of uncertainty.

Born in provincialism, I have been slow to adjust my nature to modern inventions. Entering a room on a cold day, I always look for a stove which can be approached, then turned around to for the most satisfying effects.

Texas sky was the color of faded blue jeans and the wind loped across the hills like playful colts. A whirlwind crossed the sandy river and swept up an apron full of yellow cottonwood leaves from the earth, and twisted the gray Salt Cedars. Two men rode out of the mesquites, shook hands and rode away in opposite directions. The cattle country has never needed a greater symbol of friendship.

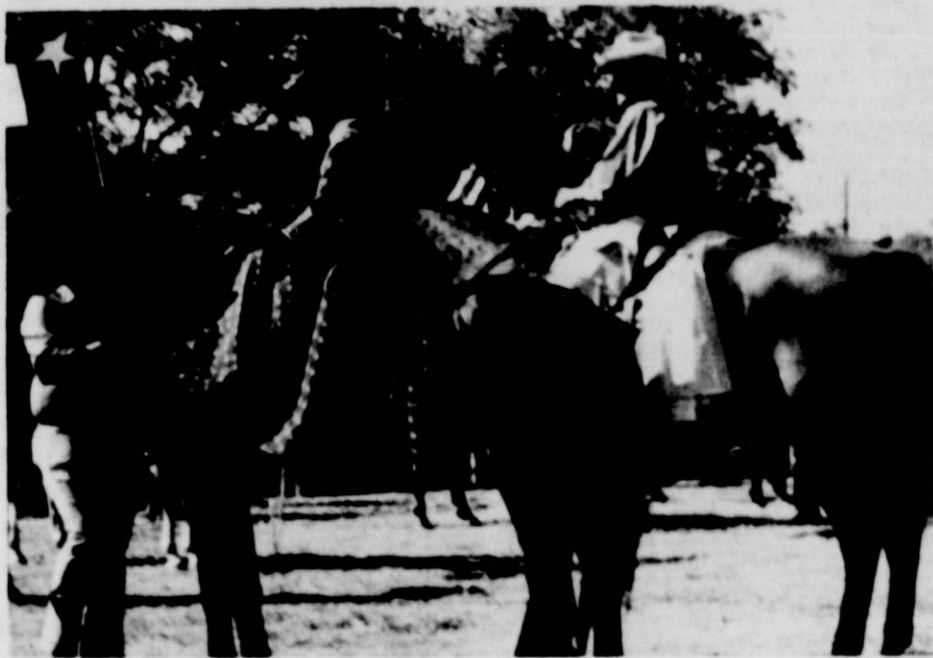

Time has sealed the unrecorded tragedy until a new road was cut across the rough, red hills and alkali flats. A bright and powerful blade cut the white gypsum rock and uprooted the scrubby mesquite. At intervals the roadbuilders found traces of the grassed-over ruts that turned sharply across deep canyons and followed narrow ridges, but no rubber tire had ever traveled the route. Slow moving wagons of the pioneers had left the dim trace on hostile terrain and easier roads had been blazed. Near the forgotten road, on the side of a rocky hill, they found the small, unmarked grave. If the larger stone at the west had once borne markings, the long years, the wind, the rain and snows had erased its message. No trace remained of the tears, the heartache and the depth of pain that had been washed away by the flood of time. Not far away in the same desolate area, another grave is known. A cowboy's horse had fallen and pinned him beneath the weight. His comrades buried him as best they could and the wagon had moved away. His name is not remembered. So an unknown child and a cowboy have slept near each other through the long years in the lonely waste of land and the world has forgotten that they once breathed the sweet air and loved the beauty of wild flowers. None is left to remember that they sang and laughed. Wagons moved away and left dim trails.

Old Settlers Hear Impressive Address

COMPARING America to the vineyard of Naboth, as chronicled in the Bible and found in I Kings, 21, H.L. (Bill) Young, Dickens County Judge delivered an impressive address at the Memorial Service for Motley-Dickens Counties Old Settlers 53rd reunion, Thursday morning at Roaring Springs. "We have long recognized that the most progress for a nation is made by individual men working and acting freely," Judge Young said, citing Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson and other patriots, together with pioneers of this area. He used as his theme, the significance of property, and quoted the humble peasant Naboth, who defied King Ahab. "The Lord forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee." "His labor was his purpose in life," Judge Young stressed. "It was an appreciation of his past, a dedication to his present, and a hope for his future. Naboth stood on principle. In the sight of God, he was worthy of his hire. "Worthy, too, in the sight of God were the brave men and women, our forefathers, who migrated westward, not knowing really what to expect, fully prepared to accept any labor that would confront them. West Texas "was a different sort

A visit from a brown bear three times left a turn up tent, but no food was taken. Most inhabitants are Indians - and gasoline is 95 cents per.

Swine Flu Explained; Immunization Program Starts Soon In Texas

PLANS FOR CONDUCTING THE SWINE FLU IMMUNIZATION PROGRAM HAVE BEEN DEVELOPED BY THE TEXAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH RESOURCES, WHICH WILL RECEIVE THE STATE'S VACCINE SUPPLY AND DISTRIBUTE IT STATEWIDE. THE TEXAS-WIDE CAMPAIGN WILL BEGIN IN SEPTEMBER.

Swine influenza. Just exactly what is it? The influenza virus of swine has been known to cause illness in swine for years, but its appearance in man is a less common occurrence, and a somewhat frightening one. Swine virus has been implicated in the devastating influenza pandemic of 1918 when the virus spread throughout the world causing 20 million deaths - more than 500,000 in this country, according to Dr. Fratis L. Duff, director of the Texas Department of Health Resources.

Early this year a new strain of human influenza virus (designated as A-New Jersey 76 (HswN1)) was isolated during an outbreak of respiratory disease among recruits at Fort Dix, N.J. There are two main types of influenza - A and B. Each type includes various strains. Epidemics of Type A - including swine influenza - are generally more frequent and severe.

Laboratory tests in 12 Fort Dix cases confirmed the presence of swine influenza, and extensive blood testing indicated that several hundred recruits were probably infected during this outbreak. No spread to the civilian population has been demonstrated.

The New Jersey outbreak was the first known example in the United States since about 1930 of person-to-person transmission of a human influenza virus related to that of swine. The virus of swine influenza is relatively stable as opposed to the changing viruses that cause flu in people. There is little difference in the virus which caused flu in swine in the early 1930's from the swine virus of today.

Once every 10 years or so, the changes in a virus which causes influenza in man is most dramatic. This leads to extensive outbreaks such as the pandemic of Asian flu of 1957 which caused an estimated 70,000 deaths in this country, primarily among the elderly or individuals with chronic illness. An estimated 45 million cases of influenza occurred in this country during the fall of 1957.

The Hong Kong strain was prevalent in this country during the fall and winter of 1968-69. An estimated 27,900 deaths were caused by this epidemic in the United States and approximately 50 million persons in this country were affected by it.

A bit of detective work was used to implicate swine virus in the 1918, killer pandemic.

When influenza strikes a person, the defense system of the body builds up antibodies against the disease. Testing of blood of individuals who were living in 1918 shows that almost all have antibodies to swine-like virus, reports the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Center for Disease Control. This suggests, said the CDC, that a virus of this sort may have caused the 1918 pandemic. Such antibodies are also found in many persons over the age of 50, suggesting that a swine-like virus was widespread in human populations, perhaps up to 1930. "Methods for isolation and culture of viruses were not developed until 1930," said Dr. Duff, "so the influenza virus that produced the 1918 pandemic was never isolated."

"However," he said, "since about 80 per cent of the people who are old enough to have had influenza in 1918 show antibodies against hog influenza, this suggests that the swine virus and the 1918 virus are similar." The 1918 influenza pandemic was unique because of its high mortality, and the fact that so many of the fatalities occurred among apparently healthy young men and women, said Dr. Duff.

There is NO evidence at this time to indicate that the virus recently identified at Fort Dix has the same characteristics of virulence as the 1918 virus.

Another highly significant fact about the Fort Dix influenza is that this new strain of influenza virus was identified early, before an epidemic spread that usually occurs with new strains.

This allowed time to prepare a vaccine against the new virus and to plan and to implement an immunization campaign against it. A specific vaccine has to be made.

Flu vaccines in the past have been variably effective. It is generally believed that effectiveness ranges somewhere between 70 and 80 per cent.

When a distinctive new strain comes along, scientists are generally able to better match a vaccine to the new strain, and it is likely that a high degree of effectiveness can be achieved in a vaccine against the swine-like virus, said Dr. Duff.

All resources of the Department of Health Resources will be utilized in the unprecedented mass immunization project, as well as resources in the private sector of medicine and volunteers through the First Lady's Volunteer Program.

Dr. Duff noted that people allergic to eggs could have a reaction to the vaccine, since it will be made utilizing fertilized egg embryo.

Class of '46 Holds Reunion

Several members of the graduating class of 1946 from Roaring Springs High School met Friday night in the home of Mrs. Clyde Clifton (Billie Thomas) for refreshments and a visiting session, in observance of their 30th anniversary.

Those present were Kathryn (Martin) Martin of Whiteflat, June (Byars) Morton of Dallas, Betty (Sanders) Hardin of Roaring Springs.

On Saturday night the group met at the Old Settlers grounds with Grady (Bird) Glen and Genell (Brooks) Carpenter joining them. Also a visitor in the group was Jean (Franklin) Fudge of Littlefield. The class members agreed it didn't seem like 30 years since they had graduated, and they decided to try another reunion next year, with more time to try to get everyone together.

used by ground personnel directing the aerial applicators and by the aerial applicators themselves as they apply insecticides throughout the area.

Dean says the general survey will be carried out by as many as 30 to 40 survey teams which got underway above the Caprock Aug. 9. These teams provide the information on a weekly basis which serve as the basis for decisions in programming fields for treatment.

Diapause Boll Weevil Control Program officials emphasize that bollworm counts will be made right along with weevil counts as the surveyors work each field. Every consideration will be given to bollworm problems or potential bollworm problems when treatment decisions are made. Surveys to verify infestation began below the Caprock Aug. 16.

"With the possible exception of some selected fields above the Caprock, the target date for the beginning of insecticide applications is Sept. 6," Dean adds. "This delayed starting date should greatly reduce the threat of bollworm infestations which have been a concern to many producers when treatments were starting on Aug. 25, and should make possible more intensive treatments for diapausing weevils late in the operation which are actually the target of the Diapause Control Program in the first place."

Dean said that if it appears that substantial acreage can be saved from infestation and treatment by treating some early infested fields above the Caprock before this date, then such treatments may be carried out. Otherwise, treatments in such fields will begin Sept. 6, the general beginning date.

"It should be recognized that all fields cannot be treated on the beginning date; but if weather permits, all infested fields should be treated within three to four days period thereafter," he adds.

Administrated by Plains Cotton Growers and USDA's Plant Protection and Quarantine Service, the program was set up in 1964 to thwart the westward migration of the boll weevil from its overwintering habitat in the Rolling Plains. Cotton producers in a 15-county control zone area along the Caprock voluntarily participate in the program.

Plains Cotton Growers Executive Director Ed Dean, who is helping PPQ officials coordinate the control effort, says that each year, every field in the infested areas must be individually mapped as near to scale, shape and acreage as possible, then colored and numbered.

"Such maps are used extensively by surveyors who enter each field on a weekly basis to determine the presence or absence and degree of infestation of boll weevils and bollworms," Dean says. "They are also
