geographical area must conform to the uniform planting date and hold off plant-ing their cotton until after May 17 in order Ing the cotton unit are way 17 more for us to see a significant reduction in the boll weevil population," says Motley County Extension Agent, Michael Clawson."Ifearly planted cotton is avail-able, this provides a habitat for overwin-tering females to deposit their eggs dur-tion aged to mid June therefore produc ing early to mid-June, therefore produc-ing the first weevil generation." A uniform planting date of mid-May or later will allow a large part of the overwintered population to emerge from overwintering habitat and die before cotton begins to square. With mid-May planted cotton snuares one-third grown planted cotton, squares one-third grown or one-fourth inch in diameter will not be produced until the last week of June.

produced until the last week of June. Squares smaller than one-fourth inch in diamter are too small to support develop-ing boll weevil larvae. Usually, only two or three percent of the boll weevils that go into overwinter-ing habitat are able to survive the winter. Of this two or three percent, only those female weevils that are able to survive boll weevils emerging from overwinter-ing habitat within three weeks of the production of the first one-third grown squares will have any reasonable chance of contributing to the 1993 boll weevil weevil infestations. This information was recently pre-sented by Emory Boring, Extension En-tomolgist - TAEX, during the 1993 Spring Cotton Production Seminar. After Bor-ing's presentation, local cotton producers set May 17, 1993 as the uniform planting date for Motley County. "All cotton producers in the same geographical area must conform to the and thrips infestations would be from mid-May through the first week of June. If planting could be accomplished during this period, the cotton fruiting period would be cut by more than 50 percent when compared to those years when cot-ton is planted over a period of 60 days. The shorter fruiting period would also reduce the time that the crop would be susceptible to insect infestations.

In cotton planted after mid-May, insecticidal control measures are suggested when 4 boll weevils are found per 100 fect of row or when 1.4 boll weevils are found per 100 plants. However, in cotton planted earlier, boll weevils are more likely to cause excessive crop damage. In cotton planted around May 1, insecticidal control meater around May 1, insectional control measures are suggested when there are 2 weevils per 100 feet of row or 0.7 weevils per 100 plants. Since early planted cotton could be producing one-third grown squares by mid-June and at that time overwintered boll weevils could still be emerging, additional inseciticidal applications may be needed. These appli-cations should be based on field inspection starting about three days after the initial application. For further information regarding boll weevils and the uniform planting date, contact the Motley County Extension Service at (806) 347-2733.

Meeting the electricity needs of Texans today is a real challenge. While maintaining respect for the environment, we must balance cost and reliability without becoming dependent on any one fuel.

That's why in the early 1980s, a group of electric cooperatives got together to build a power plant that uses a local fuel resource. lignite coal. Today, this efficient scrubber-equipped plant provides 400 megawatts of low-cost power to homes and businesses served by cooperatives in 91 Texas counties

Keeping our commitment to the environment in mind, we are also making sure that we put things back better than the way we found them. The land reclamation program at this plant's mine is turning what was once a cactus and mesquite patch into a grassy, productive home for livestock and wildlife.
