TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Suddenly, as if a carpenter might have checked the blow of his hammer in mid-air before climbing down off the scaffolding and departing, the frame-work of a home is halted on a little plot beside the roadway. Tomorrow's sun will warp the rafters more and the wind will continue to loosen helpless nails until at last every trace of the ghostly monument to someone's dreams will be removed.

Often the frame-work of a life is unfinished, as if the workmen upon leaving one evening were never again able to find their way back. Sometimes it is sinister and bony fingers that destroy the splendid plans in an hour when the structure seems certain of completion, but men do not always wear shrouds when their dreams die, nor do their hearts always stop when the arteries of hope become barren.

The course of a young sparrow has perhaps been changed by a rain drop in its seemingly singular purpose of refreshing the earth.

A young man seeking to appease the fever of wanderlust which, incidentally, is best treated by the panaceas of domestication, priced a railway ticket to a distant city and found that he needed one small coin in order to have enough to make the purchase.

It is not exactly flattering when I observe the expressions of surprise on people's faces when I start singing, however, it is interesting to wonder whether they are moved by pity or natural curiosity.

beneath dust powdered in the mill of grinding years, hangs against warped planks in the harness stall wall as an effigy to modesty, defeated of its own rights by the doubtful power of a new emancipation.

Here in this country where the past dwelt lavishly at the expense of courage bequeathed from the plundered ages as restless men dared to dream of wider frontiers, there remain in unfrequented closets a few vestments used during that remote tenancy.

Two Historic Marker Slabs Are In Place

Roaring Springs And Tee Pee City Have Monuments Set

Two of Motley county's most important historic locations, Roaring Springs and Tee Pee City, are now marked for posterity by 2300 pound grey granite monuments placed by the Texas Centennial Commission last Friday.

Location Error Be cause of an error on the part of a member of the county Centennial Committee, preparations were started to place the Roaring Springs marker in the town of Roaring Springs instead of at the historical springs, three miles away.

On Lonely Mesa The marker for Tee Pee City, about seventeen miles northeast of Matador, was placed on a lonely mesa on the west side of Tee Pee creek and a few paces from the grave of Isaac O. Armstrong, pioneer merchant who died during the heyday of the vanished city.

FAMOUS PEOPLE HONOR ROGERS

FORT WORTH, Aug. 24—Fred Stone and Billie Burke, famous stage and screen personalities, attended Will Rogers' Day at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial Monday with Mrs. Rogers, widow of the famous humorist-philosopher and her two sons, Will, Jr., and Jimmy.

Stone and Miss Burke were among the intimate friends of Will Rogers. Miss Burke is the widow of the late Flo Ziegfeld.

While Stone was starring in a Broadway production some years ago, he was seriously injured in an airplane crash and Rogers, abandoning his own affairs, hastened to New York and took the role, as an accommodation to his friend, until Stone recovered. Miss Burke's husband gave Rogers his first big chance in the "Follies" and on one occasion while the Ziegfelds' daughter, Patricia, was ill, Rogers led a horse into the child's bedroom and presented the animal, which formerly belonged to the Prince of Wales, to her.

Central spot of interest on Will Rogers Day was the air-conditioned room which is an exact reproduction of the living room in the Rogers home at Santa Monica and contains the actual personal belongings of the beloved Will.

Men who knew Rogers during his cowboy days in Texas and Oklahoma, relatives from Claremore and Oologah, Okla., his birthplace, and a host of admirers attended.

OIL-PLATING IS...

Oil-Plating is exactly what is formed in your engine by Conoco Germ Processed oil. The Conoco Germ Process scientifically combines a most carefully refined mineral oil with an extra, exclusive "concentrated oily essence"—fully guarded by patents. And this invention enables your Conoco Germ Processed oil to combine with all engine parts so that they become literally Oil-Plated. Oil-Plating does not depend on constant pumping up, because it does not rapidly drain down, but stays put—fixed—Plated. You can see that this firmly fixed, slippy Oil-Plating leaves no un-oiled bare spots in your engine. And that leaves least chance of wear... And the less wear, the more oil you save... So Oil-Plate your engine this summer—this day!—with CONOCO GERM PROCESSED OIL

Pioneers of Motley County are daily turning in information to the Tribune about how long they have lived here and other interesting material.

If you have lived here 25 years or more, or know someone that has, fill in the blank carried in this issue and bring or send it to the Matador Tribune.

Names Listed

The following have already turned in information:
 Mrs. Bert Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Moore, and Edith Williams Sanders.
 Mrs. Duncan, who was Myrtle Williamson, was born in Bosque county and came to Motley county 15 years ago. She was married at Afton in 1903, and is the mother of 14 children.

Mr. Moore was born in Falls county in 1874, moved to Motley county in 1894, and married here Sept. 1, 1899. He bought the Motley County Journal in 1895 from Less Smith, and edited it from then until 1900. He established the Commercial Grocery in 1901.

Mrs. Moore is the former Effie Olive Criswell, and was born at Richland Springs. She moved to Motley county in 1886.

Mrs. Sanders was born in Motley county. She is now assistant post-master.

3,000,000th at Exposition Feted

Mary Ellen Twitty, a ten-year-old Dallas lassie, was feted by the Texas Centennial Exposition because she was the 3,000,000th visitor to the fair. She was the first to enter the grounds in the morning and was driven through the grounds in the famous 3,000,000th V-8 Ford, now on exhibition at the Ford Motor Company's Exposition building.

Big Boll Type Of Cotton Commended

According to tradition, a devout Mohammedan turns his face toward Mecca to pray. Judging from recent newspaper reports, we have in Texas a certain small but very vociferous group of City Agricultural Clubs, together with three or four misguided Agricultural Agents who, if, and when they pray, turn their faces toward Acala, located in the State of Chiapas, Mexico.

This is not said through any lack of respect for the Variety of Cotton which was first imported from Chiapas in 1906. This is a good cotton within its range of adaptability but rather elaborate and extensive tests have shown the range of adaptability rather limited.

In their enthusiasm, this group of "Young Intellectuals," seem to forget that when they were cutting dikes in Agricultural College, and showing the old brindle cow up on top of the College Dormitory, that outstanding Cotton Breeders had already spent years in developing the Big Boll type of Cotton as a type that would most successfully meet the needs of the Texas Farmer. Recent tests show still more conclusively that the Big Boll type is the Money Making type for most Texas Soils.

To go back in past history, in the year of 1889, the late Colonel A. D. Mebane developed the "Mebane Triumph" Variety. This came from Boykin, which had been constantly bred for years by W. L. Boykin of Kaufman County, Texas. This type of cotton rapidly established a leadership in Texas which it had held to the present day.

Research Made

A number of well known and popular varieties trace directly to this line of breeding. No complete Variety Survey has been made since 1932, but in 1932, the only part of Texas where the small boll medium staple type of cotton was grown to any extent was a small Area near El Paso. The total production of this Area in comparison with Texas Production is insignificant.

In the Blackland Belt, according to the 1932 Survey, 27.22% of the total production was Qualla, 22.27 percent of the total was Mebane and 15.57% was Kasch. There were a number of other varieties grown to some extent, but 85% of the total production of the main cotton growing belt was made up of three varieties, all of the big boll type.

On the Gulf Coast at least 60% of the total production was made up of big boll varieties and in West Texas almost one-half of the total production was Big Boll cotton and the most of the remainder in West Texas was the short staple, untenderable Half and Half type. In no important cotton growing section of Texas was the small boll, medium staple type, such as Acala and Delfos, grown to any considerable extent.

Does our group of vociferous agitators wish to imply that 85% of the Texas Farmers are just plain nuts? Or do they wish to show their own superiority over such "Old Fogies" as the late Col. A. D. Mebane and W. L. Boykin? Breeders of this calibre helped make Cotton History, not only in Texas but throughout the entire South. However, they were old-fashioned and spent the most of their time in their breeding work. If they spent any time making speeches in Hotel Banquet Halls, History is painfully silent of the subject.

In the Spring of 1934, when M. De Barberia, Editor, "The Cotton Digest" was assembling material for a special "World Edition" and wanted an article on every phase of cotton production and marketing from some recognized authority in the respective fields, he asked H. Conrads, San Marcos, Texas to prepare an article on the subject of Breeding Cottonseed for Planting Purposes. This man is a Breeder of the Big Boll type of Cotton.

Recognized Authority

Mr. Conrads is not very well known among some of the Agricultural Agents. He does not mix in State Politics and does not hold any appointment on any "Agricultural Board." Neither does he do any periodic back-slapping around Austin and College Station. Yet, in the cotton trade, among the men who put up the money to buy Southern Cotton, he is a well recognized authority in his field.

The tests conducted by the Blackland Experiment Station at Temple, Texas seem to be the foundation of their theme song. The Acala Cotton made an eight year average of 282 pounds lint per acre in these tests. However, this high average was produced largely by an exceptional yield in 1933, which amounted to 594 pounds per acre for that year. During six years of the eight year period, several varieties of Big Boll cotton gave a higher yield than the small boll cotton.

In this test, Ferguson Triumph gave an average yield of 280 lbs. lint per acre and five other varieties of big boll cotton showed average yields of better than 265 pounds lint per acre.

If we consider the eight-year report from Temple, the five-year report from Greenville, the seven-year report from Iowa Park, the nine-year report from Spur and

First Texas Commodore Since 1844

The title of Commodore has been revived in Texas as an honorary title on the staff of the Governor, with the first commission of this rank since 1844 going to David S. French, assistant to the president of the Chrysler Corporation. Presentation was by Ginger Rogers, twinkle-toed motion picture star from Texas, who holds the title of Admiral in the personnel of the military force that was merged into the United States Navy at annexation of the Lone Star Republic in 1845.

the six-year report from Chillocothe, we have a total of 35 one-year Comparative Variety Tests made by these Stations. There are a number of strains of the Acala Variety grown, but considering reports on what is recognized as the leading and most popular strain, we find that during this test period, in 29 tests out of the 35 that the Big Boll type of cotton showed superior yield. Only during one year, the year of 1933, did the small boll type show any significant superiority.

This bears us out in our former statement, that the range of adaptability of this type of cotton is limited, but it is good within its

Spur Report

During the drought year of 1934 the report from Spur, Texas shows that Qualla Cotton gave a yield of 138 pounds lint per acre, Watson Mebane 96 pounds per acre, and Acala 28 pounds lint per acre.

A five-year report from College Station, shows an average of 218 pounds of lint per acre for Acala, with 10 varieties of Big Boll Cotton showing a superior average, the highest average being 274 lbs.

Uniformity of staple is highly important in producing a cotton that will meet the demands of American Spinners. The majority of American Mills are set to use cotton that is 3/4 inch in length or longer. The fibre that is less than 3/4 inch must be combed out and is termed "Wastage" by the Spinner.

In a very exact test made by Carl D. Brandt, formerly head of Textile Department, Texas Technological College and now engaged in Textile Research in the Mill District of Massachusetts, it was found that Qualla Cotton averaged a 1-inch fibre, with 4% Wastage. The Acala Cotton averaged 31-32 inch, with 9% Wastage.

A complete report on this test can be found on Page 33 of the Eighth International Edition of the Cotton Trade Journal and covers tests made on 32 strains and varieties of cotton.

According to a recent News release, the County Agent of Dallas County is credited with the following statement: "One Texas mill that uses 2,000 bales of cotton a year has to go over the entire Cotton Belt of the country to get together that much good cotton."

What's the trouble? Wouldn't the gentleman's Acala fill the bill? El Paso County usually produces about 40,000 bales of cotton and 98% of this production is said to be Acala.

If the mill wanted 31-32 inch staple Middling or better, almost any Blackland County could supply several times this amount from the Big Boll cotton grown in these Counties. If longer staple is wanted a well known Cooperative Marketing Association in Mississippi, which specializes on the Delta Type of cotton was complaining last year about having a big carry over of this type.

Not A Shortage

A statement of this sort does not show any shortage of good cotton in the South. It merely shows almost unbelievable stupidity on the part of some mill man, unless his mill is set for some foreign type of cotton, such as Egyptian.

In spite of agitation and wild talk about "Our five million acre project," and "Compulsory Regulations" the majority of Texas farmers get their Cotton Dollars from the Big Boll type of cotton and will continue to do so. This type has been bred for years for heavy yield, uniformity of staple, and special adaptability to Texas Conditions.
