

French Capital An 'Open City' As Nazis Near

LATE BULLETINS

BERLIN, June 13 (AP)—Reliable although unofficial sources said tonight that the French, through United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt, have advised Germany that all troops have been removed from Paris.

The report, which could not be checked, said the American ambassador in a message on behalf of the French government said only firemen and police were remaining in Paris.

CAIRO, Egypt, June 13. (AP)—A British-Italian skirmish on the Egyptian-Italian Libyan border last night in which the British took 62 prisoners was reported today by British authorities here.

The British said they suffered no casualties. Two officers were among the captives. Two machine-guns were reported taken.

The announcement was made by Lieutenant-General Henry M. Wilson, commanding British forces in Egypt.

JERUSALEM, June 13. (AP)—Fitawari Berou, newly appointed commander-in-chief of Haile Selassie's forces in Ethiopia, is leaving Jerusalem by air today to take the "Jed" against Italy in Ethiopia.

Berou, former minister of war under the Negus, declared in an interview that "now is our golden chance."

BERLIN, June 13. (AP)—D.N.B., official German news agency, tonight carried a brief dispatch under a Paris dateline saying that it was officially announced that Paris would not be defended, apparently sparing the capital from the war.

ROME, June 13. (AP)—Fourteen persons were killed and 39 wounded in an allied air raid today on Turin, industrial center of northwestern Italy, an official announcement said.

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands, June 13. (AP)—The crew of the Italian steamer Malta was reported today to have driven their ship aground at Las Galletas Beach in the Canary Islands yesterday after a French warship in hot pursuit had fired several shells at her.

HOUSTON, June 13. (AP)—Nehemiah Glover, a negro, faced charges today alleging he participated in 22 major crimes, including three slayings and five criminal assaults.

The cases included the killing of John Frank Lee May 1 and the assault upon Mrs. Lee, and the murders of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Treadaway in their trailer home July 31.

Officers said several more charges probably would be filed against the negro in the next few days.

WARMER WEATHER TO HIT TEXAS DALLAS, June 13. (AP)—Texans who have been sleeping under light cover recently may soon shed their blankets—and sheets.

Dr. Jos. L. Cline of the weather bureau eyed a "warm current" moving eastward across the country today and predicted Texas would get a taste of it. Unusually high temperatures were recorded yesterday in Idaho and some parts of California.

Rains and light northerly have kept temperatures in the state at unusually low levels thus far this season.

NO EXIT PERMITS LONDON, June 13. (AP)—A house of commons question, who suggested that young Britons were leaving the country saying that they would not fight, was told by a labor ministry spokesman today that "no exit permits will be issued by the home office now."

Allies Elect Not To Defend Paris

By The Associated Press PARIS, June 13.—The defense line in the battle for France is holding, a military spokesman declared today—holding under the heavy strain of new German divisions which have been combined with the old to make a total of 120 (about 1,800,000 men) striving to crush the French.

The spokesman said that while the French would continue the defense around Paris—where a five-mile gain by counter-attack was reported earlier—they would not defend the city itself.

Paris was declared an "open city" to spare it from the devastation of total war.

The French have no intention of fighting in Paris itself. American-made bombing planes, whose efficiency, the spokesman said, has been proved, helped considerably in holding the German offensive.

Everywhere along the northern front, from the channel coast and the valley of the Seine to Montmedy, northern anchor of the Maginot line, the situation is "serious," the spokesman acknowledged but he added that the line, though flexible, holds fast.

At several points small units have counter-attacked, he went on, showing that the spirit of the bearded French Polus and their bolshering British comrades-in-arms has not been broken.

Arrival of new planes, tanks and other armament would have an extremely important effect on the outcome of the battle for France, the spokesman declared, referring to the need for more aid from America.

The spokesman said the French line as a whole had held despite the fact that some units have not been relieved since the first southward German offensive on the Somme nine days ago. German units, he said, have been relieved two or three times.

A big French counter-offensive is not yet possible although some gains have been made by small counter-attacks, he added.

One of these was reported to have driven the Germans back five miles from the northern suburbs of Paris, in the region of Beaumont—only 12 miles from the fringe of the capital and 20 miles from its center.

The spokesman emphasized the heavy strain the French have been under from the Germans' superiority in numbers and equipment—a note which Premier Reynaud struck in an appeal to the United States for all help short of an expeditionary force.

The spokesman declared the French would defend their lines in front of Paris and if forced back would defend them south of the capital.

"We do not want to battle in Paris itself," he said, explaining that the French forces would move back rather than risk destruction of the city. The Germans, he asserted, would be responsible for any destruction of the city.

Normal Functioning He added that there would be no "official" removal of the Paris population, although thousands had left on their own accord. All public services, such as gas, light, water and police, are still functioning in the city.

Premier Reynaud, in a message to President Roosevelt, pledged an undying fight to be carried on, if need be, from the last corner of France, or from North America or even from French possessions in America.

(France's possessions in America are French Guiana in South America; the islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe in the West Indies, and Saint Pierre and Miquelon off the coast of Newfoundland.)

Reynaud said he was "going to the armies"—apparently meaning he was assuming personal direction of the French forces now battling, with some British support, a German drive across northern France into which 120 Nazi divisions, or about 1,800,000 men, had been thrown.

The French counter-attack in the Beaumont region was reported to have thrust German besiegers back five miles from the center of the capital and only 12 miles from the northern suburb of St. Denis.

That, however, apparently failed to halt the steady German encirclement of Paris.

The military governor, General Hering, left Paris to take army command after posting notices in public that the capital would be "open." Gen. Denis was left in charge.

Closing In As the notices went up, German legions were closing in on the capital from the west, north and east.

This morning's high command communique, although stating the battle for the capital continued with "undiminished intensity," said the situation had changed but little overnight. It said German pressure was continuing "in particular on both sides of the capital."

GIVE INSTRUCTION ON LAND MEASURING A supervisory school for workers who will measure Howard county land in the AAA program was opened at the high school Thursday, to continue for two days.

County Agent O. P. Griffin and M. Weaver, AAA administrator in the county, will give instruction. Weaver said preparations were being made for measuring work, but that actual field activity was being held up because of varied weather conditions which makes crop condition uncertain.

Nazi-Turkey Trade Pact Is Signed

ANKARA, June 13. (AP)—The Turkish government today signed a new commercial agreement with Germany.

The accord came as a bombshell, especially since Turkish leaders had insisted Turkey would fulfill her mutual aid pacts with Britain and France and the controlled press had severely attacked Italy.

Diplomats flocked to the foreign ministry in an attempt to learn the significance of the move.

The accord, it was announced, provided for the exchange of certain products to the extent of 21,000,000 Turkish pounds.

It was the result of months of negotiations between the government and Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey.

(The deal involves about $14,280,000. The Turkish pound was quoted at .68 in New York today.)

Trade between Germany and Turkey has been at a standstill for months because of credit and other difficulties.

Informed circles said the agreement was of no political significance but the first reaction in diplomatic circles was that it might enter the war immediately.

The agreement was signed by the German trade delegation which negotiated Turkey.

Turkey reaffirmed her mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France and dismissed Mussolini's offer to respect her neutrality as worthless.

The officially controlled Turkish press, which since Italy's entry into the war has been extremely cautious, suddenly loosed a violent attack on Italy.

There were indications that these attacks were inspired and reflected the government's attitude.

"FIFTH COLUMN" FIGHT MONTEVIDEO, June 13. (AP)—The chamber of deputies early today approved by a heavy majority a government bill regulating the right of association with a view to suppressing organizations which might carry on "fifth column" activities.

Every citizen of the republic is urged to observe the flag day in the city in observance of Flag Day, the first such observance in the city in 24 years.

A new pole—from which Old Glory will fly proudly Friday—was about complete Thursday, as finishing touches were put on plans for the east side of the courthouse lawn, is expected to be inaugurated at 7:30 Friday evening, as ceremonies are conducted in tribute to the nation's banner.

Maginot Line Threatened From Rear

Germans Are Farther South Than At Any Time In World War

By The Associated Press BERLIN, June 13.—With German troops almost surrounding the northern environs of Paris, the Nazi juggernaut struck heavily from the east of the French capital today and the high command reported the capture of Chalons Sur Marne in a move apparently threatening directly the French Maginot line from the rear.

The strong German gesture in the direction of the Maginot defenses followed reported heavy cannonading at the extremity of the Maginot line near the Swiss border.

Chalons Sur Marne is about 125 miles east of Paris and almost directly south of the western end of the Maginot fortifications.

The high command reported that the Marne river—the farthest point of penetration by Kaiser Wilhelm's armies—had been crossed in several places from Chalons toward Paris, carrying the Germans farther south than they ever reached in the World war.

The French line, already thinned out by the constant extension to keep contact with the Maginot on one end and the Atlantic coast on the other, presented what German sources said was the fullest opportunity for the Nazi troops to hit at various points.

German advances were reported eastward between the Meuse river and the Argonne forest—a sector guarded by Verdun, of bloody World War memory. Verdun is the flank guard of the western end of the Maginot line.

The picture of Paris facing the fate of Warsaw and Rotterdam was drawn again by authorized sources as German troops forced their way almost to the outskirts of the city.

Some German sources said the fate of Paris most likely would be decided "within the next hours."

The high command said more than 100,000 prisoners had been taken since the Germans began their offensive against Paris on June 5. Allied losses in war material were said to be enormous.

The spokesman only indirectly indicated the nearness of German troops to Paris.

He described the situation by a comparison that the German troops are as far from the heart of Paris as Zehlendorf is from the center of Berlin. (Zehlendorf is a Berlin suburb about eight miles from the center of the German capital.)

Le Havre, on the extreme right wing, "no longer constitutes a problem," the spokesman also announced.

That city has nearly been reached, according to the latest reports from the front.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AN ARMY AIR SCHOOL AT MIDLAND STUDIED WASHINGTON, June 13. (AP)—Representative Thomason (D-Tex.) said today war department officials had promised careful consideration of the possibility of establishing an army air training school at Midland, Tex.

An offer by local interests in Midland and Odessa to furnish housing facilities for personnel was received favorably by the officials, Thomason added.

PLANS JEWISH ARMY — Vladimir Jabotinsky (above), president of the World Jewish Zionist organization, said at New York that negotiations were under way to obtain official recognition of a Jewish army to be recruited in the United States and abroad to fight with the allies. He organized Jewish troops in the World war.

House Acts To Create New Defenses

WASHINGTON, June 13. (AP)—Legislation to reinforce by law this government's vehement opposition to any transfer of sovereignty over territory in the western hemisphere from one European power to another today won quickly a right-of-way to house consideration, while plans for an early adjournment of congress were virtually abandoned.

The rules committee cleared the territorial resolution for house consideration after Rep. Flah (R-N.Y.) asserted that he favored going to war, if necessary, "to uphold the Monroe doctrine."

While not specifying any nation in its text, the declaration if approved by both house and senate, would put congress on record as opposing, for instance, transfer of any of the extensive French or British possessions in the hemisphere to Germany should the reich be able to demand them.

In the senate, formation of a bloc to oppose any direct governmental aid to the allies, such as transfer of old naval destroyers to Great Britain, was reported underway.

One legislator who attended a conference of several senators and at least one representative in the office of Senator Clark (D-Mo.) yesterday said the aim of some present was to form a loose organization to prevent assistance to the allies from becoming a public, governmental matter rather than a private one.

Early adjournment prospects appeared to be giving way under the pressure of demands in various quarters that the lawmakers should stay here ready to function for the period of the international crisis.

The senate got the last of the record-making $2,000,000,000 preparedness bills today as Capitol Hill heard reports of "excellent progress" toward further aid to the allies in planes, munitions and possibly destroyers.

The total of planes made available for the allies rose to 263 with the release of 80 Northrop, single-motor attack craft. They are a type discarded by the army last year in favor of longer-range light bombers.

EGYPT PLEDGES AID TO ALLIES ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, June 13. (AP)—Egypt placed all her communication systems, air and naval bases and ports at the disposal of Great Britain today and pledged her ally the "greatest possible assistance" in the war against Italy.

Premier Ali Maher Pasha declared the nation would fulfill all her obligations under the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of friendship, but intended to refrain from any offensive action against Italy although diplomatic relations had been severed.

Since the alliance is purely defensive, he continued, the country does not intend to send an expeditionary force with the British if Libya or other Italian colonies were invaded, but means to protect herself from attack.

English Rush Aid To Force At The Front

Capture Of 6,000 Troops Admitted In London

LONDON, June 13 (AP)—Trapped by masses of German troops, about 6,000 British and French soldiers were captured at St. Valery-En-Caux on France's English channel coast, it was disclosed today, as Britain rushed thousands of troops, guns and tanks across the channel to support the French defenders of Paris.

"Fresh reinforcements are in line and fighting under French orders," military informants said.

The capture of allied troops at St. Valery occurred as they were running short of ammunition and reduced to pinched food rations.

High cliffs and heavy fog prevented the escape by sea of more than "a comparatively small number" of the surrounded allies, but two British brigades escaped with French units and fell back to aid in the defense of Le Havre, France's vital port of communication with England.

(The German high command reported yesterday that 20,000 prisoners had been captured at St. Valery, including six generals and "incalculable amounts" of war booty.)

Meanwhile, 20,000 British schoolchildren—the vanguard of 150,000,000 to be moved out of the capital in the next six days—said goodbye to bomb-conscious London and piled into trains en route to the safer west country.

All carried gas masks and heavy lunch packages.

About 330,000 children whose parents have failed to register them will still be left in London after the exodus, much to the anxiety of authorities.

Deputy Government Leader Clement Attlee told the house of commons today he couldn't say when Prime Minister Churchill would make his next general statement of the war. It had been expected that Churchill might make a statement today.

A secret session of the house of home defense will be held next Thursday, he also announced.

The number of reinforcements started for the French battle-ground yesterday was said to run into the thousands.

The troop movement recalled the statement of a military spokesman here this week that "it seems impossible that 30 divisions can be sent to France, but it must be done and if it is done we have won."

While Royal Air Force bombers struck at the German right wing encircling Paris yesterday and warplanes based in Egypt renewed their attack on objectives in Italian Libya, the Germans feinted at the southern coast during the night and early today. No bombs were dropped and anti-aircraft defenses drove the invaders off, it was announced.

Wave after wave of British Blenheim bombers were reported to have swept over the Italian naval base to Tobruk harbor, on the Libyan coast, setting a warship afire and hitting two submarines.

French Leader Appeals Anew To America

Declaration Of U. S. Aid By President Is Asked

TOURS, France, June 13. (AP)—An appeal by Premier Reynaud to President Roosevelt for a public declaration that the United States would give all aid to the allies save an expeditionary force and to send the help "before it is too late" was disclosed today.

The premier declared that the French would, if need be, shut themselves up in one of their provinces, or go to North Africa or even to possessions in America to carry on the fight against Germany.

The appeal was conveyed in a message to Mr. Roosevelt, dated June 10.

The text of the message was issued here and in the United States by agreement between the premier and the president, an official announcement said. Tours is one of the present seats of the French government.

The premier asked the president to tell Americans that "we are resolved to sacrifice ourselves in the struggle we are leading for all free men."

President Roosevelt was said to have replied to the appeal, saying that "surely 90 per cent of the world which wants to live in peace can and must find a way to make their will prevail."

Reynaud said he realized the gravity of any gesture by the United States in sending aid "before it is too late."

The premier recalled the Roosevelt statement of Oct. 5, 1937, in which the president said that the liberty, peace and security of 90 per cent of the world were imperiled by the other 10 per cent.

"The government already has left Paris. I myself am going to the armies. It will be to intensify the struggle with all the forces we command and not to abandon it," Reynaud messaged Mr. Roosevelt.

BRITISH FLIERS IN NEW ATTACKS CAIRO, June 13. (AP)—Roaring south and west from Egyptian bases, the Royal Air Force smashed new blows today at Italian airdromes in Libya and Abyssinia and at the Red sea ports of Eritrea.

Air Marshal Arthur Longmore said the continued air attacks are delivering "a crippling blow" on strongholds from which Egypt might be threatened.

The British air force did extensive damage to military objectives in Ethiopia yesterday as well as raiding Asmara, Eritrea, British sources here said today. Airdromes were bombed in the latter town, also in Gura, where hangars were demolished.

Despite severe opposition from fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns, it was reported, all planes returned after shooting down one Italian fighter, possibly two, and damaging a third.

HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

the concessions, the lunch stands, come to life with the growing influx of people, was too preoccupied to notice the change in Lance until that change was accomplished.

Jan noticed it first. In the beginning, not understanding what motivated him, she rejoiced at his awakened interest in the world about him, was pleased when he commended Frank to take him on an excursion of beach apparel shops, was amazed when he came home with gay colored sport shirts and matching silk scarves.

"Here's the profits on the Clipper model Frank sold for me," he said. "I guess I went berserk honey, I meant you to have a new dress."

"I'd never wear it," she insisted stoutly. "I'd much rather admire you."

Donning one of his purchases, a knitted beige sport shirt with bright blue-check scarf, he surveyed himself in the mirror of the big oak bureau, an unnatural flush on his high cheekbones. "Will she like it, Jan?" Will she notice? "Thinking he referred to Norma she teased, "She'll think you've gone completely 'Hollywood,' old darling. Is Spring responsible for this rash of color or are you just waking up to Norma's charm?"

"Norma?" he questioned blankly. There was a light tap on the door. Lance wheeled his chair over to open it. His thin face was pathetic with eagerness as he cried, "Rose! I thought you'd never come!"

Her laugh was indulgent, caressing. "You knew I'd come. I've so much exciting gossip for you. But what have you done to yourself, Lance? You look marvelous!"

He reached avidly for her hands, bent over and kissed them. Her heavy bracelets, seemingly an integral part of her person, clanked softly. She looked over Lance's head into Jan's alarmed eyes.

"Hello," she smiled. "Didn't you know I'm running a one-woman scandal bureau? I collect all the dirt at the Club and carry it home to this brother of yours."

"It's the most thoughtful of you," Jan answered lamely. She saw the expression in Lance's eyes as she passed him on the way out. She knew, then, Lance was in love with Rose Cornwall.

Chapter 15
'CRUDE AND RUDE'
Up on the rooftop with Neptune Jan leaned against the parapet and gazed out over the enormous expanse of blue water, sparkling under the sun as if diamond facets. She felt a little dizzy, more than a little shocked. How blind she had been to the obvious, how ignorant of the quirks and dark vortexes of the familiar.

Rose had lived here three weeks now; Derek four. She thought, "How little I really know of either of them. I've scarcely skimmed their surfaces. What will she do to me?"

Back of her, in a somewhat sheltered corner, stood the small brown tent Derek occupied. Its flap pinned up to let in the fresh air and sun. He was working today. He worked nearly every day now on the fishing barge. Three weeks he'd bought himself a pair of white flannel trousers, a pair of white shoes, a blue flannel jacket and a white shirt. He paid her, with much ceremony, five dollars a week for his food. He treated her as a comrade, casually, friendly. That kind of intimacy might never have been. Perhaps it had been only imagination. She wished it were!

Lance was in love with Rose, her brain worried. Would it harm him? She hoped not. Lance would expect nothing to come of it, surely, knowing his limitations. She was being rather foolish, worrying about him. It might do him good, make him less introspective. "Jan," she said aloud, "you know more than the old woman who lived in the shoe!"

She gazed upon the locker nearby which had not been opened for weeks. Unhappy weeks. "I'm miserable when I point and I'm miserable when I don't," she thought. "I wonder if he feels that way about the piano, his music. He must. All eating up and gnawing and resentful."

Lance appeared abstracted, monosyllabic at dinner. He seemed to be listening for the light click of high heels on the stairway and when he finally heard them he brightened a moment only to plunge into deeper abstraction as they went on outside.

"Would you care to go to a movie, Lance?" Norma asked, a look of strain about the corners of her small, unpointed mouth. "No," he did not look at her. He had not for a long time. "Ray, Jan, could you afford to fix my room up a bit? I get so damnably tired of looking at the same drapes and cushions day in and day out. I thought—maybe something bright?"

"Sweet Girl Graduate"
Johnny swung into the kitchen, his light eyes peering around the table, settling on Jan. "I've got a night off," he said. "Come on in town with me, Jan, and we'll take in a show and a couple of night spots. I'll do you good."

She might have refused if she hadn't seen the frown of disapproval on Derek's face. "Thanks, Johnny, I'd love to go." Turning to Derek, she said sweetly, "You won't mind helping Norma with the dishes just once, will you? After all, the maid should have a night out occasionally, should she not?"

Without waiting for assent or dissent she left the table and ran up to her room. Searching hastily through her closet she located an ancient evening gown in a sealed paper sack. A freshman prom had seen it last, ages ago; still, it wasn't much out of date. In a bureau drawer were gold kid evening sandals. She almost wept when she pulled off the tissue paper and saw the tawny on them. Well, they wouldn't show much under the long skirt of her dress and anyhow she had to wear them because they were all she possessed.

Really, she thought, prouetting before the mirror, the dress did look grand! It was of white tulle, long and floppy, puffed of sleeve, with a blue silk sash at the waist. She looked about sixteen in it. Norma had a short fur jacket she could borrow. Oh, it would be fun to get out of Sea Tide for a night, to get away from turbulent surf and turbulent humans.

Holding up the skirt with one hand, she hurried downstairs to the group in the living room, stopping on the bottom step for proper effect.

Johnny, faultless in tuxedo, stared at her, then scowled. "You look like a sweet girl graduate!" he declared. "It just won't do, Jan. Not for the sort of places you go. Can't you borrow one of Mrs. Cornwall's evening gowns? She wouldn't care—" He paused at the stricken look on her face.

"I thought I looked rather spiffy," she stammered. "Derek reached her in three long strides and slipped an arm about her waist. "You look beautiful," he asserted. "Prettier than any picture!"

"You look lovely," Lance chimed in, regarding Johnny angrily. "No, I don't," she contradicted, her voice wavering on tears. "I look like he said. She buried her face in Derek's nice, big shoulder. Johnny shifted a position, a little ashamed yet stubborn and determined to justify his statement. "I've told you and told you," he began. "But you won't listen to me—"

"Shut up," Derek growled. "You've been crude and rude enough for one time."

Johnny tossed his topcoat and soft black hat to a chair and stalked up to him, head jutting forward, a bull answering the taunt of the bore. "Why don't you mind your own business, fellow? I've known Jan a lot longer than you have and she knows good and well what I'm talking about! She could buy herself some decent clothes for what she spends on paints and canvases and all that junk! And take your hands off her, you—you beach-comber!"

Jan felt Derek's muscles tauten as he let go of her. She grabbed hold of his clenched fist with both hands. "Oh, stop it, stop it! We're all behaving like children. Come along, Johnny, and get somebody else to go out with you. Some girl who wears the proper clothes."

"Now, Jan, that's no way to act," he argued doggedly. "I wish I hadn't said anything at all. Come on, we'll go somewhere."

"I won't go anywhere! Never, never, never! I'm just the maid around here, that's all, and since you know so much about my affairs, Johnny, I'll just tell you again that I couldn't buy anything even if I wanted to! Clothes don't grow on bushes and they don't sell evening gowns in salvage stores!"

To her dismay she felt tumbled down her face. She whirled like a wild thing and scampered up the stairway to her room. A minute later the door opened and Derek came in. He watched her a moment, lying small and hurt and huddled on the bed, the white tulle billowing around her like a cloud, all of her sturdy, valiant competence dissolving in young tears. Companion moved in him, shoving aside the dark bitterness that was always with him.

He sat down beside her and pulled her up in the crook of his arm, considering her as if she were a child in need of comforting. With a big, clean handkerchief he wiped away the tear stains on her hot cheeks and smoothed the hair back from her forehead with a cool hand.

"Jan, if you aren't too proud to go there, I'd like to take you dancing at the ballroom on the pier. I'll go to bed now, dear. I'm glad I've got about a dollar—think it's enough?"

"You—you can buy six dances for a quarter," she quavered. He laughed. "Six dances for a quarter! Why, honey, I can dance the soles off your slippers for a dollar! Come on, fix up your face and comb your hair while I dress up like a city slicker for you."

dress. I'll be all right. Derek. It's sweet of you to be sorry for me, to ask me to go, but you needn't have bothered."

"Listen," he told her, his eyes compelling, "despite what anyone tells you, Jan, clothes don't make the woman. You're sweet and dear and too darned self-sacrificing. Now you get ready, because, woman, I will be obeyed!"

While she worked at the obeying orders she heard Rose coming upstairs, heard her call down: "I'll be with you in a moment, Johnny. Let's take my car."

But Jan didn't care. Let him take Rose to swanky places! Her heart sang and her pulse danced. Derek had said, "You're sweet and dear."

Chapter 16
DANCING FEET
Derek pulled up her door and she met him smiling. Arm in arm they went down the stairway. Jan's head triumphantly high as she passed Johnny. "I'm going dancing with Derek," she called gaily to Lance and Norma.

"Hi, darling," she pouted. "Poor old Rose had too many sidecars." "Where is Johnny?" "Car, putting the car away. So much fun, honey. Lotsa fun."

Lance reached out fiercely and grabbed her wrists, pressing the heavy metal bracelets into her flesh. "I hate to see you this way, Rose," he said. "Did you come straight home from a night club? You didn't stop anywhere?"

"Kiss Me, Rose"
Rose became sickeningly coy. "Now, what would you say if I said yes, huh? What would you say?" "I feel like killing you!" he exploded.

"Ummm," she waved backward and forward like a lazy pendulum. "Well, I didn't, so there. Johnny's all right, but not handsome like my Lancey. Honey, you're hurting my wrists. Please let go my wrists, honey boy."

"Kiss me, then," he ordered. "Kiss Me, Rose." Jan, watching, shuddering, saw Rose twine her arms about his neck. Jan hesitated only a moment, then she padded into the hall, lifted Rose and half-carried, half-dragged her into her room, stretched her out on the bed and pulled the quilts up over her.

Lance met her sick eyes with hot defiance. "You were watching, weren't you? Spying." "I couldn't help it," she whispered. "I heard her come in."

"Well, I don't care whether you saw or not," he shouted, his emotions quite beyond control. His hands shook and his face was livid. "I've been buried alive for two years. Two years! I know she doesn't care a damn for me, I know I can't give her anything. But I'm going to take what I can get. It might have to last me a lifetime!"

In silence she wheeled him back into his room, left him, and went into her room, curled up on the blanket asleep. She hugged his limp, warm body, slid her fingers through his furry hair, then set him down on the rug by the door. He yawned and blinked amber eyes before springing up to his favorite place on the parapet overlooking the beach front below. As Jan lifted the top blanket to shake it, she noted it was plentifully decorated with Neptune's silky hair.

"So this is where he spends his nights," she said, wondering if Derek patted him. She must ask sometime, for Neptune, outwardly true-blue, paying no heed to anyone when his mistress was about, might be secretly a thief. And if he were, she smiled, the person sharing his love must be the right sort.

The little tent smelled of cigarettes and soap and clean masculinity. Pausing when the bedmaker was done, Jan suddenly dropped onto the rough army blanket and laid her cheek against Derek's pillow. As if this act accomplished a joining together of memory she closed her eyes and warned herself by thinking of how Derek looked when he swung off to work this morning. Burned to the color of coffee, lured to beating sun, he now wore only a pair of blue jeans, sneakers, and a jaunty officer's cap. From his waist to his flaming hair he was as evenly brown as if he'd been painted by a spray gun. Also, he'd picked up an astonishing vocabulary of fisherman's lingo and delighted in trying it out on her at breakfast when they had the kitchen to themselves.

A great deal of the bitterness had gone out of his talk and manner. A few days ago he'd asked her to play for him and he'd listened without growing dark and fierce and violent. Timidly she urged him to play. He refused, but his refusal was only a shrug, no outburst of words. Encouraged, she asked, "Just what do you harbor against Chopin you said once you couldn't bear him?"

"I can't," his music hurts me, haunts me. I have a long time ago only to perfect myself in the playing of his Polonaise in A Flat Major."

her from attempting this sort of escape, for Herman was exceedingly watchful and Herman was exceedingly jealous.

If she hadn't mixed her drinks that night and told him she'd never consent to have a child, never under any circumstances. His scolding denunciation struck fire to the pitch-naked kindling of repression in her and she had shrieked her hate at him.

He permitted her to divorce him at Reno after she'd signed a settlement. Such a little settlement considering Herman's vast wealth. Rose belted the robe tighter about her lovely slim waist and sought the healing solace of a warm scented bath.

A little later, hearing her come downstairs, Jan slipped into the kitchen and waited until the front door closed. Lance rang his buzzer and she trotted up to him, breathing to face him.

"Did Rose just go out?" he demanded the moment she entered. "Yes. To the Club, probably. It's a grand day for swimming and sunning."

Lance looked as if he hadn't slept at all. "She promised to take me for a drive," he muttered. "She must have forgotten or maybe she was to get the car."

"Lance," "Well, what is it?" he asked irritably. "Nothing, I guess."

"Oh, I know what's eating you. You think I'm a fool. You and Norma. You don't know, either of you, what it is for a man to hunger for beauty—to ache to hold a woman like Rose in your arms. Sure I'm a fool! I know it!"

He wheeled the chair around so his back was toward her. His face so perfectly planned, thin and hollow now, yet still possessed of a pale, compelling beauty, twitched with feverish emotion.

"I wonder, Jan, if those doctors who patched me up knew everything. Surgery is advancing every day. There might be a man somewhere in this world who could do something with these knees of mine. Damn it, Jan, I want to live! Why do I have to be condemned to this chair for the rest of my life?"

CHAPTER 18
New Job
"You lost your temper, that's what happened," Jan soothed. "You love to bait people. It's that superiority complex or yours? I should think you might have considered me. I found you the job and you know good and well I have to have money to feed you."

Teasing mischief narrowed his one good eye. "Wait a minute, Jan. Hold on a minute before you get into a lather! I've given you every penny you asked for since I got the job. All you ever talk about is money, money, money! You're a mercenary wench, that's what!"

"I never have any money, that's why!" she stormed. "Half the time I have to wait for Johnny's rent because he loses it gambling or spends it on clothes and Norma's going home next month and—oh, Derek, can't you understand? It's all I have. Haven't you ever been poor? Don't you know at all the value of money?"

His brows drew together. He looked at the locker where she kept her paintings. He whistled an idea. "Say, why don't you sell some of your stuff? People buy that sort of thing. You could raise a little money on it if you exhibited it."

"And where would I hold this magnificent exhibition?" she inquired sarcastically. "Derek, you are quite mad. Hopefully mad. Nobody would pay enough for those pictures to pay for the canvases and if you had any sense you'd know that."

He dropped down on the cot, bent his arm back and began scratching his bare brow back. "I guess you'll have to get me another job," he said.

"I will," she promised angrily. "And in the meantime you can just help me with the housework for your board and room."

"Philosophy is cold. Y'know, Jan, it's a funny thing—I hate the idea of manual labor, but I—I like it. It does something to me. Something good, genuine, earthy. I'm earning my salt and incidentally my own self-respect. Lord, I sound like an Horatio Alger hero!"

Lying on his cot, relaxed, feeling the salt breeze fan his skin, thoughts and words all ran together, blurring. With a sigh she poked her nose over the edges of the pillow and fell into sound sleep.

Derek, stealing guilty through the house two hours later, thinking he had escaped detection, found her there. One arm was crooked under her head, the other dangled off the edge of the cot. Small and childish and defenseless she seemed in sleep. Her lashes lay thick and dusty against her soft pink cheeks; her sensitively curved golden lips pouted with dreams; her hair sprawled yellow over the pillow.

His eyes, watching so intently, woke her. "I must have fallen asleep," she murmured drowsily, sitting up, rubbing her temples. Then she had a good look at him. A small shriek escaped her.

"Derek! For heaven's sake, what happened to you?" He grinned and hung his head a little while she stared, terrified. For one eye was turning black and swelling shut, a good-sized lump distorted his jaw, and there was blood on his cheek.

"It was a swell fight," he declared. "But, Jan, Cap fired me. Tell me all," she ordered. "I'll bet you started the fight!" "I did," he agreed, defiant. "I was helping a guy pull in a whopping big barracuda and Cap grabbed the pole away from me and hollered I didn't know anything and never would if it weren't for you. He'd knock the daylight out of me and toss me overboard."

"Derek, you didn't hit him?" "No, I didn't hit him, but I burned up and told him a few things about his rotten old tub and the first mate got in on it—he always hated me, anyhow—and then a couple of other fellows took sides and it turned into a free-for-all," he related. "Gosh, it was fun! I feel glorious! I haven't had a first fight for years!"

Ironie Situation
Jan, a lithe, awkward of driving him so hard, really touched by his birth-veiled pleas for a man's job, appealed to Frank, who managed to find him work driving one of the little trams which trundled by the electric motor from Sea Tide up the two miles of beach front to Santa Monica. He had to have a uniform of sorts, dark trousers, khaki shirt and buman's cap, which cost ten dollars, so Jan advanced him the money on provision he'd return it as fast as he could.

His salary was fifteen dollars a week for six days work, three dollars less than he made on the fishing barge, but he told Jan at the end of the first day, this bus driving was a lot more fun.

He bought himself smoked goggles and wore his cap well over his eyes, hoping, although Jan didn't know this, that no one he knew would ever condescend to ride on his little boardwalk tram. He dallied with the advisability of dyeing his hair, for that copper crest would give him away quickly, but decided against it. He found himself in a curiously ironic situation these days. He had, often, to go without minor things he wanted and needed, yet at any time he could have gone into any bank, established his identity and withdrawn any sum he wanted. But he also knew that the moment he did so his pleasant anonymous life here would end, and he had no wish for it to end, not yet.

Some apples he'd bought that Derek had graduated from "live bait fisherman" to "tram trundler." Once in tailored silk slacks, once in a gay peasant beach costume, she rode with him to the Surf Club and back. He permitted her to share part of his driver's seat and told her in a low voice she considered her. "An unscrupulous, predatory and absolutely selfish moron." To which accusation she replied with light, rippling laughter.

Jan saw them riding together and laughing and decided passionately that Derek was plain traitor. To soothe her vexation she slumped an old straw hat on her head, pulled on baggy slacks, took a fishing pole, told Lance she'd be back in a couple of hours and set off in her boat to sulk. It was the middle of the day, the sun was hot and the fish refused her wriggling bait. The hotter and more tired she became, the more irritated she grew until, when she turned homeward a little after four, her face was threatening as a thunder cloud. She asked to throw Rose's clothes out of the house and Rose winced.

"And so, coming off the pier, approaching home, she was brittle with temper and in no mood to receive what awaited her. A knot of people stood before the big red house, milling about the temporarily halted tram car.

On being a misfit it's certainly your fault."

"Is this fitting in, then? This ex-lating to eat and sleep and labor with my hands?" "You can look out of your tent at night and see the stars," she said. "You can watch the sunrise and sunset and look at that ocean out there and realize how little and unimportant you are. You can dream."

"Philosophy is cold. Y'know, Jan, it's a funny thing—I hate the idea of manual labor, but I—I like it. It does something to me. Something good, genuine, earthy. I'm earning my salt and incidentally my own self-respect. Lord, I sound like an Horatio Alger hero!"

ing and hung them up ineptly, but well enough. He ran the vacuum cleaner and scrubbed the kitchen floor and dusted furniture.

"I can't figure how you ever did all this alone," he told her at the end of a week. "I thought housework was a sissy job for women only. Jan, for the love of Pete will you help me figure out some kind of man's job? You know more about this beach colony than I do. Honestly, I'd clean the beach with one of those cane stickers in preference to this!"

"I'll try," she promised, relaxing into laughter.

A little later he said, "How is Lance making out with the siren?" "She's making out desperately to ex-l," answering, knowing Derek had been about the house enough this week to see what was happening. Rose, in her careless, selfish way, was charmingly attentive to Lance. Twice Frank had put Lance in her car for a long drive, from which he returned home flushed and radiant. But there were other days when Rose didn't want to be bothered with him, days when she slipped quietly out of the house and played at the Surf Club. These days, Lance kept Jan hopping on sensation and rolled his chair back and forth across his room until the wheels made deep tracks in the carpet. Derek, to relieve her, sometimes answered the buzzer and stayed awhile with Lance, trying to draw him out of his neurotic obsession with the talk.

"Not very good," she answered Derek finally. "I don't know what to do. I don't suppose it would do any good to tell her to move. He'd still be there if I did that. And Norma, she scarcely touches her food, she's eating her heart out. Derek, how can you make it philosophical at all?"

"Probably we wouldn't either, put in her shoes. I'd like to tell that little—she broke off, shrugged. "It's none of my business."

"You might try deflecting her attention," Jan said. "She wouldn't look at the likes of me," he countered cheerfully. "Besides, Johnny's doing his best."

"I feel sorry for Norma," said Lance, and I can't seem to dislike Rose, and I suppose I should. I've never known anyone like her before. I can't blame Lance, either. She is beautiful and exciting and," she smiled wryly, "deserving of the movie appellation 'glamorous.'"

He was thinking how many women he had met and known like Rose. He doubted much if she would find the rich husband she was searching for so diligently. Men with money were not such fools as novelists, playwrights and columnists made out. They could buy beauty and they knew it. Most of them had had experience before expiration of their adolescence with women like Rose. Her eyes were tell-tale with hard, bright greediness. Lenore had been like that, more subtly, and deep down he'd known but refused to acknowledge it until she forced him to. He'd wanted so terribly to believe she loved him, believed in him, cherished his success as much as he, that he'd put dark glasses over the eyes of his mind.

Experiment Farm Finishes Planting
Last of the planting at the U. S. Experiment Farm, except scheduled "date" plantings, has been completed at the farm, Fred Keating, superintendent, reported Friday.

All hands at the farm have been working fast this week to get over the ground before the last moisture from recent showers gets away.

Only plantings remaining will be those that have to be made on specific dates to carry out a program of tests designed to show the best planting dates over a period of years. Virtually all of the farm's planting is done on small plots with a wide variety of cotton and feeds.

To Get A Report Later On Airport Developments
Prevented by a change in arrangements from attending a meeting in San Antonio Monday of the Texas Aeronautics Advisory committee, City Manager E. V. Spence will nevertheless see that Big Spring is given consideration in the working out of a statewide "master plan" of airports.

The committee was to hear a report on the master plan from Maj. E. M. Haight, planning engineer. Spence was in telephone conversation Monday with the committee chairman, J. J. Hurley, and was told that he would have an opportunity to confer with Major Haight in Fort Worth later.

Meanwhile, the city is keeping in touch with aviation developments planned in connection with military preparations, and has sent telegrams to major army and aviation officials at Randolph Field and in Washington, advising them of airport facilities available here.

FSA Sponsors Dairy Sires

Institution of two dairy bull circles in Howard county has been effected by Ur D. Kindrick, Farm Security Administration supervisor as a means of increasing incomes, better diets and a properly balanced operating program on farms.

The bulls, he pointed out, are being pressed into service with subsistence dairy herds, which in turn accomplish the beneficial results for FSA farm families in Howard, Martin and Glasscock counties.

Two loans have been made by this county for purchase of pure-bred sires from herds with production records. One was made to Royce L. Johnson in the community and one to David B. Low at Elbow.

Kindrick pointed out that loans are made available by the FSA for better purchase since the cost of surplus for the market is almost prohibitive. Through the formation of a bull circle, the owner has a means of retiring the obligation. These loans are available only in instances where the farmer is unable to find financing elsewhere.

The get of better bulls have been shown to be superior in production records, hence the FSA farm families have a better chance to supply milk, cream, butter and cheese for family consumption with a surplus for the market.

This fits in well with the formula, for it has been announced during the past seven years and Kindrick that the farm families that produced the greater part of its own farm needs and diversified as much as possible to the family that has the best chance to succeed.

Kindrick invited farmers seeking more information about financing and financing to contact him at his office in the courthouse annex.

County's Cash Balance Down

Howard county's total cash balance at the end of May was down considerably from the month preceding, but higher than for the corresponding month last year, it was shown in the monthly report of the treasurer, Mrs. Ida Collins, approved by the commissioners court Monday.

The end of May balance was $124,206.33, compared with $130,260.34 for the month before and $120,286.34 for May of 1939. Decreases were shown from April in nearly all funds, with the road and bridge fund showing the largest decline. Balances by special funds were as follows:

July, $9,429.68; road and bridge, $18,021.41; general, $28,211.81; road bond, $1,807.86; good road bond, $1,963.43; highway, $42,462.11; permanent improvements, $2,242.41; courthouse and jail, $1,870.21; viaduct, $927.37; officers salary, $12,670.01.

Receipts and disbursements, by funds: July, $237.79; and $1,367.22; road and bridge, $161.22 and $10,978.83; general, $381.99 and $2,779.70; road bond, $36.97 and $336.25; good road bond, $1,845.82 and none; permanent improvements, $83.49 and none; court-house and jail, $8,681 and none; officers salary, $11,794.74 and $9,801.46.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE WAR DEVELOPMENTS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Generalissimo Weygand's allied forces defending Paris are in a tight spot because of the insistent German turning movements which are calculated to encircle and destroy the main French army.

Just how tight that spot is depends on how close the main offensive is to the slackening down moment which must come to all such great drives.

One would expect the invading war-machine to show signs of slowing up already, but it must be admitted that thus far those signs have been lacking. The assault was continued with unabated fury today, the French announcing that the Germans were using 1,800,000 troops, which I should say would be about twice the defending force. Where Weygand's Polius got the strength to counter-attack north of Paris this morning and hurl the Hitlerites back five miles is a matter of wonder. This feat speaks volumes, however, for the fighting spirit and stamina of the defenders.

The German turning operations have continued with some success on both allied flanks, and these represent the worst danger spots in the long battle line.

On the allied left flank, which has rested on the coast, the nazis have smashed their way across the Seine river and pushed the allies back a considerable distance in the vicinity of Evereux. The French high command says it is holding the line, but the penetration must be disconcerting. If it continues, the allied line will give way.

Over on the French right wing the Germans have compelled a withdrawal in the Meaux-Chateau Thierry sector and have crossed the river Marne. Here again is a real threat to the allied line.

Should the Germans be able to sever the allied front here it might prove a disastrous rolling back which, taken in conjunction with the turning movement on the west flank, would mean encirclement of the allied forces.

Weygand's task to hold the German onslaught until there is the inevitable slackening of the offensive.

Ask Surrender
As this is being written a bulletin from Berlin states that the French military will be asked by the German high command to surrender Paris. Apart from other considerations, the nazis have been considerably concerned over world reaction to a destructive siege of Paris.

If the present temper of the French doesn't change, this cosmopolitan city which belongs equally to all cultured nations will not be surrendered until the defenders are crushed.

Danger of the city being destroyed may have been lessened today by the action of the military governor in declaring it an "open city" and that the city proper will not be defended.

Should Paris be razed, to my mind the effect of that tragedy will reach far beyond France. It will sweep around the world, and I can believe that it will have a potent influence on the minds of many.

The acid smoke from exploding bombs and fires, which already is rising from the quaint old-world streets, is writing across the sky a symbol of something bigger than Paris or even France. Each of us must interpret that for himself as his conscience directs.

For some it may mean justice, freedom and brotherhood of man. For others it may represent the code that might is right.

That is something I can't figure out excepting for myself, but I can say that your decision and my decision will represent for us the spirit of this war and the sort of social structure we want to see grow out of it.

As the majority of the people of the world over interpret this symbol which arises from the siege of Paris, so will go social and political developments in many lands.

The most striking development of the Italian campaign has been their sowing of a great mine-field about the important British naval base of Malta. If you will glance at your maps you will see the purpose of this move very easily.

This is the narrowest part of the Mediterranean. It is only a hundred miles between the African mainland and Sicily. Close to this gap lies the Italian fortified island of Pantelleria.

The idea of the mine barrier obviously is to cut the Mediterranean in two and thereby keep the British and French from direct contact with their forces in the Near East. This will raise a serious problem for the allies if Mussolini is able to make it stick.

"You can't put uniforms on boys, guns in their hands and call them soldiers," he said. "We must train them and not send them over again unprepared."

2—Whip cream (well chilled) until stiff.

3—Add partly frozen Kool-Aid mixture to whipped cream and whip just enough to mix well, but keep cold as possible.

4—Return quickly to freezing tray and freeze at coldest point. Requires no more stirring. When frozen, set control back to normal. Makes over one quart. If desired lighter, beat two egg whites fluffy with two tablespoons sugar, and fold into above mixture before final freezing.

1 can Evaporated Milk (tall)
1 cup sugar
1-2 cup water

3—Place chilled evaporated milk in cold mixing bowl and whip with egg beater until about three times in volume.

4—Then add the Kool-Aid mixture and fold in well; place quickly in freezing tray and freeze at coldest temperature. Do not disturb after it starts to freeze, or it will be less fluffy.

Childhood Eye Strain Bar To U. S. Air Corps

DENVER (UP)—If you want to be a U. S. Army Air Corps pilot, guard your eyes from injury and strain from childhood.

Maj. M. J. Hargreaves of the army medical corps gave that advice to applicants who were rejected in physical examinations here. With speeds of military planes now at the 400-mile-per-hour mark, he explained, no applicants can be accepted but those with perfect vision.

"Medical examiners can't take a chance any more," he said. "With the maze of instruments he faces and the high speeds with which he operates, a pilot must have vision that will meet every emergency."

Depth perception is the most common fault, causing disqualification of about 210 of every 1,000 applicants, he said.

Seminole Is Celebrating This Weekend

SEMINOLE, June 13—The spirit of the old west has reached a high pitch here as the oil men, cowmen, farmers and businessmen unite in preparation for the big Third of a Century celebration and rodeo to be held here Friday and Saturday, June 14-15.

Besides being a real birthday party, the city will celebrate the completion of the hard surfacing of the stretch of Highway 15 between Seminole and Hobbs, N. M., the near completion of the new highway between Seminole and Denver City and the double coating of the new stretch of highway 15 between Seminole and Lamesa, now under way, which will put the finishing touch on that important stretch of road.

The first day of the celebration will be featured by a big free barbecue, at which former "old timers" will be honored guests. The fatted calf is being prepared to the tune of 15 beeves, with the usual cowboy trimmings that go with them.

Two rodeo performances will be given each day beginning at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. The program will begin Friday morning at 10 o'clock with a colorful parade in which the spirit of the Seminole of a third of a century ago will be carried out. The first night of dancing will feature the old square dance, the waltz and two step, so popular among the cowboys back in the early days.

Ft. Stockton Looks For Record Crowds At Water Carnival

FORT STOCKTON, June 14—Water carnival construction crews last week established a reputation to compare favorably with that of European armies in the field of bridge building and rush construction, for there was the difficult task of placing a stage across Comanche Spring strong enough to accommodate the 150 members of the cast of "King Neptune's Court," the $1,000 over-water spectacle which will be a feature of the 1940 Fort Stockton Water Carnival this week-end—June 14 and 15.

Also constructed were special platforms to provide an additional 500 seats and supplement the 1,300 already available for visitors expected from all over the southwest for the annual show.

From the big free parade Friday morning until the last golf ball is sunk on the new Rooney Park grass greens Sunday afternoon there will be entertainment aplenty for anticipated crowds which are expected to shatter all previous attendance records.

'Miss Texas' To Be Chosen At July Health Festival

The chamber of commerce and businessmen of Mineral Wells again this year combine to act as host in the selection of "Miss Texas" who will represent the Lone Star state at Atlantic City, N. J., where the selection of "Miss America of 1940" will be made by the National Variety Jubilee association.

The Texas Health Festival which holds its annual celebration July 11, 12, 13, 14, will have a dozen other entertainment features. Several contracts for nationally famous orchestras are being considered, among them George Olson, Ted Fio Rito and others.

The selection of "Miss Texas" who will be sent to Atlantic City takes on greater importance than usual because of the fact that officials of the New York Fair are entering the search for beauty and talent in conjunction with the Atlantic City event.

The big parade with specially decorated floats; the Old Fiddler's contest and the square dance are just a few of the entertainment features now being arranged. Another event almost as important

'Little City' Established Within Convention Hall

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—Convention Hall will be a complete and self-contained city during the republican national convention, according to Samuel F. Pryor, chairman of the arrangements committee.

"Virtually every service to be found in a large city will be placed in the hall," he said. "They will include a post office, an emergency hospital, telephone exchange, restaurants, meeting rooms, virtually complete photographic studios, newspaper offices and radio stations."

WHERE WAS GRANDMA? MOBILE, Ala., June 13 (UP)—"How old are you?" a hospital nurse asked a negro woman, whose leg was broken in a street accident.

"Eighty," she replied.

"Where were you going?"

"I was taking my mama's clothes to her at my cousin's house."

Further questioning revealed that "mama" claimed to be 107 years old.

Nebraska Dust Bowl Fears Chinch Bug Horde

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP)—The whirring chinch bug threatens to rival the infamous grasshopper as a menace to grain crops in parts of the dust bowl.

Nebraska agricultural officials have appealed to the federal government for funds to aid in combating the tiny bugs and said potential damage in parts of southeast Nebraska was greater than that caused by grasshoppers.

Master Farmer— Balanced Program Wins Farm Award

An imposing record of diversified and balanced agricultural program won for R. E. Martin, R-Bar, the 1940 Howard County Master Farmer award at the hands of the County Land Use Planning committee.

Martin, who is 50 years old, is a native Texan and was reared on the farm, starting his own farming ventures as a teen-ager. For 27 years he has lived on his present farm, which has been part owner of it for 12 years and has had it all in his possession for the past four years. The farm contains 927 1/2 acres and has a potential value of land, buildings and home of around $23,050. Less than one-fourth of the total is encumbered.

For the past two years the crop-land has been planted as follows: 237 acres to cotton, 224 to grain sorghum, 100 to sudan grass, 35 to sweet sorghum and half an acre to a home garden. Permanent pasture totals 250 acres, temporary pasture 100 acres. A total of 80 tons of hay has been produced annually. His feed production has been such that he has had to purchase only 500 pounds cottonseed meal per year to fill his concentrate needs.

By using a stalk cutter, stubble and residue are plowed under, and fields are further fertilized by hauling 50 tons of barnyard manure annually. Rotation is practiced by following feed with cotton. Seventy per cent, or 430 acres of the land that needs terracing has been terraced. Martin main- tains them by plowing and practicing strip cropping on 670 acres and contouring on 300 acres.

Value of two principal cash crops last year showed cotton at $2,745 and livestock at $2,000. Cotton made 165 lint pounds per acre, has a five-year average of 153 pounds against the county average of 136 for the same period. For grains, he harvested six tons of heads last year, a rate maintained for five years, against the county average of 800 pounds to the acre and produced for part of his home use, totaling 54,200 tons for work stock and 28,000 for dairy cattle. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have 10 dairy cattle, producing 3,500 pounds of whole milk per year per cow, 35 beef cattle, which netted about $800, 14 hogs, including three brood sows, 80 hens averaging 125 eggs each per year.

The garden produces turnips, radishes, greens, onions, tomatoes, cukes, beans, peas, squash, cucumbers, etc., and last year 200 pounds of fresh vegetables were consumed, 150 quarts canned, 200 pounds of fresh fruit used, 50 quarts canned, 25 pounds dried and stored, 40 dozen eggs, 52 pounds of butter and 400 pounds of milk used as was 300 pounds of fresh and cured pork, 100 pounds of beef and 90 pounds of poultry.

The farm includes as equipment a passenger car, a pick-up truck, two tractors and attachments, a row binder and a pair of planters. Two wage hands are hired and other seasonal labor as needed. The farm grosses around $5,000 and nets approximately $2,100. Complete records are kept by farm units.

The Martin farm home has lights, radio, musical instruments, sewing machine, washing machine, hot water gas system which also operates a hot water heater and a refrigeration unit. Water supply is adequate and protected and sanitary facilities are modern. Although Mr. and Mrs. Martin have no children, they are interested in school affairs; they both are members of demonstration units, participate in social, civic and community matters as well as in local, state and national elections.

Record Ballot Is In Prospect

With deadline time for filing for county or precinct office only a week away, it looked Saturday night as if local voters would face the prospect of a 108-name ballot in the July 27th democratic primary.

L. S. Patterson, chairman of the county executive democratic committee, said Saturday night that most of the 52 candidates who have announced for office from county judge to constable of Precinct No. 1 already had filed with him. Others were expected to meet this requirement before midnight next Saturday.

The following Monday, June 17, the executive committee will canvass the list of candidates and apportion costs of two primary elections among the candidates. It appeared that total cost may run around $850 to $900. Candidates will have through June 22 to pay their ballot fees to qualify for a place on the ticket.

To match this formidable list of names—possibly the largest local ticket on record—there will be a state list of 56 names. Delegates to the Texas Home Demonstration association at College Station, July 11th and 12th, were elected Saturday at the HD Council meeting held at the county agent's office.

These include Mrs. J. L. Baughy, Mrs. M. B. Petty of Overton, Mrs. Edward Simpson of Vealmore. Mrs. Glen Cantrell is to attend the short course as representative of the land-use planning committee and as delegate from Center Point club. Other clubs to attend are Knott, Fairview, Highway and Vincent.

The group voted to sponsor a tour to Carlsbad Caverns, El Paso and other points for June 27-30, inclusive. Mrs. H. S. Hanson was elected delegate from the Council and will go on tour as chairman. Mrs. H. C. Reid presided at the meeting and Mrs. Glenn Cantrell, education chairman, reported on a meeting of the land use planning committee. Plans for a farmer cooperative freezer locker plant in Big Spring were discussed.

Mrs. Cantrell also reported on the new storage cabinet built for the HD office by the county commissioners and a vote of thanks was extended to them. Approximately 21 persons attended. Moody's Name To Be Missing From State Ballot

Tax Remission Bill Declared Void By Court

Dallas Civil Appeals Court Had Held Law Unconstitutional

AUSTIN, June 12 (AP)—The supreme court ruled today the general tax remission bill attempting to donate to all counties one half of the state ad valorem tax for general fund purposes for a period of five years was "clearly unconstitutional and void."

The question was decided in refusing Dallas county an application for a writ of error from the Dallas civil appeals court which also held the remission law unconstitutional. In an opinion Judge Richard Critz of the supreme court said the judgment of the civil appeals court was undoubtedly correct.

He cited a provision of the constitution which prevents the legislature from making an appropriation for longer than a term of two years. To attempt to remit taxes for five years, he added, violates both the spirit and the letter of that section of the constitution.

The county contended that the remission law was not violative of the constitution as applied to the first two years of the five-year term but the court overruled this argument. Not Declared The court said the argument would be sound if the legislative intent had been declared in "unmistakable" terms, but asserted the legislature had not so declared in this law.

It also held that in another opinion it had held a grant of state ad valorem taxes to the county of control district for a period of more than two years, to aid in asserted "public calamity." However, it stated, the constitutional inhibition against appropriations for more than two years did not apply in instances of public calamity. The remission law was passed at the 1939 general session of the legislature amid a bitter fight. The comptroller's office estimated that had it become operative the state's general fund revenue for purposes would drop $5,000,000 a year.

The bill would have permitted counties to apply tax donations to a wide variety of purposes including flood control, irrigation, reforestation, road building, sponsorship of WPA projects, general relief and charity, paying interest and sinking fund on outstanding bonded indebtedness and assisting in navigation.

Work of equalizing tax renditions for the year will be started Friday, when the county commissioners court opens sessions as a board of equalization. First renditions to be considered on the Friday and Saturday schedule are oil and utility properties. Other property owners have been given notice to appear before the board next week.

Indications are that valuations in general will be left about where they are. Some reduction in the oil values is anticipated because of decreased production. Tax Equalization Hearings To Be Started Friday

It is planned to make Dollar Day a fixture as a first Monday event, so that it will become better publicized each month.

City Figures Under Budget For The Month

A substantial collection of delinquent taxes—the total was $1,344.98—during the month of May brought the city's revenues to $18,921.22. It is shown in the monthly report of the comptroller, submitted to the city commission Tuesday evening.

General fund expenditures for operating expenses and capital outlay amounted to $20,438.67, this sum being $2,728.54 less than the budget appropriation for the month. Total general fund expenditures for the fiscal year—April and May—have amounted to $37,079.07, or $9,255.35 less than the budget allowance for the period. Water bills to consumers during May amounted to $13,535.29, being $1,761.83 more than for April, 1940, and $2,375.53 more than for May of last year. Total water pumped during May amounted to 35,337,640 gallons, an average of 1,177,000 gallons per day.

General fund receipts from all sources amounted to $18,921.22 during May, which included $804.95 in current taxes and $1,344.98 in delinquent taxes. Expenditures from the general fund amounted to $22,212.95, which included $1,514.28 transferred to the interest and sinking fund. This left the general fund with a cash balance of $6,708.27 as of May 31, being a net decrease of $1,353.18 during the month. However, since the books were closed on May 31, the city has received payment of the final grant from P.W.A. in the amount of $22,699.04, which considerably improves the city's cash position.

During April and May a total of $20,345.08 has been disbursed from the interest and sinking fund, as follows: Bonds paid, $5,000; warrants paid, $2,000; interest and exchange paid, $13,345.08. This leaves the interest and sinking fund with a cash balance of $37,248.81 as of May 31st.

MIDLAND, June 7 (UP)—Gordon Bigham, former employe of the oil railroad commission, was under indictment here today on charges of consenting to accept and accepting a bribe.

The indictment was returned yesterday. Director Homer Garrison of the state police said the investigation was developed by the oil company, the attorney general's office, state police and District Attorney Marcelline McDonald of Midland. The amount of the alleged bribe was $5,000.

Meanwhile, on city paving projects, workers were put on the Bradford street sector, and will be sent from there to Main street. Several blocks of city streets are ready for topping, and only a shortage of WPA labor is holding up the work, said City Engineer B. J. McDaniel. As soon as more men are available, this work will be started. Mrs. L. Harris and children from Arizona are visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dink Cramer this week. The information gained at the claims meeting will better enable the Big Spring office to adequately handle and expedite claims for old-age survivors insurance payments. Mayne said. "The information gained at the claims meeting will better enable the Big Spring office to adequately handle and expedite claims for old-age survivors insurance payments," Mayne said.

It was explained by Mayne that many claims have already been filed with the Big Spring office and that members of his staff will gladly cooperate with any individual who has a claim to file. There is no charge for this service and it is unnecessary to consult an attorney prior to filing a claim since consultation services are a regular part of the board's procedure in developing claims.

City To Sue On Paving Bills

The plan has not been worked out in detail but representatives of companies interested will be contacted for costs. The city engineer wanted to build up a retirement pension would authorize a payroll deduction, and the city would match this amount. Talked informally also by the board members was a proposition of a franchise or present consideration from the Texas Electric Service company. The matter will be taken up at a later meeting.
