PRICE TEN CENTS

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Life is not unlike a highway with a bold line down the center. Religion can be as simple as staying in the right lane despite the attractive and convenient overtures of temptation. After a calamity it may be impossible to get back into the right lane.

A friend who raises hogs as an avocation, says that with price of hogs at present, he is thinking of hiring a man to ride shot gun on his truck when he goes to market. On the other hand he says that many people who once ate "high on the hog," are now willing to eat lower portions, so long as it is hog.

I have now reached that station in life where young people stand back and allow me to pass.

A single rain drop struck the window of the great plane, hesitated a moment then rolled downward like a warm tear.

Tall mountains of billowy clouds were in all directions as the plane rose higher, and a rainbow appeared briefly on the curtain of a shower. The small Mexican girl pressed her face to the window to drink in the miracle of beauty, and flying. Patches of the earth were visible at intervals as the plane cut through the mist that was producing a rainstorm four miles below. The girl tossed her long brown curls and continued to press her face to the window. Her young brother continued to look over her shoulder at the almost unbelievable vista beyond the window. The earth had vanished entirely but great snow-white mountains rose above the mesa of sky terrain. After a time the boy was at the window to drink his share of the cup of beauty. He looked back, smiled then pressed his face to the window as the pilot sought comfort and safety for his passengers. The sun was shining through as the journey neared its end. The girl looked over her brother's shoulder briefly, then settled back into her seat and closed her eyes. She had seen the earth below and its fields of growing things, work, sweat and reality. The adventure was nearing its end; A dream was moving rapidly to a conclusion.

Clouds are the means of transporting millions of tons of water to arid areas from the sea for a single rainstorm. The amazing thing is that this feat is accomplished without government supervision.

TENTATIVE plans to improve the economic condition of Motley County were ratified in a committee meeting Thursday morning at El Matador restaurant.

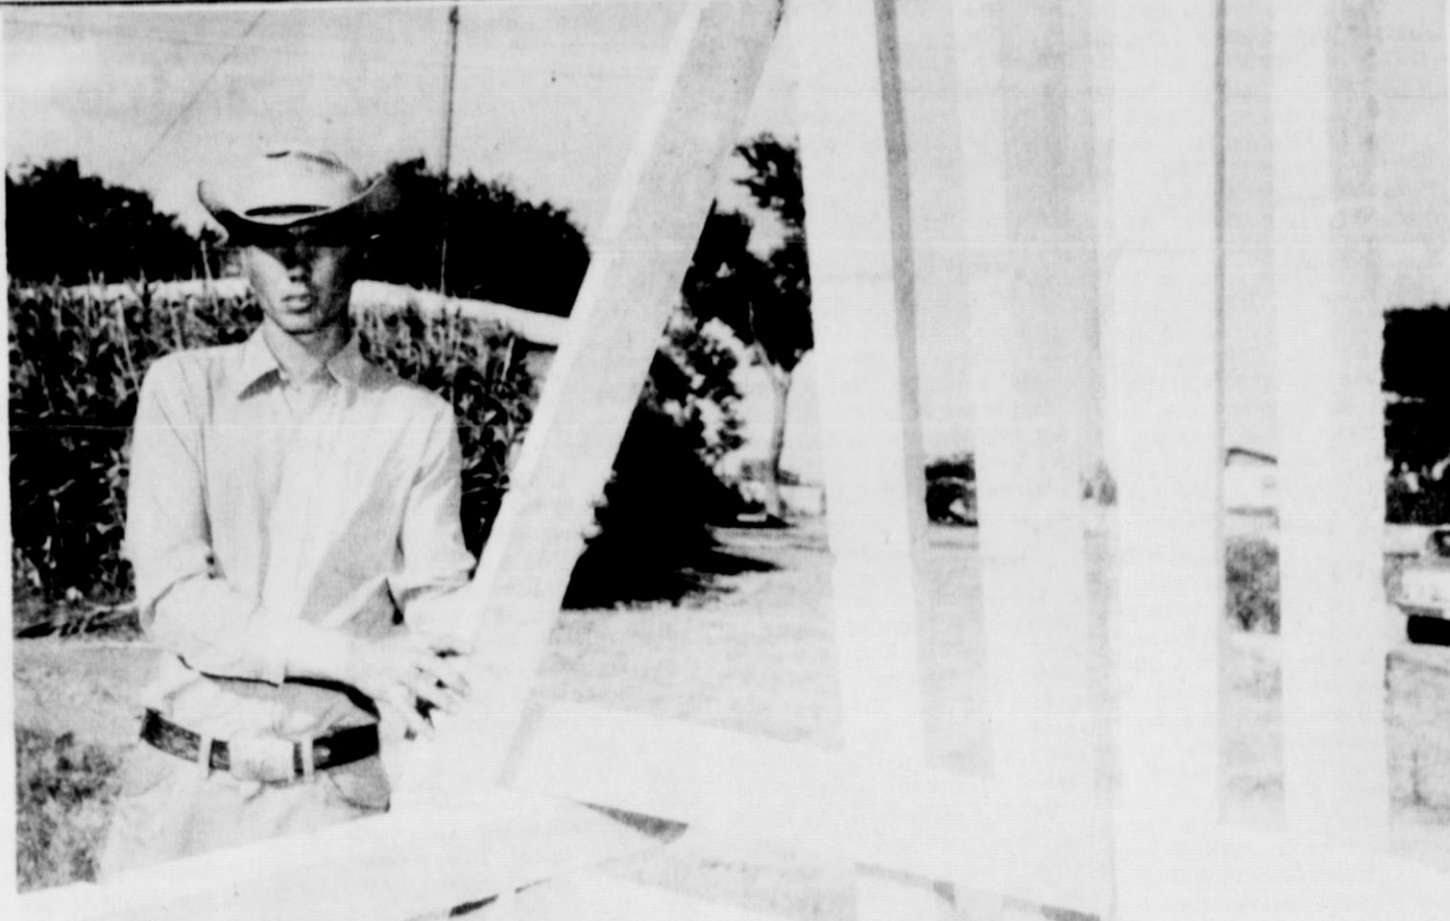

The plans are outlines of projects which might benefit the economic position of the county and create jobs. The assistance is coming through the cooperation of South Plains Association of Governments (SPAG).

Motley County qualified for federal aid because it lost population between 1960 and 1970, according to Truett Mayes of the Lubbock SPAG regional office.

Ervin Willard, president of the Matador Lions Club, served as chairman of the committee which unanimously approved the ratification of the plan.

It was explained that the plan was "open at both ends" allowing new projects, or removing suggested projects. It was declared important, however, to secure SPAG approval as soon as possible.

Others attending the meeting included Brown Hinson, Mayor

Even By Long Distance Guthrie Hard To Reach

By Michael O. Wester
GUTHRIE — King County Sheriff Bob Walker would like to know how you dial two shorts and a long.

He is leading a helpless battle to change a telephone mixup that prevents his office from receiving most long distance calls.

Guthrie is the county seat of King County. Walker says it is impossible to call into the only town in the county — unless you know the number and the area code.

"We're the only town in King County, and although there are only 90 people here, we don't have our own telephone exchange and the phone company tells me we can't have one," Walker said.

The telephone exchange is actually owned by the Caprock Telephone Co., headquartered in Spur. The company also has exchanges in several other small towns in the area.

"Guthrie is not even incorporated, thus it becomes a community," said James R. Wright, general manager of Caprock Telephone Co. "We have five communities listed under the same exchange, and if we renamed it Guthrie, other communities might also want their own exchange."

"Besides, the exchange building is not even located at Guthrie."

The small town is also the headquarters for the famed 6666 (Four-Sixes) Ranch — one of the largest remaining spreads in the nation.

"Guthrie may not be the largest city in Texas, but it is the only one in our county," Walker said. "I'm the only law officer in the county, and if anyone tries to contact me outside our area code, they are just out of luck."

The Guthrie telephones are carried through the Hackmont exchange, which in itself offends Walker.

"There isn't even such a place as a Hackmont," he said. "When the phones were first put up through here, there were two small communities known as Dumont and Hackberry. So, the phone company combined them into Hackmont. Neither community exists today — but the phone exchange is still Hackmont, not Guthrie."

Wright said the sheriff's number, like other important county offices, was listed as an emergency number in the small telephone book published each year — a book which contains all the exchanges owned by Caprock Telephone Co.

"It's an impossibility as far as we are concerned to change the exchange to Guthrie," Wright said. "In fact, it's just a request from one man. It's one man's opinion."

Two major U.S. Highways, 82 and 83, intersect near Guthrie. And, Walker says out-of-state people are always trying to reach him to stop some motorists believed to be passing through the area.

"When they keep trying to get me by telephone and operators tell them there is no such place, they sometimes take time to write and tell me I ought to get a phone," Walker said. "I've done what I can to get the phone company to rename the exchange, but I can't get them to even recognize Guthrie. They refuse to put us on their map."

The Caprock Telephone Co. has a total of 2,337 telephones and 3,567 miles of open wire lines from about a dozen small areas they serve. Wright admits at times some problems could occur, but he said similar circumstances could happen

A REFRESHING touch was added to crops and ranges Sunday when showers fell in many parts of the county. It was not a general soaking rain, however. Matador received over two inches but the fall was light at Whiteflat and Flomot, according to reports.

Roaring Springs received only a light rain but "a good shower" fell there early Tuesday morning.

The rains here fell about church time Sunday morning and many parishers received a soaking. The series of rains apparently were out of the southwest.

The 1973 rainfall records kept by Bob Stanley show more rain than at this date a year ago. Jan. 1.64, Feb. 1.09, Mar. 4.97, April 2.85, May, .83, June 1.06 and July, 3.67. Total 16.11.

In 1972, rainfall to this date was: Jan. 17, Feb. 21, Mar. 32, April, 82, May 5.27, June, 4.72 and July, 2.23 for a total of 13.74.

Average rainfall total is 12.11 inches, as follows: Jan., .67, Feb., .62, Mar., .75, April, 1.66, May, 3.31, June, 2.98 and July, 2.12.

Good rains fell in parts of the Northfield community Sunday. Middle Pease River reached across most of the river bed by four o'clock Sunday, indicating that substantial rains had fallen west of this area.

OIL ON THE ROAD — This scene shows oil on a road near the Jack Luckett home at the northeast corner of the town section. The oil on the surface resulted from a leak in the Scurlock Oil Company's (of Houston) line July 20. The leak was under the Northfield Farm To Market highway. Small dams were built to prevent the oil from running into fields. It was later sucked up into a large truck. The line carried oil from the Roaring Springs fields to Whiteflat, about 20 miles.

ERRATUM

An error appeared in last week's Tribune relating to revenue checks received by the City of Matador and Motley County. It should have read that the City received $4,274 in December. Not $44,274.

STUDIES ABOUT THE BIBLE

We have advanced the idea that the Bible is inspired from God because its writers were able to foretell historical events. Let us consider some events about relations between Jews and Gentiles.

The twenty-eighth chapter of Deuteronomy, beginning with verse fifteen, is devoted to the future status of the Jews because of their continued disobedience toward God. The over-all prediction is the over throw of the Jews as a nation. In verses 49 and 50 the prophet foretells characteristic details of the nation which would defeat Israel and reduce the people to scattered servitude. Many details are given. We shall note a few.

From the above scripture, "The Lord will bring a nation against you from afar . . ." All students of the Bible and history know that the Jews were often associated in both war and commerce with neighboring countries: Egypt, Phoenicia, Syria, Persia, Moab, etc. But the prophet here says that the conquering nation would be from AFAR. It is common knowledge that the nation which conquered and finally eliminated the Jews as a nation was Rome: not an adjoining nation, but one from 1500 miles across the Mediterranean Sea.

A second mark of identity for Israel's conquerer is " . . . swift as the eagle flieeth: . . ." By way of comparison, the Roman army was noted for speed in executing maneuvers, attacks, and conquests. And the very image carried on Roman standards was the EAGLE.

The third mark of identity is, "A nation whose language you shall not understand . . ." Being in close contact with neighboring nations, the Jews were to some extent acquainted with their languages, and many Jews could speak the various tongues. But not so with the language of Rome.

We have now noted three descriptive expressions of the army which was destined to destroy the nation of Israel. That nation came to be Rome, these descriptions were recorded about 1541 B.C., before there was a nation called Rome. How did the prophet know these facts well in advance of Rome's time? God directed the writing of the Bible.

Undoubtedly the male, according to medical authorities. Boy babies are less hardy, and at nearly all ages, more men die of disease than women.

Agriculture's outpost on Wall Street

Most farmers and ranchers don't realize the Federal Land Bank gets its loan funds from the sale of bonds to investors. There is no government money in the Land Bank system. The quality of Land Bank Bonds, plus the skill with which the Farm Credit System's own Fiscal Agency works on behalf of agriculture, means a constant flow of low-cost financing from the nation's money market. Come in . . . and let's talk over how Land Bank money is bought—and sold—at a fair price to the borrower.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

To prevent damage from the cattle grub, now is the time to treat. Heel flies, the adult form of the cattle grub, have laid their eggs, and these have hatched, tunneling into the cattle. In about 8 weeks, these grubs will reach the backs.

Damage is not evident until the grub appears in the back, but by this time, the damage is done. More feed is required for grub infested animals and cows produce less milk, resulting in reduced weaning weights of calves. Other losses result as the result of trimming damaged areas, and reduction in the price of the hide.

Several animal systemic insecticides can be used for control early in the development. Co-Ral; Rulene, Neguvon, Warbex, Tiguvon and Ronnel are on the approved list. When applying, be sure to read the instructions on the label and follow correctly. Drenching and grub treatment should not be done the same day, and neither should cattle that are sick or under stress be treated.

If you have additional questions, I will try to get the answer for you if I don't have it.

GERMAN PROVERB

The problem that can result in this is if a grain crop is allowed to mature, the seed produced will probably constitute a serious volunteer problem the following year, and if the land is planted in cotton or some other crop, you know the problem encountered getting rid of the unwanted plants. By allowing the crop to reach maturity, you are also losing out on quality, as protein levels and total digestible nutrients decline rapidly his widow entitled to collect workmen's compensation for his death?

The company said no. "Obviously, he was not at work when he was dancing," the company reasoned in a court hearing. But Mrs. Harrison pointed out that the party had taken place on company premises, under company sponsorship, as part of a company contest—and that all the company's salesmen were expected to show up.

The court decided that the dancing had indeed arisen out of the job, and granted the widow's claim. The court said the party was simply the company's way of inspiring its employees to greater effort.

Workmen's compensation laws generally cover accidents that occur in the course of employment. As a rule, courts have included any recreational activities that are closely connected with the job.

This is especially true when the company plays an active role in the event.

Thus, in a case arising out of a company picnic, the court granted compensation for an accident largely because of the participation of the company president. It seems he would use these occasions to present special prizes to employees and to give them pep talks about "our one big family."

Still, not every recreational occasion is covered. In another picnic case, a woman employee was hurt during a foot race. But when she sought compensation, the company pointed out:

1) that it paid only part of the cost of the picnic;

2) that the picnic was held on a non-working day, away from the company premises, with no pressure on anyone to attend; and

3) that the company had nothing to do with the arrangements.

The court decided it would be stretching language to call the woman's injury "an incident of her employment." Result: no compensation.
