Ouster Possibilities

THE constitution of Texas defines the things, both criminal and misdemeanor, for which a governor may be impeached.

Recent political events have sent many lawyers scurrying to the constitution to see what tribunal and what measuring stick, are invoked to pass upon the legal question "when is a governor subject to removal—not impeachment—for failure or refusal to perform the duties of the office?"

It is clear that subrogating the powers of office to another, who is not under oath—whether qualified or disqualified to hold the office if elected to it—is grounds for ouster of a governor or other official.

A fact showing will be required, that another person exercises the powers and functions, makes the decisions and dominates the conduct of the office. Whether such a fact showing would have to be made by a House court of inquiry, a House organized to prefer "impeachment" articles without the allegation of crime or misdemeanor, or otherwise, remained to be figured out by those studying the question.

Whether such a fact showing could be made in court proceedings was a further subject of study. Apparently it was agreed that the fact Mrs. Ferguson, under the community property constitutional authority and law, shared the proceeds of her husband's legal law practice while she was governor, could not be made the basis of impeachment if she were in office again, whether or not it would constitute one of the grounds for declaring her outside the constitutional permission to continue in office, without reference to grounds of impeachment.

Recently photostat copies of pardon-grant notations, authorizing the preparation of pardon proclamations, signed with James E. Ferguson's name in his own handwriting, while Mrs. Ferguson was governor, have been examined by lawyers.

Apparently it was agreed that acts of a previous administration could not be the basis of the non-impeachment ouster proceedings, based on the refusal of failure of constitutional provision. But it was possible they might be made corroborating circumstances, should Texas ever go before a fact-finding tribunal in an effort to have a legal decision made whether or not a governor was surrendering the powers of office to some other person.

CLEVELAND (AP)—The largest crowd ever to witness a major league baseball game turned out Sunday to see the Cleveland Indians' debut in the municipal stadium and watch the Tribe lose a thrilling 1 to 9 battle to Philadelphia.

The official attendance was announced as 80,284, of which 76,979 were cash customers—a scant handful more than the previous record set in New York September 9, 1928, when 80,043 saw the Athletics battle the Yankees in a double-header.

Robert Moses Grove, the Athletics ace southpaw, was in rare form and held the Indians to four scattered hits to win his seventeenth game of the season. Mel Harder, the Indians' young right hander, was almost equally stingy with hits and kept the A's harmless except in the eighth inning.

Bishop drew one of Harder's two passes to start the eighth, went to second on Haas' sacrifice and scored the lone run of the game on Cochran's single.

The Indians threatened only once in the seventh, when Averill and Vosmik got infield singles in succession. Grove then set the Tribe down in order.

DETROIT (AP)—Babe Ruth almost won a ball game by himself Sunday. He hit his thirtieth home run of the season and with two on in the sixth and batted in two more runs with singles as the New York Yankees came from behind to defeat the Tigers, 12 to 8.

The Bengals hopped on Herb Penrock for an 8 to 2 lead before he gave way to Ed Wells in the third, but were unable to score again. Buck Marrow, George Uhle and Tommy Bridges were ineffective for Detroit, the latter yielding the tying run on two wild pitches. Phillips also hit a homer for the Yanks.

BROOKLYN (AP)—The Dodgers turned back a determined Chicago rally in the ninth inning of the second game here Sunday to earn an even break with the Cubs before a near capacity crowd of 22,000. Charley Root pitched his way to an easy 6 to 3 victory in the first game, while Walter Clark's relief pitching featured the 5 to 4 triumph of the Dodgers in the finale.

Bud Clancy, veteran first baseman purchased by the Dodgers from the Brooklyn Jersey City farm, made his National League debut and hit a double and two singles in each game.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Giants shattered their seven-game losing streak by taking both games of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3 and 6 to 4. The first game went 10 innings.

Fred Fitzsimmons was forced out of the opening duel with Red Lucas in the tenth inning when Herman's infield smash struck his pitching hand. Bill Walker finished and was credited with the victory. The Reds had a 14-7 advantage in hits in the second game but couldn't bunch them effectively, homers by English and Lindstrom aided in the triumph.

HOUSTON (AP)—With Southpaw Jimmy Minogue pitching four-hit baseball and Ernie Holman driving in five tallies, Hap Morse's Dallas Steers here Sunday afternoon gave the Houston Buffs an artistic 11 to 4 trimming and Houston dropped seven games behind the league leaders. Minogue's knuckle ball out queer capers and Houston went hitless the last six rounds.

Elmer Hanson didn't have his stuff and the veteran curver was blasted from the firing line in the first round when the visitors tallied five times. Ernie Holman batted across two runs in the first with a single and in the ninth he hit a homer with two aboard. Geo. Payne was the victim.

what is believed to be a practical stage according to persons who have witnessed demonstrations of the new plan. It is that of using talking motion-pictures which not only throw upon the screen the objects that are being studied, but at the same time give an oral lecture on the subject. The first pictures along these lines have already been produced under the direction of the University of Chicago. These are to be shown in a demonstration of the new method of instruction to be given tomorrow night at the University of Texas. R. D. Hemmings, assistant manager of the University of Chicago press, will describe the projects to the faculty and others who may be present at the demonstration. These first pictures will be in the physical sciences, including physics, chemistry, geology and astronomy.

Members of the faculty of the University of Texas who are interested in class-room teaching, as well as students, are greatly interested in the possibilities of the adoption of talking motion pictures for class-room instruction. To what extent this proposed method could or may replace the personal element of such instruction is a matter that is causing no little discussion in educational circles throughout the United States.

Ten Vacancies In New Dormitory Of Texas University

AUSTIN—Only ten vacancies remain to be filled in the new $150,000 dormitory for men at the University of Texas which will be open for use September 17, the first building of the nine structures now in process of construction to be completed in the University's greater campus building plan. Heating and electric lines are now being installed, and the laying of tiles on the roof has been practically completed.

The dormitory, which houses 138 students, will be under the management of Miss Rosalie S. Godfrey, supervising director, and James L. Miller, resident manager. The building consists of four separate units, each unit being under the supervision of a proctor. Every room has a closet for each occupant, a built-in dresser, book-case, study table, and chairs. Bed linen and two blankets per bed are furnished and laundered by the dormitory. In the basement of each unit is a trunk storage room and a laundryette equipped with stationary tub, ironing board and electric iron.

Each room in the dormitory, with the exception of the tower room which accommodates three students, is equipped for two students. Room rates during the long session is $40 per semester for each person, the rate being the same for all rooms.

The dormitory, which will be known as Breckenridge Hall, is the first of eight similar dormitories for men students which are planned for the university. If after a years trial, the new dormitory proves that it can be maintained as

Advanced Scouts May Have 'Roving Camp' This Year

Plans approved by the executive board of Buffalo Trail Council recently may make possible a "roving camp" for advanced scouts in this area. According to A. C. Williamson, the proposed camp would cover 1,500 miles through the Davy mountains and New and Old Mexico.

Scouts would do their own cooking and camping. Only those making Star or above would attend, unless rumors that some first class men may be allowed to go hold true. The camp is to be self-sustaining, cost being prorated among scouts making the camp.

A self-supporting institution, denials supporting toward the erection of the additional buildings will be taken.

for LOVE or MONEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 MONA MORAN who supports her mother, invalid father, little sister, KATE, and several well-to-do friends, is determined to marry for wealth and position. She is receptive to a Wall Street law firm and in the office sees men of the world to which she aspires.

Mona's mother announces that her childhood sweetheart, STEVE SACCARILLI, grandson of the ice and coal dealer, has returned home. Steve she appeared three years earlier and it was rumored he was in prison though Mona never believed this.

Steve, wanting Mona to look loveless and with no thought of matrimony, sends a gown and strap sent to her from Pilgrim's exclusive shop where Mona once was a fashion model.

Now go on with the story CHAPTER V
 Climbing the stairs after her visit to the hospital, Mona's step was lighter and brisker than it had been for a long while.

Dad had seemed better, more cheerful than he had been for weeks. The doctors were encouraging. Somewhere in science there had been a discovery. They did not hold out a definite hope but maybe when he was stronger—at any rate, they assured Mona that he was not losing ground.

Steve had dashed in for a moment before he left Mona with her father and added a definite ray of cheer to the sick room.

Mr. Moran had welcomed the fruit and the tobacco—"My old brand, Stevie boy!" He made light of the three intervening years. If there had been gossip concerning them "Dad" Moran had ignored it.

Steve was to come for Mona at 7:30. He had gone home to dress. It occurred to the girl sharply that she would prefer to stay home to reflect on this glorious news concerning her father.

Or was it news? She told herself that doctors might say anything when you needed cheering. Half the time they didn't really know themselves.

Suddenly Mona stopped in dismay. If Steve were dressing it meant she must wear formal evening clothes, too. And she had nothing to wear—nothing! Her old black satin had done service for a year. Usually when she accompanied Lottie on parties the other girl would insist on loaning Mona a dress so that lack of costume would not be sufficient excuse for declining the invitation. Lottie, working as a model, was able to pick up many a gown at a bargain. Her supply was unlimited.

But Mona could hardly borrow from Lottie tonight after turning down definitely Lottie's invitation for the evening.

No, the black dress would have to do. Then she recalled that she had sent the dress to Alice, ostensibly to be darned as only Alice could do it, actually so that Alice could go to the Elks' ball.

Well, either Mona would go as she was or not at all. Steve would understand that.

Mrs. Moran opened the door and let Mona into the little flat redolent with frying pork chops and warmth. Ma was expansive with innocent gossip. Mrs. Casey had been over during the afternoon. Mary was going with that fellow who kept books in her office, the tall one they had seen coming out of the motion picture show.

The run from 24th street sounded more casual than it would turn out to be. Mona knew. The dress, most likely would remain in Alice's possession until Mona herself could go for it.

Well, it didn't matter. Poor Alice—she had little enough to look forward to.

And your dress came back from the cleaner's. Or maybe it was your suit or whatever you were after sending. I didn't open it. I was at the telephone. Dad won't be back for supper. He's working tonight—Ma's soothing voice trailed on.

So Dad had landed that job! It brought Dad's treatment nearer if he would work and stay home and help run the household.

The suit from the cleaner's? Mona didn't recall sending anything this week.

The sight awaiting her in the dreary little bedroom occupied by herself and Kitty made Mona blink. Lucky that Ma hadn't opened it! As Ma would have expressed it, the contents would have given her a good faint for herself.

Cleaner's indeed! The box was from Pilgrim's. Mona would have known that smart lavender container anywhere. A huge lavender box, criss-crossed with sparkling lavender ribbons. A box dangled luxury, mystery, perfection.

"It's a mistake," stammered Mona to herself, fumbling for the tag.

But there was no mistake about the box. The inscription said plainly: "Miss Minnie Moran, East 67th street."

There was no other Moran at this address. Even if there had been Pilgrim's would hardly have been her emporium.

Perhaps Lottie had picked up a bargain for her, though that was unlikely. The models did not send their furtive purchases out in expensive firm's boxes.

"Flowers came from that seamp. no doubt, who bought the oranges." Ma was saying good naturally. "I put them in the ice box. A nice handful, says I, to take up to the old man!"

Dazed, unhearing, Mona lifted the cover of the box. On top of the sixteen tissues lay a square lavender note addressed in a hand which after all these months Mona was to recognize as Herma's.

"Dear Miss Moran," the note began, "please accept these trifling appointments in the spirit in which they are offered. When I ask a young lady to play a part even for an evening, like all good stage managers, I insist on selecting the wardrobe as well as its setting."

"For both must do justice to the leading lady," Steve.

Steve indeed! Henri had written that note but Steve had put him up to it.

Mona lifted the grayish green chiffon gown from its wrappings and held it before her. Smooth was the right word. Her practiced eye had already poured herself into the frock. She could see the line which brought her back into full view to the waistline, trailed the unevenly cut straps over her shoulders and the front neckline close to the collar bone. Few women could wear that line—and Mona was one of the few.

The gown swirled and draped about the slender hips in the famous Patou line. Midway on the left thigh it formed a cup, to balance the fold on the opposite shoulder. It ended in the region of her heels in foamy chiffon, shading to white.

There was a glossier combination, cobweb hose, and slippers of silver. They had cost dear Heaven, the entire outfit was worth untold sums!

Mona caught her breath and lifted the last fold of tissue. She ought it and grew paler. There lay a coat of ermine, against which her hair would gleam like a flower in a sunset.

She grew weak at the knees. At last she would be dressed as she had longed, as every woman longs to be gowned.

But of course she couldn't take all this from Steve! He meant it well enough. Mona was certain of that. But she couldn't take it, even for a single evening. She would have to tell him when he came.

Hanging the gorgeous gown and wrap where she could see them, Mona lay down on the bed.

The ice man's grandson—the boy of the Sixties. The Mrs. Callahans and Mrs. Caseys would have much to dwell upon if that box and the note. Mona smiled faintly at the thought.

She couldn't take such gifts. Not even for an evening. She simply couldn't. Well, maybe—why not? Just for tonight! That was all he was offering it for—and it was Steve, her old friend, Steve. He wanted to be proud of her.

Rising resolutely from the bed, Mona searched in her purse for a coin.

Heads would be yes and tails no, she decided. She flipped the coin. Twice out of three times. Heads. Tails. Ah, yes, heads!

She'd wear the gown.

She threw herself on the bed again, the tumult of indecision ended. Such is our emotional mechanism that before 7:30 had arrived, simultaneously with her escort, Mona had made herself firmly believe that she was wearing the gown for him alone.

She was wrong there—or at least a trifle wrong. Anyone who looked as lovely as Mona as she sped down the stairs to meet Steve before the Calahans and Caseys should see him, was doing a more universal service. The world and the half world, too, was to gaze on Mona and feel well repaid for the optical exertion.
