Longtime Resident to Celebrate 100th Birthday

Cora Carter will celebrate her 100th Birthday, November 4, 1988

A sharp and witty, Cora Carter, who will be 100 Friday, November 4, has seen many changes in her lifetime. She has gone from horse and buggy days to seeing people in space.

Cora Hobbs was born in 1888 in Stephens County and came to Motley County in 1907 after she and Harry Carter were married in May of 1906. They made their home by ranching and farming. Cora and Harry had two daughters, Lottie C. Stotts and Julia C. Luckett, who have added to the list of descendants with 4 grandchildren and 9 great-grandchildren. Also to this list is a host of friends.

Abduction Attempts in area Towns

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was taken from the Valley Tribune. These abduction attempts have been reported in the Childress/Paducah area. Parents are urged to take precaution with their children and teach them what to do in a case like this.

The Childress and Memphis police are again asking for assistance in an ongoing investigation into the attempted abduction of several children in their towns. The saga began last May with the reports of a man in a dark colored car, and/or pickup, attempting to lure children (male and female) ages 3-14 into his vehicle.

The nightmare began again last week at Childress Elementary, as a seven-year old Childress boy made his way home from school. The man told the youth, "Your sister has been hurt...come with me."

The second incident occurred shortly before 7 p.m., on Wednesday, again near the elementary campus, involving a seven-year old girl at play. A man fitting the same physical description drove up and told her "I've got some candy for you...I'll buy you a new bicycle and I'll take you to the park every time you want to go, if you'll come get in my car."

Police responded within two minutes, but were unable to locate the man or the vehicle.

The description is the same as the last summer reports. Male: age and nationality unknown, dark hair, dark mustache, short beard and light colored eyebrows. Vehicle: small, dark color, damage to the front portion and a broken right tail light. A dark pickup was reported in the summer offenses also.

According to Police Chief, Jim Trulove, the suspect may not live in Childress, by there being two months time lapse in attempts. He also noted that in July, in addition to trying to talk to the children, the man has taken pictures of the children and had tried to obtain information about different children by questioning by phone.

A late report of yet another incident occurred last Friday at 3:15 p.m. at the Church of Christ parking lot in Childress, near the elementary school. Childress Police and school officials are urging parents to be extremely careful in watching their children, and not to take any chances. "We can't stress enough the danger of the situation. We aren't blowing it out of proportion," states the Childress Police Chief.

A seven-year old Stamford girl has been missing since September 2, 1988. She had walked one block from her home to a convenience store to buy a soft drink. Posters of the child and a suspect have been circulated.

The recent instances bring the total to about nine having been reported to the department.

"In some cases he has asked children if they want candy. Other times he has asked them about their parents...whether they are at home. He talks to children from the vehicle and it doesn't matter if they are playing in a yard or behind a fence," officer Billy Blacksher told The Childress Index in July.

Officers have been patrolling the elementary campus since school began last month and school officials are being requested by the department to help patrol the area as well.

Childress County Sheriff's Office as well as Department of Public Safety and surrounding law enforcement agencies have been notified of the attempts and are "on the look out for the suspect and the vehicle."

The police department currently has no connection with the telephone inquiries made at the beginning of this school term by an unknown person, who said she was with Childress County School Census and the attempted abductions. However, parents are still advised NOT to give out information over the phone about their children regardless of their ages.

Parents are warned to be cautious and report any suspicious activity. Anyone with any type of information should contact Childress Police Department 937-2546.

Motley County Ex-Students and Ex-Teachers Association, Saturday re-elected the current slate of officers during Homecoming business meeting in which Ruth Garnett was named president, Gale Stafford, vice-president and Hazel Walton Donovan and Olivia Campbell Barton, co-secretaries. The business session followed a program which began at 3 o'clock.

Richard Campbell, class of '65 served as Master of Ceremonies, with his usual comical flair, and Invocation was given by Larry Keltz, also class of '65. In the Memorial service, E.G. (Ervin) Clower, of Gladewater, class of 1939 read the list of deceased which included a tribute to Howard Traweck, the first elected president of the Ex-Students-Teachers Association, who passed away August 5 of this year. He was in the class of 1930.

The association presented Hazel Donovan a plaque in recognition of her loyalty and continuous service as secretary, and Eleanor Traweck accepted a plaque honoring her late husband for his support and service.

Plaques, instead of corsages were presented to others recognized. These included J.C. Murphy, class of '38 of San Diego, Calif., who traveled the farthest; Louise Edmondson Latimer, Homecoming Queen, class of '38 and her husband, Orval Latimer, who was elected Homecoming King; earliest graduate, Clarence Jinkins, class of 1914; earliest teacher, Virgie Sparks Hunter. President Ruth Garnett made the plaques that were given for honors.

Marisue Bureson Potts spoke to the association in behalf of a proposed museum for Motley County, and Jan Barton Hamilton of Plainview, class of 1960 who recently returned from six weeks in Australia, spoke on the cattle industry and in appreciation of her ranching heritage. She recited "The Bridge Builder," taught by Mrs. J.R. Whitworth and paid tribute to other teachers she had while in school here.

Special music was by vocalists Billy Wayne Donaldson and Kathy Shorter, and a medley of songs by Carolyn (Mrs. Don) Ewing and Kathy Shorter.

Directors who were named with the officers are James Bearden, Nelda Wilson Tomison, Betty Davis Simpson, Shane Stevens Jones, Mickie Roberts Bostick and Joe Campbell.

The Ex-Students organization began with an informal meeting of a group in 1953 with Opal Estes Pipkin serving as secretary and Howard Traweck was elected president. Records reveal that the Matador Bulldogs beat Quitaque 76-13 on Nov. 3, 1953. Among those present at the organizational meeting were Erma Graham Edwards, Mary Hamilton Meason, Hazel Walton Donovan, Helen Keith Patton, Opal Estes Pipkin, Bill McCaghren, Alvin Stearns, Curtis Graham, Henry Ford, Howard Traweck and J.E. Edwards, a member of the school faculty. for pictures, see page 3

Roaring Springs Receives Money For Water System

The Roaring Springs City Council met Tuesday November 1 at 7:00 p.m. with Mayor Eugene Watson, Councilmen Bill Moose, Gene Brannon, Joey Thacker, Councilwoman Devonne Dillard and City Secretary Anna Wilson. Charlie Long was absent.

The minutes were read and approved and the bills were approved to be paid. Jamie Johnson of Ober J. Engineering was on hand to explain the application of the 1988 Grant, after announcement of an extra $64,000 compensatory monies being awarded to the city of Roaring Springs which changes the 1988 Grant application. The city Council chose to accept proposed changes #1. Karen King of SPAG will now rewrite the proposal and get it to Austin. The Council passed the resolution for this.

Harry Gray of Quail Pipe Company was on hand to complain again about the fact that no chlorine was getting to Quail Pipe Company and that there was no chlorine in the water at his house on Monday. He stated he felt they needed to get it up to ASAP standards, at least.

Thacker explained that when the new lines are laid, Quail Pipe should be the first 6" pipe to be laid, and T.J. Hammer is working with the city on the matching funds on the first $90,000 grant monies to be traded in pipe and carried as a loan. They would see what needs to be done about the chlorination.

Mike Pedigo, SPAG, 911 Specialist was on hand to show a video explaining the 911 system and ask the council to pass a resolution to be included in the continued on page 11

Flu and Pneumonia Kill
Thousands of Texans

As winter quickly approaches, it's flu and pneumonia season and for many Texans this is a matter of life and death.

People in high-risk categories are in the greatest danger from flu and its complications, according to the American Lung Association of Texas. People in high risk include older adults, especially those over 65; adults and children who have chronic illnesses such as long-term lung or heart problems, kidney disease or diabetes; patients who are being discharged from a hospital; and residents of nursing homes or other long-term health care facilities.

For healthy children and adults, flu typically is a moderately serious illness.

However, for those in high-risk or those who already are not well because of underlying illness, serious complications can set in - most commonly, bacterial infections - because the body can be so weakened by flu that its defenses against bacteria are low.

In 1987, flu and pneumonia killed

3,484 in Texas, according to the Texas Department of Health.

"Yet this number could be substantially reduced if people in high-risk groups would get their flu shots and their pneumococcal pneumonia vaccination," said Cinda Davis, program administrator of the American Lung Association of Texas.

Flu and pneumonia combined are the sixth leading cause of death in Texas. "That's why we are making a major effort to reach people with this information," Davis said.

The best time for vaccination is well before mid-November. This allows time for antibodies to build up before peak flu season. Flu shots are needed every year, since the strains change, but you need to get the Pneumococcal Pneumonia vaccine only once.

Contact your physician for further information. Flu and pneumonia educational materials are also available from the American Lung Association of Texas. For more information, call 343-0502.

Chisum Endorsed By Tex-Chem-Pac

Warren Chisum, Democratic candidate for 84th District House of Representatives, has been endorsed by the Tex-Chem-Pac, a political action committee staffed and funded by the Texas-based employees of Hoechst Celanese Corporation.

Tex-Chem-Pac supports candidates whose record or philosophy is favorable to the principles of fiscal responsibility, limited government, the free enterprise system, and the interests of Hoechst Celanese employees.

Although Chisum does not accept money from political action committees, he was pleased with the endorsement.

"The Hoechst Celanese company and their employees are a vital part of Pampa and the 84th District, and I am gratified that they extended this endorsement to my candidacy," Chisum said.

Hoechst Celanese Corporation produces petrochemical products with annual sales of about $4.5 billion and employment of over 3,000 people in Texas at the Bay City, Bishop, Bayport, Clear Lake, and Pampa plants, the Corpus Christi Technical Center, and the Dallas office.

Social Security Tips

by Terry J. Clements

The recent report of the Disability Advisory Council should prove helpful to people who have been promoting work incentive programs for the disabled. The report strongly urged that Social Security disability programs need to be "restructured to give a higher priority to encouraging beneficiaries to work than to declaring them unable to work." Many people on disability can work with the proper support services, and they should be encouraged to do so, the council suggested.

The advisory council was appointed by Health and Human Services, Secretary Otis R. Bowen, to study the disability program. It is composed of representatives of employers and employees, public and private vocational rehabilitation service, disability advocacy groups, medical experts, and the general public.

Of the more than 50 recommendations the council made, one of the most remarkable is that, the work incentives provisions of the law should be strengthened and marketed as an important part of the disability program, not just as technical details. Most of the incentives were added to the law since 1980, although, some date back to the beginning of the Social Security disability program in 1955.

In general, the work incentives provisions are designed to extend cash benefits, and medical coverage to disabled people who attempt to work until they have proven they can work on a regular basis. They include:

- * A trial work period of up to 9 months (not necessarily consecutive) during which a person can keep all earnings and still receive monthly benefits, and Medicare.

- * An extended 36-month period of entitlement, following the trial work period during which a disabled beneficiary can receive benefits for any month during which he or she does not earn over $300 a month.

- * Medicare may continue for up to 39 months after the trial work period.

- * Certain work expenses related to the disability may be deducted in figuring earnings that count towards substantial gainful activity.

- * If a person in an approved vocation rehabilitation program medically recovers, benefits may continue until the program is completed.

There are other similar provisions that apply strictly to SSI recipients. People who want more information on these, or the SSI provisions, or wish to file a claim call 1-800-2345-SSA.

Over 95 percent of another big, quality High Plains cotton crop remained in the field as of October 28, prompting Dr. James Supak to advise timely harvest to preserve its value.

Supak, Area Cotton Agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, is concerned about both yield and quality losses. Cotton fiber reaches its peak weight and top quality on the day it's ready for harvest, he says, "and it's all downhill from there."

Uncommonly warm and dry weather in the last three weeks of October have added an estimated 10 percent to the area's potential output, crop observers say. That brings the more pessimistic estimate for the 25 Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. counties up to around 2.5 million bales. And a few unbridled optimists have raised their sights to 2.8 and even 2.9 million bales.

What may prove to be more reasoned estimates, however, lean toward the lower end of the range. Classing offices at Lubbock and Lamesa, where at least 95 percent of the area crop is classed, are projecting combined receipts of 2,400,000 running bales. That's 85,000 bales below classings last year when the 25 counties tallied 2,668,550 net weight bales. Lamesa projects 750,000 bales for this year, 85,000 more than in 1987, while Lubbock looks for 1,650,000, a drop of 170,000 bales.

Qualitywise, Lubbock's first 11,000 bales classed 93 percent white, 89 percent in the base micronaire range and 69 percent with strength of 24 grams per tex or higher. Early classings at the Lamesa office tell a similar story, except for a disappointing and unexplained 24 percent outside the 3.5 to 4.9 micronaire grouping.

Supak suggests that producers would be smart to consider use of harvest-aid chemicals to prepare the crop for early harvest as opposed to waiting for a frost or freeze. He calls attention to research showing a weight loss of about one percent per week for each week of field weathering, but says that is only part of the story.

More comprehensive studies, he points out, show a total average drop in value of about $5 per bale per week, including the loss of weight, grade, micronaire and the normal weakening of market prices as the harvest progresses.

"And," he adds, "there's always that possibility of hail or other bad weather that can cause severe, even total losses."

Stamping Out Vote Fraud In Texas

The Texas Chainsaw Massacre is not the only horror story in the state. It's frightening to know that on election day, names of the deceased are found on voter registration rolls. Truck loads of ineligible voters are hauled from precinct to precinct. Ballot boxes are stuffed. Votes disappear.

Make no mistake, vote fraud has been, and remains, a serious problem in Texas. While a few wink and turn away, vote fraud is a crime. Even in a state as large as Texas, one or two fraudulent ballots per precinct can change the outcome of an election.

In this year's presidential campaigns, both candidates have made crime a major issue. Certainly, no crime strikes at the heart of our democratic system more insidiously than vote fraud.

As Chief Election Officer of Texas, Jack M. Rains, Secretary of State launched a crusade to end vote fraud. He asked his Assistant Secretary of State, Randall H. Erben, to personally take charge of this effort. The Secretary of State is authorized to deploy election inspectors across the state at his discretion and must send an inspector to an area where 15 of its registered voters request one. The demand for inspectors is great this year, reflecting the public's growing intolerance of vote fraud.

Inspectors stationed in a polling place are usually inconspicuous. They merely arbitrate disputes and point out irregularities to election officials. If an election judge or clerk refuses to follow the law, then the inspector will call in specially trained law enforcement officers who will be on standby that day.

To ensure that partisanship and egos do not interfere with elections, they targeted two groups from which to recruit election inspectors. First, he asked attorneys. Lawyers, as officers of the court, are easily trained on applicable election law and can receive continuing legal education credit from the State Bar of Texas by taking our course and working on election day. The second group we targeted are public employees. These dedicated public servants administer the laws of Texas day in and day out in an even-handed, non-partisan fashion. Both groups make excellent inspectors.

The training session an inspector must attend provides a clear, concise presentation of Texas election laws. The Secretary of State's professional legal staff covers the most frequent problems faced on election day and outlines procedures for correcting illegalities at the polling place.

Election inspectors are not poll watchers or other monitors who work for a particular party, candidate or cause. Election inspectors are officers of the state. The inspectors' activities will be coordinated with U.S. Attorneys, the F.B.I. and the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Buy deploying inspectors across the state, it is hoped to avoid fraud through deterrence. For those who would still consider tampering with the democratic process, this warning is offered: Don't Mess With Texas Elections!

Tom Christian Endorsed By Organizations

Tom Christian, candidate for State Representative in District 84, has received the endorsement and financial support from two professional organizations which are important to the Panhandle and South Plains.

The Texas Cattlefeeders Association and their Beef Political Action Committee have sent the Christian campaign a contribution for the November race for the State House in the district which covers 12 counties and stretches from Pampa to Lubbock.

"This association represents people who are very important to this district and I am pleased to receive their help in the campaign," said Christian who said that one of his main campaign issues is protection of the Texas beef industry and increasing jobs by bringing more agricultural processing plants into the area.

Christian also received the official endorsement of the Texas Hospital Association made up of the hospital administrators throughout the state.

Memphis Saves Hospital

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was taken from the Amarillo Globe-News and written by Wendy Hall.

MEMPHIS -- Shouts of "We did it!" echoed around the Memphis courthouse square Saturday as residents celebrated saving Hall Memorial Hospital.

"I knew we were going to make our goal Friday because we only lacked $35,000 and we could finally see the daylight," said Johnny Farnsworth, vice chairman of Hall Memorial Hospital board.

Five weeks ago, in an effort to save their hospital from closing because of financial troubles, residents formed Save the Hospital Task Force and set a goal of $366,000. That goal was reached at about 4 p.m. Saturday, Farnsworth said.

"The money will be used to pay off past due accounts, buy new equipment, and doctor recruitment.

The enthusiasm of county residents is what got the effort started and kept it going, said Joy Smith, Memphis resident. "Everybody from the little bitty to senior citizens pitched in," said Marsha Meacham, another Memphis resident. Travis elementary students collected aluminum cans to help save the hospital, Meacham said.

Animals even got involved in the fight to save the rural hospital. A goat is now a member of the Memphis 300 club because he helped raise more than $1,100, Meacham said.

"The community had a fundraiser where people paid $10 to send the goat to someone and then that person had to pay another $10 to get rid of it."

Task force member Jay Campbell presented a check for $366,000 to Memphis Hospital Board Chairman Pat Godfrey after a victory march around the courthouse square by residents.

During the presentation, Memphis Mayor Homer Tucker told residents that they had accomplished something others didn't think they could.

"We've pulled ourselves up from boot straps and proved that Hall County is alive and well," Tucker said.

Judge not, that ye be not judged.

Senators Form Agriculture Caucus

Senator Bill Sims (D-San Angelo) has initiated a new group within the Texas State Senate designed to help with the needs of Texas second largest industry, agriculture. Along with State Senator Steve Carriker (D-Roby) and about a half-dozen other Senators, Senator Sims created the new grouping response to a growing need to revitalize and diversify the rural economy of the state.

Senator Carriker pointed out the need for continued emphasis on new state initiatives to bring value-added agricultural industry to Texas and also the desire to implement new, more effective pest and predator control programs to benefit Texas agriculture.

Senator Sims, a sheep and goat raiser, and Senator Carriker, a cotton, grain and cattle producer, are the only two members of the 31-member State Senate to derive the majority of their incomes from agriculture.

Former Roaring Springs Resident Wins Grazing Management Award

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was taken from the Lubbock Avalanche Journal. Mr. Bigham is a native of Roaring Springs.

by Kathleen Davis

For longtime Lubbock businessman Verlon Bigham, owning a ranch was an early dream.

A native of the cattle-thick rolling plains at Roaring Springs, Bigham - sitting at the edge of his executive chair in a pewter suit which blends with his hair and glasses - snickered when questioned why he bought a Dickens County ranch in 1961.

"Well, I like the outdoors and livestock," he chuckled. "Absolutely, it is a peaceful diversion to being in the business world at Lubbock. I often leave the office here and tell the employees that I'm going somewhere where they don't talk back."

Peaceful, yes. Diversion, certainly. But away from business? No way, according to district conservationist Charles Morris of Spur.

"Really and truly, you can define Verlon Bigham as a businessman in the finest sense," Morris said. "He is an innovator who is not afraid to try new things. And he knows his records, so when he tries something he has the date to show whether it worked or to what extent."

Bigham's love of the land and masterful management combined with conservation techniques to earn him a 1988 grazing management award from the Society of Range Management Texas Chapter. Bigham, nominated by the Duck Creek Soil and Water Conservation District in Spur, will be honored Friday during the range association's meeting in Kerrville.

Bigham - co-owner of Anderson & Bigham, Inc., Bigham Brothers, Inc. and Anbico Corp. - admits that he is proud of the honor but in typical business fashion explains that he still is working toward a higher goal of supporting 200 cow-calf pairs on his four-section ranch.

"Twenty-five cow units (cow-calf pairs) is an old ranching rule of thumb for what the land will support," said Bigham, whose deep crevice between his eyebrows suggest years of serious thought.

"It has taken a lot of work, a lot of cooperation and a lot of money over the years. But we have shown that you can take a four-section ranch and ran (the number of cattle) what you could run on an eight-section ranch with no work on it."

Bigham - who owns the ranch with his wife, Betty, daughter Beverly Aderholt of Houston, and sons Jerry of San Diego and Don of Lubbock - is close to achieving his goal. He has about doubled the stocking rate from 80 cow-calf pairs in 1961 to 175 pair currently on the 2,500 acre operation.

Shortly after Bigham acquired the original 900 acres of the ranch, he began considering improvements. As the years passed, he acquired additional land, some of which had been planted to crops. The native vegetation at the time was of poor quality, wildlife was scarce and the rangeland was severely infested with undesirable brush and areas subject to severe water erosion.

"The main goals of the Bigham Ranch were ... reduce erosion, improve the carrying capacity, maintain a quality forage stand and improve wildlife populations," wrote conservationist Clay Lindley in recommending Bigham and his ranch managers, Cloyd and Jackie Condon.

One of the first improvements was the establishment of Kleingrass or weeping lovegrass on all the former crop land. The rangeland areas were root-plowed and seeded to a native grass mixture, and cross-fences were systematically built to allow controlled grazing.

"The herd is rotated through a total of 20 pastures. Basically, the ranch is split into four parts, each part containing four to six pastures," Lindley explained. "Each herd is rotated in these pastures based on the utilization of the key grazing species. Alternate or reserve pastures are utilized during periods of drought, integrated brush management, or to facilitate a winter feeding program."

"How To Write Family History" Workshop Offered November 11

Have you ever wanted to write a family or ranch history, your sizzling memoirs, your inspiring battle stories, or grandpa's tall tales, but just didn't know how to start?

A unique workshop, "How to Write Family History," presented by teacher, literacy consultant, and published author Cynthia Buchanan on November 11 will focus on just that for farm and ranch families in this region. Among the points covered will be how to gather information, prepare a short manuscript, and publish it.

The perfect gift for Christmas or a special occasion for spouses, children, graduates, schools, or churches, a short manuscript is not difficult to prepare, if you know how. According to Buchanan, who is currently teaching a course for Texas Tech's Continuing Education Department, "Establishing the family's identity through writing about our heritage is one of the greatest contributions and legacies one can give."

The workshop will be divided into a morning session from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. for beginners and an afternoon session from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. for advanced students, each requiring a fee of $25.00.

Hostess for the workshop will be Marisue Potts, lay historian and writer, and the location will be the Potts' ranch home between Matarador and Floydada. Advance reservations are required and may be made by calling Ms. Buchanan at 806-795-1211 or Mrs. Potts at 806-983-2977.

Author To Teach, Counsel Would-Be Writers In Area

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was taken from the Lubbock Avalanche Journal. Marisue Potts will host Mrs. Buchanan for a workshop on writing family history in Mrs. Potts' home, Nov. 11.

by Ray Westbrook A-J Business Editor

Cynthia Buchanan is looking for people with stories to tell.

Buchanan, a novelist and editor who has resided in New York, Arizona, Mexico and Texas, moved to Lubbock a month ago from Del Rio to establish a literacy consulting business designed to aid prospective authors interested in producing manuscripts, and to continue her own writing.

She will teach a course titled "How to Write Your Family History as Fact or Fiction," through the Division of Continuing Education at Texas Tech which began Oct. 13.

According to Buchanan, a wealth of material is available for those willing to put their own family's story on paper. Such a manuscript can be a unique gift to give to family members, she noted.

Buchanan traces her own lineage to the Parker family in early 19th-century Texas, and notes that her distant-cousin namesake is the storied Cynthia Ann Parker.

She also has roots in Texas culture. "I came back to the West by choice," she said of her writing residency in the book-publishing center of New York City. "I missed having a horse."

Appropriately, her horse is named Quannah, for the famous Comanche chief and the son of Cynthia Ann Parker.

Her interest in the West extends to a particular type of literature which currently is flowing from the Southwest's ranching heritage. It involves poetry primarily, but also prose, and is created by working cowboys. The cultural art form is as uniquely American in the sphere of literature, as jazz is in the field of music.

Buchanan serves on a committee which is planning a major cowboy literary event next year in Lubbock. It will be held June 2-4 at a location to be announced later.

Alvin Davis of the Ranching Heritage Association and Ken Davis of the Texas Tech Department of English are co-chairman. The event will be national in scope.

The program has been titled "Poetry, Songs and Tales of the American Cowboy: A National Symposium and Celebration."

The consulting side of Buchanan's Lubbock-based business will take the form of hourly fees. "In literary consulting, I can edit things for people - not copy editing, but literary content, the shape and narrative, ideas, philosophies and language," she said. (The business may be reached initially at 795-1211).

"My favorite role is that of a teacher. I love helping people, she said. "If they just have an idea of something they have always wanted to write - it can be fiction or nonfiction, a script or a novel. I can work with them as a consultant."

She entered the consulting field after encouraging her mother, Marguerite Noble, to write the novel "Filaree," and was able to get it published by Random House. The book, which is a ranch and family history, has been accorded a Spirit of Arizona Award.

In her Lubbock business, Buchanan plans to assist a variety of people who have a story they would like to tell. She indicated there are more than monetary benefits.

"Vietnam vets who are carrying burdens of their war memories are especially encouraged to not only leave something behind for us all, but to use this recording or writing of their stories as therapeutic," she said.

The family histories that are committed to paper have an unexpected effect upon the families, according to Buchanan.

"Elderly people gain a new meaning for their lives by recording or helping in writing of their memories. It is a great antidote to depression and even to illness to do this. It can be a great healer: it heals people from within and it heals families," she explained.

"God meant us to honor our lives in creative ways," she said.

*Good News!
God Loves You*

I, Joseph E. Simpson, would like to take this opportunity to announce that I am willing to serve another term as your Commissioner as a Write-In Candidate for Precinct 3. I have been asked by several friends as to why I did not seek re-election. I would like to briefly explain to the people of Motley County the reasons. I was in office one month when I had major surgery. With the conditions of the roads, equipment and weather it has not been an easy task. Thank God I have some of these problems behind me now. It was and still is my goal to improve and make the roads of Precinct #3 safer.

We have made some improvements, but yet there is still much more to be done. Now with better equipment and more experience I hope to get more done with less cost to you as a tax payer of Motley County, should the people of Precinct #3 decide to re-elect me to this office.

I have worked in, and served this county all my life, with 30 years service with the Texas Department of Public Transportation, and almost four years as your Commissioner. The encouragement, and cooperation that I have received from the community makes me proud to want to continue this service.

Special thanks to the Department of Public Transportation, Soil Conservation, and Citizens of Motley County. You the people of this County know I make no promises, but I am realistic about my ability, and the ability of this county, and I will continue to do the best I can. Your vote as a write-in candidate and support November 8th will be greatly appreciated.

*Sincerely,
Joseph E. (Gid) Simpson*

Matador Garden Club Hears Recent Program by Master Judge of Irises

Matador Garden Club met October 17 in the home of Mrs. Ted Elliott for a horticulture program on the subject, "Irises: What's New" given by Keith Patton of Matador, a Master Judge in the American Iris Society.

Mrs. Edgar Lee, president, called the meeting to order and conducted business, which included minutes of the previous meeting by the secretary, Mrs. W.N. Pipkin, and discussion of club projects. The club voted to make a donation to the Texas Garden Clubs' project for American Indians and discussed a feasible date for a field trip to Plainview to visit the Llano Estacado Museum. Mrs. Elliott, Parks chairman reported on the work on the area around the Constitution Tree plaque.

Activity for the month is to check bird feeder and bird bath in Pioneer Memorial Park.

Introduced by Mrs. Douglas Meador, program leader, Mr. Patton described in detail how to grow an award winning iris, from rhizomes to petals, the best height for the stalks (or stems), desirable colors and different varieties such as bearded, non-bearded, aril and the Louisiana miniature which, he said, is the newest developed iris, and comprises five species that have been crossed.

"The miniature, which is a bearded iris measures 16 to 25 inches tall, although the best height would be 22 to 24 inches as compared with the usual height of 28 inches for traditional species," he explained. While colors of the petals are important, this is not a vital factor (in judging) he said. "We want substance and style in stems and flowers." He cited the late Mrs. Dovie Brady of Dumont who won the preeminent Knowlton award for developing a beardless iris, "Hoopala" in shades of yellow and maroon.

Keith and his wife, Joan are former members of the Matador Garden Club and were charter members and organizers of the South Plains Iris Society in Lubbock, to which they belonged for 22 years. They also have been elected lifetime members of the Aril Society International. He was a regular judge for 15 years and became Master Judge in 1975.

Predicta Study Club Sees "Flashes of Fashion"

On the evening of October 20, 1988, members of the Predicta Study Club, Roaring Springs, went to the Lubbock Museum for the showing of "Flashes of Fashion". Mrs. Betty Mills, former Curator, now retired and working as a volunteer, presented the show.

Mrs. Mills opened the presentation by showing and narrating a video of a fashion show previously held in Lubbock. The models were chosen to fit the garments as no alterations or adjustments could be made to the original garments. Following the style show the group was taken into the large room where the hundreds of pieces of clothing are stored in closets, consisting of garments for men, women and children with the gamut running from very formal dress and wedding attire to "everyday" clothing worn for work. Viewing these garments brought to mind the hard work and inconveniences the women of that era contended with as Mrs. Mills pointed out the repairs and "patches" made on garments worn during that time. The sewing machine had not been invented at the time some of the clothing was made, and if it had been, many could not have afforded to buy one; consequently most of the clothing was made. The handwork was excellent, and on the garments made for dress or formal wear, the designs were intricate and beautiful with handmade lace. The time consumed making the clothing of that day is inconceivable. Also patterns were hard to come by so that most garments were made by one pattern and by imagination and skill they were changed to suit the occasion.

The oldest dress viewed as made in 1775 of pink silk, and it was still in good

He is Membership Chairman of the AIS Region 17 (Texas) and also Judge Training Chairman of the organization.

Iris shows start in the south and continue east, Patton said -- and he has judged "from El Paso to Hobbs and from Tulsa to Quanah."

He was born in Matador and this has always been his home, with the exception of 12 years when he attended college, served in the Army and spent four years teaching in Big Spring and Iraan (in southwest Texas). He graduated from Matador High School in 1940. He has always been interested in plant life and as a youngster, spent much time in the yard at his home planting and transplanting flowers and shrubs.

Mrs. Patton was a guest with her husband, at the meeting which was attended by members, Artie Wason, Opal Craven, Rachel Patton, Opal Pipkin, Lila Meador, Bessie Jean Williams and Winifred Lee.

repair. Mrs. Mills showed a pretty green silk bonnet with ecru lace made in 1913. The lady who owned the bonnet is 93 years old and is still living in Lubbock. She had told Mrs. Mills that her boyfriend bought the bonnet for her to wear when she rode in his new car.

A 1902 wool flannel dress with a pouter pigeon bodice and ecru lace was shown as a navy blue riding habit fastened in front with leather straps and buckles. It was made in 1870 and worn while riding a side saddle. The group saw a lovely wedding dress and second-day dress contributed by the owner who lived in Vernon, Texas. The lady had worn the dresses in 1891 and had special ordered them from North Carolina.

Mrs. Mills also showed many beautiful handmade quilts, one of which was made in 1863 during the Civil War. It was both pieced and applied by a lady who had made it for her step-son who was going away to war. The quilt depicted a story of his going away, showing the home where the family lived, the trees, barns, fences, shrubs, birds flying around and the family telling him goodbye as he rode away, dressed in his uniform, followed by his pet dog. The step-son died not long after returning home from the war so the mother gave the quilt to her son. It was stolen in 1890. The family sent out messages asking for the quilt to be returned but heard nothing for many weeks, but one day when the son was riding in the pasture he found the quilt draped on a bush. The cows had chewed on one side, leaving brown spots, but otherwise the quilt was in good shape.

Those attending "Flashes of Fashion" were Lee Peacock, Darlene Fletcher, Odessa Mullins, guest Beth Hinson, all of Roaring Springs, and L.V. Damron of Matador.

Santa Rosa District Workshop of Texas FWC Held in Paducah

The fall workshop of Santa Rosa District, GFWC Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, held October 15 in Paducah, was attended by six members of El Progreso Club, Matador. Hostess club was the 1923 Study Club of Paducah.

Theme of the meeting was "A.B.C.'s of Education," and two workshops were in progress in morning and afternoon sessions, one on Education and the other on Reporting.

Two El Progreso Club members, Mrs. Harold (Grace) Campbell and Mrs. Robert (JoAnn) Dickson participated in the day-long program of activities. Mrs. Campbell was luncheon speaker. Her subject was "Education and the Constitution," and the address was enthusiastically acclaimed. Mrs. Campbell is well known in federated club work, as she is a past president of Santa Rosa District, and is currently serving as a state trustee in TFWC. Fear of Nuclear War A Top Concern Of Youth

Fear of Nuclear War ranks among the top three concerns of young people worldwide, according to the October issue of Texas Medicine.

Studies show concern about nuclear holocaust does not appear to adversely affect the development or behavior of young people. However, adults should educate young people about the facts and encourage an open exchange on nuclear fears, the article reports.

Younger teens and females appear to be the most worried, writes Dr. John M. Goldenring, assistant professor of pediatrics, adolescent and preventive medicine, New York Medical College, Valhalla, NY.

Dr. Goldenring's conclusions stem from a review of studies similar to the ones he and his colleagues first began in 1983. "So far, concern about nuclear war has been second or third in all European and North American countries studied...In addition, it has been reported as the number one concern in Sweden and the Soviet Union," claims the author.

"From 10 to 12 percent are very worried and even dream about nuclear war," according to the official journal of the Texas Medical Association.

Dr. Goldenring writes, "...the most worried young people also report that they talk more with their parents, other adults, and their own peers about the nuclear issue than do young people who say they are not worried." He concludes that sharing concern is very useful and explains why young people may feel optimistic about the future despite being quite worried about it.

Very few respondents said that they themselves can have any effect on the future of nuclear weapons. Dr. Goldenring surmises this attitude may be an outgrowth of increasing political cynicism among adults. "This sense of powerlessness is antithetical to the democratic process. It also represents a potential danger to young people who may, as a result, retreat from appropriate anxiety with a positive outlook, into denial or despair," he writes.

Adults should recognize that anxiety among young people about nuclear war is legitimate, but that it must be dealt with constructively. "Conflict resolutions" curricula could help teach young people how to listen and communicate more effectively and to solve day-to-day problems. "Such curricula are long overdue and urgently needed...to help our young people move in a positive fashion into the 21st century," concludes Dr. Goldenring.

The Missing Tree

Sometime during the past 24 hours, someone stole my ficus tree. The little tree stood proudly on our front porch all summer, loving the dry heat that caused its less sturdy cousins to wither and wilt.

I would have much preferred the thief take my hibiscus plant with its glorious red-orange blossoms and full, deep-green foliage because it held no special place in my heart.

Mind you, I am not one to display an inordinate degree of sentimentality over inanimate objects, especially those that can be replaced.

I don't mind, for example, when my daughter and her friends make a ship out of the couch, strewn pillows all over the living room.

But I felt differently about my little tree.

This strong little ficus was growing from a cutting I had nurtured for more than a year. Its mother, too tall to be taken through the doorway last year for her annual trek outside, had to be pruned.

It grew for several months in water before her roots became strong enough for an easy transition to the soil. The little tree rarely lost a leaf, and the summer's warmth brought a tremendous spurt of growth.

Frequently I adjusted the tree to her summer home, turning it so that each angle could benefit from the sunlight and so that its leafy spine could grow straight and tall.

Because my first effort was so successful, I took many more cuttings from the mother plant last spring, planning to have them ready for pots by Christmas. I would decorate them with red bows and give them to my friends.

Inexplicably, all but one of the new cuttings died—and that one is quite puny. This failure just proved to me the strength of that little tree.

I tried to comfort myself about the theft by noting how things could be worse.

"Sure glad we didn't set the baby out for some fresh air," I remarked to my husband.

It doesn't really work though. Instead, my thoughts have settled on the thief.

My husband attributed the deed to "some kid," presumably the same unidentified teen-ager who is blamed for any mischief that occurs in the neighborhood.

I prefer to think otherwise. I believe the culprit was someone who had another purpose for being on our porch. There was a man selling oranges here yesterday, and we receive two newspapers each morning.

I prefer to think that the person who took my little ficus tree really wanted it. I prefer to believe that the thief saw that little tree and just had to have it.

After all, that would mean my little tree might continue to receive proper care.

Please, Mr. Thief, water regularly and fertilize once a month. ll planning stages of 911 for Motley County. The Council passed this resolution.

Tim Pierce of SPAG proposed a plan they have to contract to oversee the day-to-day operation of the City's Economic Development Revolving Loan Fund, and to help advise and relieve the Council of the burden of maintaining the loan program.

The Council liked the plan but chose to table the decision and discuss it further.

Anna reported some citizens wanted to know why the City didn't have a night-watchman. The Councilmen stated that not having a nightwatchman had saved the City money. There are no funds for this unless they charged the citizens extra.

Anna reported she had received 6 responses on the sewing factory survey and would run the ad one more week.

Anna reported it was going to cost the City $140 to repair the old typewriter. A new Smith-Corono could be purchased for $275. The Council elected to purchase the new one.

Anna had a request and estimate from James May to repair the city house. After a discussion, the Council elected to table this for now.

Johnney Turner, Peck Thompson and Rickey Lawrence, representing the Old Settlers Association, were in attendance to ask why, after 65 years, the City sent them a water bill for the water hauled by the Fire Department. They had always paid the Fire Department for the water and hauling.

Thacker explained that a year ago the City had to make the decision that all water would have to be charged for, to help the Water System to run in the black.

Mr. Turner also asked the City if they had a building ordinance. He stated that the Old Settlers Assn. may build a new concession stand in the future.

Thacker explained they did now have an ordinance, but it was a standard, as in other cities, for them to come into the City Hall to get the specifications and permit.

Thacker asked if there had been a septic tank put in recently at the Assembly of God Church. He stated that there is now an ordinance against putting in a septic tank in the City limits. After discussion, the Mayor was sure there was no sewer line running close enough to the Church to hook up, so it was legal until a line was run.

The Council reviewed and accepted the 1988-89 Budget plan.

The City had been asked if they would charge a house a "vacation" charge if occupants were there only part time. Council elected to charge minimum rate or cut it off.

Anna reminded the Council of the Workshops on Grants on Tuesday, November 22 at 7:00 p.m.

Anna reported that the Fire Dept. Inspector had inspected the Cafe and that it needed the proper Ansel Equipment installed.

Meeting adjourned.

LIONS CLUB

The Matador Lions Club met November 1, 1988 in the Methodist Fellowship Hall for a delicious meal prepared by Lion Walter Jones and Mrs. Jones.

Following the meal, the President Jesse Turner gave a report of the directors meeting, December 3, Santa Clause will arrive in Matador for his annual visit, and Committees will be named next meeting.

This year the Lions Club will have a give away of $50, $30, $20 at a drawing on December 3 at 1:00 p.m. These tickets will be available in the local businesses who participate, December 1, 2 and 3.

Coach Don Ewing introduced Leigh Barton was a guest of Lions Queen Joely Ewing. Leigh is a Regional Qualifier for the Cross Country Race, Saturday, November 3 in Lubbock.

The program was brought to the Lions by the Motley County Game Warden Ronnie Vandiver, who explained the new and old hunting regulations. One of the new laws passed this year by the legislature is if a hunter is caught killing an animal illegally, they will not only be fined but also will pay a fee of Civil Restitution for the animal killed illegally. He explained that every animal from lizards and rattlesnakes to Eagles have a value price and will be charged according to their replacement value.

Vandiver also went over the law stating that every person born after September 2, 1971, would have to take a Hunter Education Course and pass before they would be a legal hunter. Texas is the last state to mandate this law.

The Game Warden had just received a letter stating a new law for hunters going to Mexico to hunt, would now have a Mexican hunting guide or pay a $35,000 fine.

Meeting adjourned.

The Lord is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him.
