The cabbage family is well represented by brussels sprouts (Jade Cross), cabbage (Early Jersey Wakefield, Ruby Ball, Superette, and Savoy King), cauliflower (Snowball Y and Snow King Hybrid), Broccoli (Green Comet), collards (Vates), and Kale (Dwarf Scotch).

Green onions of the White Sweet Spanish variety can be started now and pulled throughout the late fall. Swiss chard can be picked continuously, even after the light frosts of fall. The Viking or America varieties of spinach are cold hardy and can be picked long after frost.

Root crops such as carrots, beets, parsnips, turnips, and rutabagas are well protected from the cold by the soil. Carrots and parsnips can be pulled throughout the winter if the soil around them is mulched.

For utmost satisfaction, gardeners should pay close attention to seeding rate, depth, amount per person to plant, days to maturity and the time span from the seeding to harvest.
