News Behind The News Whirligig

WASHINGTON By GEORGE DURNO

A year ago—even six months ago
—our state department officials always whited apprehensively for the diplomatic mail pouches from the Far East to arrive. They had visions of Japan and Russia flying at each other's throats any minute. Burface and sub-surface developments were pointing toward imminent trouble.

Our stategmen are now breathing more easily. Latest confidential dispatches indicate the war clouds have lifted.

Suiden completion of Russia's sale of the Chinese Eastern railroad, over which Tokyo and Moseow had been haggling for fifteen months, did the trick.

For General Mitchell goes on to say that the loss of the Akron reflects on the competence of the navy's lighter-than-air experts rather than on of the capabilities of the dirigible itself. GEN. MITCHELL AGAIN
GIVES US THOUGHT

You can always count on Gen.
William E. Mitchell to say something that will start an argument.
His most recent outburst—in which he told the Federal Aviation commission, among other things, that the United States should proceed to build at least 50 dirigibles along the lines of the Macon—ought to provoke discussion that will last for many days.

Laying aside the general's fondmess for saying startling things just to roll the tempers of military bigwigs, it ought to be added that where aviation is concerned he has a pretty good knowledge of what he is talking about.

That is to say that, if General Mitchell still be the hums for any days.

Tent is to say that, if General Mitchell still be the hums for many again.

THE. WILD DUCK HAS NO HOME

HAVE you ever felt a sudden leaping of the heart when ducks come rushing through the wrack of a northeast storm? . . . or a strange yearning at the sound of their babbling high against the Autumn moon? Moving southward . . . moving to new feeding grounds . . . free in the vast spaces that stretch from the Arctic to the Equatorial Zone!

But the wild duck has no home. And your instinctive feeling at the sound of his rushing movement is not so much a desire to follow him away as it is to bag him . . . to bring him to pot, as the keen hunger of autumn days warns you the time has come to prepare for Winter.

The wild duck is not so free as man. Hunted from marshland and bay, he is driven from one precarious resting place to another, forever on the move, forever in danger.

In Autumn the instinct of man is to dig in. It is primitive instinct, for the chief enemies of man are the forces of nature. He survives only because he is foresighted. He has the ability and the means to look ahead and prepare for storms.

Instead of being forced forth to search the world for the things we need, the world brings us its best offerings.
