Traffic Deaths Due To Reach New High

day traffic deaths in the nation during 1937 would approximate 40,000 an all-time high.

Ever mounting, the traffle toll was 37,800 in 1936, and 37,000 in 1935, the council said.

During the first 11 months of 1937 traffic deaths numbered 35,610, a six per cent increase over the toll in the corresponding period of 1936.

On a mileage basis, the council reported, there has been "no actual increase in the traffic death rate." Gasoline consumption, the means of estimating mileage, increased six per cent, approximately the same as traffic deaths for the 11-month period.

There were 4,290 persons killed in December, 1936. Traffic deaths during the current month would have to show a 50 per cent reduction to keep the year's total as low as that in 1936. The council said statistics showed such a decrease was "out of the question." Everett, Wash, with a population of 31,100, was the largest city in the nation having no traffic deaths for the first 11 months of 1937.

Ickes" Talk Awaited Denunciation of monopolies Sun-day by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson has led to speculation that the president would touch on the subject in his message congress next Monday. Mr.

Roosevelt said he probably would deliver the message in person. Observers took particular note of Secretary Ickes' forthcoming speech (over an NBC network Thursday at 8 p. m., Central Standard Time) because it follows Jackson's address so closely. Several administration supporters, like Jackson, have been blaming monopolies for the business recession. Senator Norris, in his demand for a lobbying inquiry, said that "if anybody is going to do anything about the business recession, it will have to be the president, because business won't." Utility and other large corpora
