Campground Guide Issued by State Hiway Department

Austin — Directions to some 350 public campgrounds in Texas are provided in a new publication released recently by the Texas Highway Department.

The new Texas Public Campground Guide gives information about sites which range from primitive to elaborately modern. Directions are provided to undeveloped gulf beaches, and to sites with paved parking areas, electricity and running water. There are even directions to a site one can't get to - by car, that is. (It's a fisherman's camping area on a Gulf coast island.)

The guide was published to serve the growing popularity of camping and recreational vehicles. It lists only those campgrounds which are operated by tax-supported agencies - federal, state, county, city and such organizations as river authorities. Private commercial facilities are not included, that information usually being available in commercial tour and camping directories.

The cooperation of many state, federal and local authorities was required to compile this first comprehensive guide to Texas public campgrounds. Cooperating agencies included the Extension Service to Texas A&M University, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, U. S. Corps of Engineers, National Park Service, National Forest Service, chambers of commerce, city and county officials, and others.

Free copies of the new Texas Public Campground Guide are available at Highway Department tourist bureaus and district offices, or by mail from the Texas Highway Department, Travel and Information Division, P.O. Box 5064, Austin 78703.

TAX MAN SAM SEZ: Refund Record for 1968

When the tax surcharge was passed there was a small gap in what most taxpayers had withheld and what they would owe. It appeared that many taxpayers would end up 1968 owing the government money.

Based on this difference, IRS predicted slightly fewer refunds, and certainly a reduction in the amount of the average refund check. However, it didn't work out that way, in the Dallas District at least. By June 30, 1969, Internal Revenue had issued 1,008,650 refund checks to North Texans, for a probably record amount of $170,206,756.04.

The best guess on the cause of an increase in the number and amount of refunds rather than a decrease - North Texas taxpayers don't like to end up the year owing Uncle Sam. As a matter of fact, a good part of the North Texans filing tax returns carefully arrange their withholding payments to make sure that they have a refund coming rather than owing taxes.

Some of these folks have a government-enforced saving plan which pays off in the form of the refund check. Others just don't want to owe the government "nothin'." At any rate, more than one million out of 1,600,000 returns filed ended up on the right side of Internal Revenue's balance sheet for their account.

County Soil Survey Is 80% Completed

Standard Soil Survey for Motley County is progressing rapidly according to Johnny Hajek, soil scientist for the Soil Conservation Service. Approximately 515,000 acres have been mapped as of July 1, 1969. This figure includes about 19,000 acres of water, stream and river areas. Hajek said that 80 percent of the survey is complete for Motley County.

Areas remaining to be mapped are Swenson, Matador Land and Cattle Co., and smaller ranches south of Flomot to the Caprock. Hajek plans to complete the field work by December 1970. After the field work is complete, a Soil Survey Report will be published and available on request to the public.

This report will be available after July 1972. During this time soil survey information may be obtained at the local SCS office on request.

Farmers and ranchers can determine what type of soil they have, including information such as texture, slope, depth of soil and water intake. Conservation planners use the soil information for developing conservation plans for farmers and ranchers. Other people, such as land appraisers and engineers, also use soil survey information.

COLORFUL CARPET

Planted 18 inches apart in a semi-shaded place where the soil has plenty of humus, coleus plants soon form a carpet of color. They need plenty of water to perform their best.

Delightful carpeting for any sunny or partly shaded area in your garden is the foliage plant named Coleus. It has flowers, too, but, while they are attractive little lavender blossoms in tall, slender spikes, they are only a minor reason for growing the plant.

Within the range of a planting of coleus you'll find leaves with 2 or 3 brilliantly colored zones, one inside the other, leaves mottled with several colors or leaves of a single solid color.

Shades of red, copper, pink, yellow and green are coleus colors and the effect of a planting is that of an Oriental rug.

Because coleus is a long-season plant, it is best in the North to start seeds indoors or in a cold frame. The seeds are so fine that they aren't really planted - just pressed with the palm of your hand onto whatever medium you are using for seed starting.

Of course, it also is possible to sow the seeds outdoors, but this must not be done until all frost danger is over.

Whether they're sown indoors or out, the seeds sprout in from 8 to 12 days when the temperature is 75 to 80 degrees. The seedlings should be transplanted to set 3 inches apart. When moved to the garden, or when thinned if grown there, 15 inches should be allowed between plants.

The leaf colors will be brightest if coleus plants are grown in full sun. Plants also will need copious watering. In shade, less water is needed but the colors suffer. For these reasons, a situation in semi-shade is ideal.

One other requirement for success with coleus is plenty of humus in the soil.

The most popular strain of coleus is named Rainbow. Many seed firms offer their own selections of this strain and seeds of separate varieties, chosen for their foliage patterns, also are offered.

There also are available seeds of strains with fringed leaves, with small leaves, and with long, slender leaves. Perhaps oddest of all is a variety named Othello and called the black coleus. This has to be seen to be believed.

A ruffled organdy cap with long satin streamers held her veil of illusion that extended full length of her chapel train. She carried a cascade bouquet of white butterfly orchids trimmed in satin with seed pearls.

Miss Celia Ann Martin was maid of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Harriett Martin, both sisters of the bride.

CORRECTION

In the recent birth announcement of a daughter, Jill Celeste to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jeffers of Wichita Falls, it was erroneously stated that "Mrs. Claude Jeffers has one other great-grandchild, Jay Jeffers, who is the ten-month-old brother of the new arrival." This should have read, "Jay Jeffers, who is the ten-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Jeffers."

The Rev. Lloyd Riddles of Flint Avenue Baptist Church in Lubbock read the double ring rites.

Traditional bridal selections were presented by Cindy Brown, organist and Carlton Dillard, soloist.

Double seven branched candelabra entwined with emerald foliage and white satin ribbons and matching arrangements of white gladioli and pompon chrysanthemums on pedestals enhanced the altar setting.

Guests were seated by David Franklin of Odessa; Bobby Tum-

Thomas Scaff of Bovina attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Boyd Hodges of Mineral Wells and Don Moore of Lubbock.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white bridal taffeta with scooped neckline and long petal pointed sleeves. The bouffant skirt flowed from a natural waistline forming a chapel train. Re-embroidered, pearl studded lace motifs adorned the fitted bodice and edged the train. Her forward headpiece of silk organza roses and pearl edged lace leaves held the veil of silk illusion. She carried a bunch cascade arrangement of Elegance carnations centered with two Phalaenopsis orchids and showered with white satin picot streamers.

After a reception, held in the church parlor, the couple left for a wedding trip to Corpus Christi.
