A strand of cultured pearls adds a glowing touch to bridal attire. Brilliantly rich cultured pearls enhance the radiant bride's beauty on her wedding day as they always add a lustrous focal point to her out fit whenever they are worn. In the future, the shimmering strand of cultured pearls may be loaned to a soon-to-be-wed sister, niece or cousin who'll appreciate the thoughtfulness for something "old" and "borrowed" to complete her wedding attire.

regarding its everlasting beauty and value.

The ancient Greeks believed that Aphrodite, the goddess of love and beauty, was born like a pearl out of a shell that was washed up from the sea. According to Roman mythology. Venus, the goddess of love, was born in a similar fashion.

In the East, the pearl represented love, gentleness, purity and compassion — a tradition carried into every part of the civilized world.

At one time, pearls were the exclusive privilege of the noble and wealthy. Julius Caesar invaded Britain in order to obtain a treasure of pearls, according to the Roman historian, Suetonius. After the invasion, Caesar presented a breast plate, set with pink pearls from the Conway River in Wales, to the goddess Venus Genetrix in her temple in Rome.

Throughout history, royal women decorated themselves in pearls. Queen Nephretete of Egypt went to her wedding practically zowered with pearls. Elizabeth I entwined pearls in her hair, wore them as necklaces and had them embroidered into her robes.

Today, cultured pearl jewelry adoms many public figures. Princess Diana often wears a long, knotted rope of cultured pearls. Nancy Reagan complements her dresses with Cultured pearls, the prized gems of eternal beauty, are worn by many women today who consider their elegance and versatility a valuable investment. In 1982, the most popular cultured pearl iewelry appeared to be necklaces composed of uniform 5mm form cultured pearls. A trend towards purchase of longer necklaces, 24 to 30 inches in length, to complement the leaner look of current fashions, also seems prevalent.

If you don't already own cultured pearl jewelry, why not purchase a strand of cultured pearl strand to the top of the gown's neckline.

SOIL-APPLIED HERBICIDES FOR BRUSH CONTROL

Spring usually brings rain to most parts of Texas, and that's what's needed to make soi applied herbicides effective on range brush.

Four soil-applied herbicides are regis-tered for use on rangeland, says Dr. Tommy Welch, range brush and weed control specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Three are pelleted or granulated -- 10 percent picloram pellets (Tordon 10K or Grazon 10K—, 20 percent tebuthiuron (Graslan 20P) and 10 percent diacamba granules (Banvel 10G). Hexazionone. (Velpar L) is a liquid herbicide for soil application.

Welch suggests applying 10K, Graslan 20P and Velpar L befoe expected rainfall, preferably in early spring. Banvel 10G should be applied in spring and early summer (before July 1).

Only a couple of weeks ago the PIK (Payment In Kind) program was the talk of the cotton industry. Today it's "Son of PIK."

That's the name someone has aptly applied to the bid procedure conceived by USDA, first for grains and now cotton, to make up the shortfall of government-owned commodities needed to meet government-owned commodities needed to meet PIK commitments.

Under the PIK program, USDA committed itself to give participating producers a specified amount of cotton or grain out of government-owned stocks in return for producer agreements to idle up to 50 percent of the acreage they otherwise would have planted to that crop. It was later found that the government did not hold title to enough com, wheat or cotton to fulfill its obligations.

Hence the birth of "Son of PIK."

There is no shortage of cotton to meet domestic and export market requirements. Commodity Credit Corporation has in storage a more than adequate and export market requirements. Commodity Credit Corporation has in storage a more than adequate supply, both for the market and to fill PIK requirements. But farmers, not government, own much of this cotton. It is held by CCC as collateral for 10-month non-recourse loans and can't be used by the government for PIK requirements until those loans either expire or are forfeited.

Most of the farmer-owned 1982 crop cotton entered the loan between October 1982 and the present.

Since USDA's PIK "debts" to farmers begin falling due in July of this year, the Department May 11 announced an in-kind incentive for early forfeiture of 1982-crop loan cotton. From May 16 to May 26 farmers may submit bids to county ASCs offices, offering to forfeit a given number of bales of cotton in return for free title to as much as one bale of cotton for each 15 bales offered.

bale of cotton for each 15 hales offered.

For example, a producer with 1,050 bales of cotton under CCC loan may say to the government "I'll forfeit these bales if you'll give me back 70 of them free of interest and storage charges." He can of course submit a lesser bid of 60 bales, 50 bales or any number below the 1 for 15 maximum.

As of March 31, total 1982 crop cotton under loan was 3,207,580 bales. A yet-to-be determined amount of that cotton already has been forfeited to USDA by farmers as a precequisite to participation; the PIV.

program. For that reason, and others, USDA doesn't now know precisely (1) how much cotton must be acquired to meet its shortfall or (2) how much of current loan stocks are as yet uncommitted and the same control and the same course. current loan stocks are as yet uncommitted and thus available for acquisition available for acquisition.

As of April 20, CCC stocks contained another 2,566,973 bales of 1981 crop and 94,302 bales of 1980 crop cotton, virtually all of which already is or soon will be available to USDA for PIK requirements. An official of USDA has been quoted as saying "I've got my fingers crossed" hoping enough cotton will be acquired through the 1-for-15 bid procedure to satisfy the Department's needs.

If not, clear the delivery room for "Son of PIK, Jr."

INVITATIONAL

Despite many upsets and unexpected hap-penings -- late cnacellathe caterer's sudden departure from Dickens, the Pro's absence, and uncertain weather (perhaps Friday 13th omens?" --all contributed to headaches for the president and tournament chairman in charge of managing the activities.

Early morning fog and cloudiness with a definite chill brought out attire from a fur hat out attire from a fur hat (with shorts), warm-up suits, wind breakers and such -- then the sun came out and the warming trend caused changes to be made in attire to short sleeves and shorts -- all within the matter of a few hours.

The tournament play was started without the customary shot-gun start -- as the husband of a certain member would not let her use his shot gun (especially, he said, in her frame of mind at the time.)
