TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Frustrations have scarred my friend's life and left him with but a few illusions. He said it started when he was a boy and stole his way under what he thought was a circus tent, only to discover he had entered a Baptist revival.

On the horizon of reality there is a special mirage for each of us that glimmers when the light is right, reflecting the precious jewels of hope.

The weather report has become an interesting feature of television in West Texas. Frequently bordering on fiction, it displays charts showing the progress of fronts and their association with what is going to happen. One of the best features is the explanation of why the weather did not turn out as previously forecast.

Envy has seldom been a part of my nature but in school I remember one instance that seemed fixed forever. My friend went with a chubby girl whose hair was red as flames, and more than that he rode a pacing sorrel saddle horse.

The enchantment of West Texas in the spring embraces nature's own arrangement of sights, scents and sounds. The white banks of blooming wild plum bushes spreading a sublime fragrance over the sage, and the music of a mockingbird's song, need only the cool flames of a hesitant sunrise.

If the incidents of plane hijacking continue to increase, the air lines may be forced to increase the portions of alcohol which is available, to keep the passengers calm. On the other hand they might serve marijuana cigarettes as a flight sedative. The pleasure of plane travel is not enhanced when you are suspicious of everyone, including the old lady next to you with a bulging satchel.

Often a warped idea is polished until it decorates a life ambition and glows from the wax of dreams.

LIONS WORKING like beavers are shown above in constructing a 40x60 foot basketball court in northeast Matador near the former colored school. At the cement chute is Lion Tail Twister Glen Brotherton. The project seemed doomed to damage late Saturday when a rainstorm passed over this area and left .32-inch moisture (and some hail) on the freshly poured cement. A group of Lions went back to the project early Sunday and worked cement into the surface of the court. —Tribune photo

CONSOLIDATION PLAN STYMIED

TWO school boards, Matador and Roaring Springs were in separate sessions Monday night, when Roaring Springs telephoned the Matador board.

They announced by unanimous vote that they had decided to discontinue the plan of consolidation of the two school districts.

Joe M. "Buzz" Thacker, President of the Roaring Springs School board said that a majority of the "straw votes" returned favored the merger. "It was the 'static' we were receiving from those that opposed it that caused us to decide to withdraw."

Mr. Thacker said the board had a "rough time" when the move was brought to a vote in July 1967 and defeated in Roaring Springs 71 for and 102 against. The Matador vote was 265 for and 15 against.

Mr. Thacker said the Roaring Springs school board was unanimous in the Monday night action, in deciding to operate the school as long as possible without consolidation, thus avoiding the severe criticism of the minority group which opposes the plan.

PIONEER TEACHER, MRS. JEFFERS, 88 HAS BIRTHDAY

SCHOOL teaching was perhaps less lucrative around the turn of the century when Mrs. Claud Jeffers taught in the Matador school, the old Flag Springs school, and Clements school, than it is today. She received $35 per month and had to pay her own board and room.

Mrs. Jeffers celebrated her birthday Sunday, surrounded by three of her four sons, their wives and children (and one great-grandchild).

She was born in Knox County, Tenn., March 9, 1884. She came to Quanah in the fall of 1895 and later to Childress. She came to Matador in a mail hack in 1902. She went to school here and later taught here. She was qualified with a county teaching certificate but later attended the "Normal" in Plainview and obtained a state certificate.

The Matador school at that time, was a three-room frame house located just east of the former Burton-Lingo lumber yard.

Mrs. Jeffers' maiden name was Betty Stevens and she was married to the late Claud Jeffers, November 1, 1906. The place of her marriage was at the Wiley P. Jones home, at the present site of the home of Mrs. R. A. Day.

Rev. J. T. Hicks performed the ceremony. Mr. Jeffers, a famous "bronc-breaker", died April 14, 1937. Mrs. Jeffers has made her home in Matador for almost 70 years. One son, Kenneth of San Angelo, was unable to attend his mother's 88th birthday observance.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. George Jeffers of Panhandle, their daughter, Miss Susie Jeffers, who teaches school in Tulsa; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jeffers of Pampa, their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Oler and Kimberly of Lubbock; and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ward Jeffers and daughter, Carol Ann of Carrollton.

LAUGHTER has a therapeutic value according to Dr. E. Aubrey Cox, eminent physician and surgeon of Wichita Falls, who made the principal address Tuesday night at thirty-fifth annual Father-Son Banquet in the First Baptist Church basement.

Dr. Cox employed his theory of laughter during the entire program that followed the barbecued beef supper prepared and served by Lions (and others who help in Lions work). The banquet originated by the late Paul Eubank, has been a Lions project for 36 years. Dr. Cox was introduced by Lion Douglas Meador.

"Not to have fun in life is un-Christian," Dr. Cox said, as he continued to tell humorous stories during the entire time he was speaking. He is a well-known after dinner speaker.

Boys and their fathers (or adopted fathers) laughed during the entire address. "Keep a sense of humor, and laugh at yourself," Dr. Cox advised. He mixed philosophy in his humorous stories and said: "Find something you think is real important and work for it... make yourself look good in what you do and make others look good who are associated with you..."

"I have a lot of fun in life," Dr. Cox advised, "but you will have to work for it... humor and good health go together..." He advised fathers to associate with sons in hunting and fishing. "I feel that men and boys are closer to God when they are walking in the hills," Dr. Cox declared. Frank Welling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Welling was his "adopted son" for the evening.

The program started in the church sanctuary with Darrell Moore serving as master of ceremonies, followed by the singing of "America" led by Lion J. R. Whitworth. Announcements were made by Boss Lion James Stanley and invocation was by Lion Rev. Douglas Gossett.

In the basement, following the banquet, an address of welcome was made by President Stanley, and followed by a tribute to Lt. Paul Eubank, who organized the Father-Son Banquet.

Tribune Enters 76 Volume Year

(Delayed from last week)

Up in the left-hand corner of page one on this week's Tribune, under the masthead, is printed 76th year, No. 1. The designation means that a weekly newspaper has been printed in Matador for 75 years.

It has not always been the Matador Tribune. It started with the Motley County News, later was published as the Maverick, the Gusher and then returned to the Motley County News.

It was March 14, 1934 that Howard Hamilton and Douglas Meador purchased the Motley County News from the late Grover C. Mitchell, when the name was changed to the Matador Tribune.

The following year Meador purchased Hamilton's interest in the newspaper. Mr. and Mrs. Meador have operated the Tribune continuously for 37 years. The present Tribune building was constructed in 1963.

The present Tribune started here in late 1933 when Meador moved the Roaring Springs News (which he had operated since October in 1932) to Matador and changed the name to the Matador Tribune. The Tribune Publishing Company was organized in January 1934, at which time Hamilton became a partner.

The volume no. 76 dates back to the first weekly published here, to which the Tribune is successor.

FREE BOOKLET GIVES FARMERS TAX TIPS

DALLAS, (Special) — The 1972 edition of the "Farmer's Tax Guide" is now available from county agricultural agents or the Internal Revenue Service, Ellis Campbell, Jr., IRS District Director for North Texas, said today. The booklet, IRS Publication 225, shows how farmers should fill out the 1040 tax return and which schedules should be attached. A listing of important Federal tax dates for farmers can also be found in the publication.

Written in non-technical language, the tax guide contains many examples of how farm transactions are handled for Federal income tax purposes. Although primarily written to help farmers prepare their 1971 tax return, the Guide is useful as a reference throughout the year.

On March 21 and September 23, day and night are of equal duration in every part of the world.

Rattlesnake Man Wants to Retire

AFTER a quarter of a century hunting in the Foothill Country "Rattlesnake" Bill Slover, 66, says he is going to retire from the precarious hobby. Bill Slover has captured hundreds of rattlesnakes, from six-footer Diamond backs, to small ones.

He has studied the rattlesnake and is a member of the Herpetology Society (reptile study). In his retirement he is teaching younger men to follow in his footsteps. Last week end he had two guests, Roger Simpson and John Whitehead from the East Central University at Ada, Oklahoma, who joined him on hunts. The two young men are also members of the Herpetology Society and take the live rattlesnakes back to Oklahoma, where the reptiles are cared for and studied. The snakes crawl on white gravel beds and are regularly weighed and tested.

Locally "Little Doug" Meador also joined the hunting expedition.

Late Monday, Simpson called the Tribune and said the total catch was 108 live rattlesnakes, besides three that were dead. The snakes came from dens on the former Fish Ranch, the W. E. Burleson Ranch and other known rattlesnake locations, including the Bob Martin, Buck Waybourn and Eldred Seigler ranches.

Bill Slover says the rattlesnake population is thinning out in this area, and he has, perhaps more than any man in West Texas, contributed to the loss of deadly snakes.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

REGISTERING CONSUMER COMPLAINTS

A key to promoting consumer power is learning how to register an effective complaint about an unsatisfactory purchase or service.

Instigating a complaint against a company is often so frustrating that the consumer abandons his right of retaliation altogether. Retreating only helps to prolong the poor service.

Most businessmen and manufacturers want to learn shoppers' complaints so they can identify and correct their mistakes.

Organizing an effective complaint means gathering all the facts. The first step is to make sure a complaint is justified. Read the label or instructions for the manufacturer's directions for care and use. Check the guarantee or warranty. Know what is covered and what is not.

If the complaint is justified, plan your attack carefully, listing all reasons for dissatisfaction with the product or service. This list should also report information of where and when the product was purchased, its model number, brand name, price and a brief description of its faults.

The consumer is now ready to file the complaint. Begin with the business or service organization with whom the original deal was made. If the complaint cannot be settled on the spot, ask to see someone higher in authority.

If you write to the store, address the complaint to the person most likely capable of helping you. In the letter present all facts as you would verbally, and keep a carbon copy.

Shoppers who telephone their complaints should record the name of the person they speak to in case the situation is not cleared up. If these efforts fail to produce results, it's time to contact the Better Business Bureau or the Chamber of Commerce. Obtaining adjustments are similar to other business deals. Know your facts, be firm but courteous, and don't give up if you don't succeed at the first contact.

The latest herbicide recommendations for cotton weed control in West Texas are available. The recommendations are a summary of field tests by Texas A&M University researchers & Extension specialists throughout West Texas.

The report summarizes field trials with preplant, preemergence and postemergence herbicides. The two-page publication lists the various chemicals that were tested, application rates and necessary precautions for safe use. In addition, the report gives information on herbicide use for weed control in narrow row cotton.

Sprayer calibration recommendations are also offered, and a special section is included on control of problem weeds such as morningglory, devil's claw, cocklebur and watergrass.

The bulletin is intended as a guide to assist growers in planning a weed control program to fit their specific needs. Individual producers must make the final decisions and select chemical brands, methods of application and rates that are most economical for their situations.

These studies were supported in part through the "dollar-a-bale" program of Cotton Incorporated and the Plains Cotton Growers Incorporation. Copies are available at my office.

The action of people will pay off. Last year cotton producers were urged to purchase their products if they expected to remain in business. Evidently many did as cotton prices increased for the 1971 crop, and I think many of you have found it is now easier to buy 100% cotton shirts.

The battle is just starting, with the outcome depending on those involved in the production and sale of this crop as a source of income. Now you see timely adds in the newspapers and on TV promoting the use of 100% cotton, but for these to be successful, the producers must support their crop.

Letters were received from all over the cotton producing belt relative to the letter that was mailed last year. Will you give this effort your support.

Recent research with large anchor chains for brush control has added several new dimensions to range improvement.

The popular practice of knocking down brush with anchor chains was developed on the Swenson Ranch near Stamford in the early 1940's. From this early work, researchers from the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station are continually seeking improvements in this low cost operation, which usually costs about one to three dollars per acre.

Land smoothing after mechanical control seeded preparation, seed covering and improved brush control through chain link modification are additional benefits of this popular tree-falling practice.

The land smoothing effect has been especially valuable when used with tree grubbing. Grubbing is a highly-effective method of brush control, but is often criticized because the land is left littered with mounds and potholes. Research at the Pitchfork Ranch has resulted in much smoother land when chained after grubbing.

Root plowing is another effective practice that leaves the land rough and broken. In Guthrie studies and also on the Waggoner Ranch, chaining after root plowing has again proven valuable in land smoothing; plus improving seeded preparation.

Chaining before and after aerial seeding that followed root plowing increase grass seedling emergence 3.7 times over non-chained plots.

In further efforts to improve chaining practices, a normal anchor chain was modified by welding an 18 inch railroad iron to each link, increasing the weight of the chain to 100 lbs. per foot. So far, it has shown promise for improved seeded preparation and control of shallow-rooted brush species.

The experimental chain was used in combination with grazing goats near Menard to achieve 90% top kill of shin oak. Early testing of the chain in combination with chemical spraying indicates excellent possibilities for cow-cost shinnery control.

In another long-range study at the Whitehead Ranch, a standard anchor chain that included single and double loops was used in combination with raking on untreated and aerial-sprayed mesquite. When the soil moisture was high, up to 70% of the large trees were completely uprooted.

Treatments will be followed in 3 to 5 years with an additional treatment of grubbing, aerial spraying or root plowing. The extent of the follow-up treatment will depend on the regrowth of the mesquite, productivity of the land and presence of desirable range grasses.

It's not long to the annual Motley County Junior Livestock Show. Date for the 1972 show is Saturday, March 25th, and for this year's show, classes for youth include fat steers; market hogs, breeding hogs, and breeding rabbits. Classes open to all individuals living in the county or owning land in the county are heifers (beef) and breeding gilts.

Additional information will appear later, as contacts are made to secure donations for the support of the Junior Show.

Mrs. O. V. Latimer of Lubbock, formerly of Matador, attended to business here Tuesday. She was accompanied by Mrs. Addie McGinnis.

Nadine Cooper (1)

THANK YOU NOTE

Mrs. W. M. Bailey (1)

CARD OF THANKS
"Thank you" is not enough to say to you, our friends who have helped us in so many wonderful ways the past few weeks. Your kind and thoughtful expressions of love and sympathy have helped make our burden of grief lighter. For those of you who so lovingly sat with Howe, for the visits, calls, food and prayers, we are deeply grateful — also those who opened their homes to us.
The love fund just overwhelms us and makes us feel so humble. Each time we needed a helping hand, there was just always someone there. We never really realize the true value of friends until we are in need. We just pray that in your hour of need, yours will be met as ours has been.
Elsie Hines, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Carpenter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Hines and family, and Alita Hawkins. (1)
