'Venus Women' To Reign Over 'Glamor Girl'

Beauty Expert Predicts Stronger And More Beautiful Women

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP)—"Venus women"—stronger than men and more beautiful than ever—soon will put aside under the now-reigning "glamor girls," a beauty expert predicted today.

Russell Mancuso, instructor for the nation's pioneer WPA beauty course offered under the adult education program, declared the "rouge and lipstick era is about over."

"Women will turn their attention from wardrobe and makeup details to more worldly affairs," he said. "They will be altogether different and superior to men in strength, with enough beauty thrown in to sway the affairs of the nation."

Competition among women will stimulate the new type and new strength, Mancuso added. "For that matter, women are already stronger than men, as a general rule," he asserted.

"Gossips won't talk much longer about the shade of a woman's stockings. They'll discuss the type of vitamin pills she carries in her compact."

Young Men Who Trail Debutante Parties Will Face A Strict Season

Men Who Get Drunk At Coming-Out Parties This Year Will Not Be Invited Again, Says Miss Chapman

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (AP)—The young gentlemen who follow the "chicken-patty trail" of debutante parties in and around New York, are faced with a stricter ban than ever on serious drinking this season.

"Men who get drunk at coming-out parties this year will find themselves black-listed and not invited again," said Miss Mildred Chapman, a cheerful, grey-haired woman, who, as one of New York's leading social secretaries, knows all about the dread little black books which may turn a budding young berry into a social outcast.

"On the whole, though, the boys and girls are behaving much better," Miss Chapman said. "They were pretty bad during prohibition."

Not that there won't be plenty of liquor. Some of the lavish big parties figure on $5 or $9 a head for liquid refreshment.

All told, the larger deb parties cost anywhere from $2,500 to $25,000, depending on the number of guests, which run from 200 to 1,000. "Advance bookings show that 1937 will be the biggest deb season since 1929," said Ted Saucier of the Waldorf-Astoria. He cited one party for 1,000 guests which left the head of the family with a $25,000 headache.

Saucier estimated the debuts of about 100 "top flight" New York debutantes this fall will cost between $350,000 and $500,000—not counting the transportation costs to and from various eastern colleges for the 800 young men listed as "eligibles" for coming-out parties.

'STRIP TEASE' AND STRIKES—HAVE THEY ANY CONNECTION?

HARLAN, Ky., Aug. 2 (AP)—The national labor relations board came into Harlan county today to find out what—if anything—"strip-tease" dancers have to do with coal mining.

Leonard Shore of Cincinnati, an NLRB attorney, was to conduct questioning at a hearing on a complaint that the Clover Fork Coal company of nearby Kitz, Ky., employed "lewd and immoral women" to lure company employes away from organization meetings sponsored by the United Mine Workers of America.

The company's answer to the NLRB charge was a blanket denial by A. F. Whitfield, secretary-treasurer.

Also set forth is the charge that the company "did employ as armed guards notorious criminals, gun-thugs commissioned as deputy sheriffs and other irresponsible ruffians for the express purpose of threatening, intimidating and coercing its employes."

DIES AFTER FAST

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2 (AP)—Death of Miss Aida Zinkan, 63, shortly after she ended a 53-day fast "for the glory of the Lord," led to an autopsy today.

An attending physician refused to sign a death certificate for the elderly woman, formerly of Victoria, B. C.

WOMAN DIRECTS PASSPORT BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, chief of the state department's passport division, runs a mail-order business which just now is bringing the government $1,500,000 a year.

She directs a staff of more than 100 in deciding questions of nationality, issuing passports, instructing foreign service officers on those subjects and writing letters of introduction for Americans going abroad.

All this is done so quietly that thousands never know the "R. B. Shipley" who signs their passports is a woman.

"It's a thrilling job," she said today. "Developments are so unexpected. It concerns people—not just papers."

Foreign travel has increased greatly this year, Mrs. Shipley said. The 339,500 passports issued in the first six months represent a 48 per cent increase over the same period last year.

READING AND WRITING

By John Selby

A POPULAR HISTORY OF WITCHCRAFT

Summers; (Dutton: $2.75). Please rub your eyes before beginning Montague Summers' "A Popular History of Witchcraft," because it is a book to provoke wonderment and arouse incredulity. It is difficult to swallow the fact, even second hand, but Mr. Summers is a British expert in witchcraft who actually believes that witches were, and that witches are today. He is therefore remarkable enough for the attention of Mr. Robert Ripley.

"The Black International of Satan," he writes, "that is the canker which is corrupting and destroying the world."

Mr. Summers gives most of his book to a discussion of the life details of the well ordered witch (and wizard). A soocer, he declares, one who has commerce with the devil. Witches are mentioned, beginning before Biblical times and coming right down to Pennsylvania and its hex business. Formal contracts are made today with Lucifer, Mr. Summers believes. Who can doubt, he adds, that "the revolution of (sic) Russia, the persecution in Mexico, the anarchy and atrocities of Spain, have been fomented, energized and directed by Santanic agency?" This Satan is the old devil with the forked tail, none of your modern psychological substitutes.

He describes with minuteness and relish the wicked deeds of witches—of Mother Fillet, who covered the child of John Spink with lice (in 1645); of the Cornish witches who covered two men with vermin, and finally were thwarted when the men stood in a church porch as the congregation departed, muttering to their verminous selves, "We have lost our flocks, call them home."

He describes the witch covens, the Sabbat, the technique used by witches in their broomstick riding (ointment of a sort is indicated). He believes that witches kill newborn babies and eat them.

PERIODICALLY there comes from Washington in the ay's news a story that a national census of unemployed is being planned and insisted on in order the administration may know exactly what it has to provide in the way of employment or a dole. The president some time ago said he believed that such a census should be taken, and he was eagerly backed by some members of the congress who evidently foresaw some nice jobs to pass out in the shape of supervisors, enumerators and the other people considered necessary in the taking of a census.

An unemployment census could be taken right now in any day at a cost that covered the necessary blanks for recording the names and other information. There is not a community in which someone could not be found to serve as a registrar without cost. The call for the registration was made at the voting precinct in which the unemployed could cost comparatively nothing and the taking of it would cost comparatively nothing and the taking of it.

You see a parade of actors, magistrates, Tammany Schemers, artists, writers, unknown visitors whose very obscurity is the spring-board at will bounce them to fame.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann THE FALLACY OF THE WAGES BILL The original wages and hours bill was so bad that the amended bill has seemed to many critics as if it were almost a good bill.

Yet unless this bill is a sham, it is a first step in one of the most complicated enterprises that the federal government ever engaged in. Saying this, I do not refer, of course, to the prohibition of child labor which under any rational procedure would be dealt with in a separate measure.

No doubt it sounds plausible in the north to say that southern mills should be prevented from employing their cheaper labor to undersell. But after all, there must be some reason why labor is cheaper in the south than it is in the north, and the question is whether federal wage fixing can be the true remedy for the low wages of the south.

My view is that the cheapness of southern labor cannot be cured by legislation which, if it is effective, prevents or retards the industrial development of the south and indirectly prohibits the employment of a substantial part of the laborers of the south. The real reason, it seems to me, why labor is cheap in the south is, first, that the agricultural land from which it is derived is in large part unproductive.

THE POLITICAL danger might be worth the risk if there were any prospect that the board can hope to solve the economic problem. But if it is true, as I believe it to be, that southern wages cannot be raised by federal law, then it is a grievous mistake to commit the federal government to such an enterprise.

FLAME TRAIL

By Marie De Nervaud

Chapter 34 TAKEN PRISONER The sheriff's eye travelled swiftly over Marion. Convinced of the truth of her statement that she hadn't a gun, he motioned her to one side.

"You keep out of this now," he ordered. "I'll be wanting you to answer some questions later." Striding past her, Zeke Farley crossed over to Ted's bunk, just as one of his posse was making a rope fast about Ted's wrists and ankles.

"Thought you'd given us the alp, didn't you?" he gloated. "Well, it ain't so easy in these parts to get past the law."

Ted, who had been so rudely awakened from a sound sleep, took rapid measure of the situation. He struggled to a sitting position and faced the sheriff with steady eyes. "I don't know what this is all about," he declared.

Never from any shot of mine," Ted explained. "I was taking a drink of water, and turned around to see him stealing up on me and pulling his gun. He got the drop, and my shot went wild. It might have nipped him, but it never hit a bull's eye like a shot in the temple. But even if it had, it was a plain case of self defense."

"You can talk that at the trial," Zeke Farley broke in gruffly. "Sam Cutter'll be up here any time now, and he'll take you in charge. Scrap Johnson was murdered just over the Idaho state line, so that means you'll be tried in Clear Water Basin."

"You may as well know, though," he added, "that your story's full of holes. The bullet that killed Scrap Johnson came from your gun. We've got both the gun and the bullet, and the report just came in yesterday."

Ted's surprise at this statement was genuine and mixed with incredulous dismay. "Must be some mistake there!" He caught Marion's eyes on him, and with a mutter warning in their direction, he turned back to the sheriff.

A Whispered Word A shout from the woods broke in on them. A minute later Sam Cutter and his posse came stamping up the steps and crowded into the shack.

In the confusion, while Zeke Farley was explaining the situation to the new arrivals, Marion slipped around beside Ted, and "Try to get them to leave you here a few days longer," she whispered, "and don't mention Dad whatever you do!"

She shrank back, as Sam Cutter came over toward them. He was a powerful man with a bull dog jaw and a shrewd glint in his squinted gray eyes.

SECOND DEATH

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Aug. 2 (AP)—A second victim died today as a military court of inquiry prepared to open its investigation of an accident that plunged a truckload of 17 C.C.C. enrollees through a bridge rail into an arroyo 40 feet deep near Cuba, 15 miles northwest of here.

Without giving Ted a chance to have a word with Marion, they hustled him out. Zeke Farley motioned to his men to follow and wait for him outside.

Let alone with Marion, he studied her carefully. She waited, resolved to have him break the silence. With every nerve tense, she was determined not to say anything that could be used against Ted, or that would involve her father. She was thankful that she had Zeke Farley to deal with instead of Sam Cutter, whom she put down as a bully and a brute.

Let's hear your story, now," Zeke Farley said finally. His voice was more gentle, but none the less firm.

There's not much to tell," Marion answered. "I came out early one morning to find Ted Gaynor crawling across the clearing delirious and apparently dying from loss of blood. How he ever got as far as this, I don't know. I got him in just before the storm broke, and naturally did what I could for him. He pulled through, but it was a narrow squeak."

"I never saw him in my life before," Marion answered, looking straight into Zeke Farley's eyes. "Humph" was his only comment, but his eyes held an unwilling admiration for Marion's straightforward manner. (Copyright, 1937, Marie de Nervaud.)
