Concluding Chapters In Story About Life And Times Of Mrs Susan Wilbanks

WORLD WAR I

We had two sons in service for their country. We took them to Guymon where they entrained for camp. Henry was soon on board a troop ship bound for France. He saw many of his comrades buried at sea as a result of the great flu epidemic. Lawrence was stationed at Austin for the duration and was very ill with the dreaded flu. Each day I breathed a prayer for my boys' safe return. HOME FRONT

We formed a home front by buying Liberty Bonds and working short handed to produce good crops of grain and cattle. We were rationed on flour, sugar, and meal, and felt no hardship in our war effort. The main thing was to get the boys home again as soon as possible.

The girls pitched in. They learned to start the Model-T without eranking it. One, on horseback, pulled the car off by a lariat rope tied to the saddle horn. Another steered. Arriving at Old Hansford for supplies, they learned to park the car on a sandy knoll in front of S. B Hale's Drug Store When we were ready to go home. Mr. Hale came out and helped the girls push the car off the knoll to start it.

During severe cold spells in the winter, we hauled cake to the cattle. We lost many of our cows during the winter of 1918. The girls helped feed the cattle and tail up the weak ones. They helped Floyd skin the dead cows and store the hides for sale later.

It was a great day for us when the war ended and our boys were safely home again. Our hearts were filled with thanksgiving. The boys took up again where they left off and it was not long, it seemed, until life slipped again into the normal groove. They bought a new threshing machine and harvested some good crops at home and for as many neighbors as possible.

OUR GIRLS GROW UP Without realizing it perhaps, our children were grown up. The boys were home from the service and our girls were attracting beaux. Spray wanted to attend the races at Dalhart with a boy friend and we gave her permission. She was striken suddenly ill with appendicitis on the trip and was rushed to a hospital. When the message came on the telephone, Faye and I were alone at Goodwell. I asked a neighbor, Frank Sewell, to take me to my girl. His car stailed at Texhoma and the banker there, took Faye and I to Dalhart. Dr. Dawson operated on Spray early the next morning and she made a splendid SPRAY MARRIES Bill and Denzil Bradford owned the telephone company at Old Hansford. They were recently home from the war. Spray and Bill became sweethearts. I was not surprised when the question of marriage came our way. They were married at Perryton, Texas, and lived for a short time at Old Hansford.

As soon as the Santa Fe Railroad finished the extension from Shattuck, Oklahoma, Old Hansford started moving to the new townsite. Spray was the first woman resident of Spearman. They lived in their telephone office building.

They also owned the first radio in Spearman, and spray often laughs as she relates the early broadcasts. The first program they received was a broadcast from the Missouri State Penitentiary! Their son Glen, now thirty seven years old & recently married was our first grandchild. Spray and Bill moved to Tulsa in the thirties. editors not: Bill and Denzil Bradford had a telephone office at Texhoma before world War I. After returning from overseas duty, Bill worked for the Bell Telephone Co. at Tulsa. Okla. the brothers bought the Telephone Co. at Hansford. When the old town moved to Spearman, they moved the telephone office. This was the first building in the new town, and Spray was "the first woman" and the only one for some time, to live at the new townsite. They also leased S. B. Hale's Theatre and operated it for a year or so. In about 1926 Bill and Denzil sold the telephone company to Tom Finley. Tom Finley was also the first owner and operator of a Theatre in Hansford County. It was in this theatre that the three redheaded Morton Sisters Held an evangelistic meeting. Hundreds of people attended. After the show, the religious services were held; and after these services, all seats were removed and dances were held every Saturday night. This building burn-

NEW HOME IN TOWN For several years Floyd bought lumber at Texhoma while freighting. He stored it under the house on the farm. When the new town site was opened up he bought lots for a future home in town, Whei Old Hansford moved to Spearman our men folk stayed in the new town so much that I was often left alone on the farm. I was glad when Floyd decided to build our new home.

Our home was built of concrete blocks decorated by broken segments of stone protruding from the cement. The rocks were hauled from the hills on the Palo Duro creek on the Steele ranch. They run a certain quota of concrete blocks daily until enough were made for the house. When the blocks were finished Floyd hired Tom Kerr, Amarillo contractor, to build the home. When the house was finished, it contained four bedroms, a huge living room, large kitchen and bathroom. It had a lovely porch on two sides that formed an L shape French windows opened onto the porch, and were a favorite with the youngg folks at the parties whom I suppose liked to sit in them and hold hands!

I was more thrilled over my beautiful floor in the living room than anything about the house. I think. It was made of beautiful oak in a pattern that started in a snall square in the center and laid outward around the square. Each time I looked at it I think I remembered our first home on the plains and how I sewed cotton sacks together and covered the dirt floor of our dugout.

HOUSE_WARMING Floyd invited the local young people and everyone else who wanted to come, to our new home for a house warming. It was the custom to dance. I could hardley stand to think of anyone dancing on my new floor and did not relish the thought at all.

The night of the dance was cold and foggy. The streets were unpayed. The men lined the walls of my new house and rested their feet against the new paint. The next I wept to see the huined walls. Thise made Floyd furious The next week he announced another dance. I was surprised and hurt but he offered no explanation (It was his custom to try to please me).

When our house was filled again with delighted merry makers, Floyd got down his old fidddle and told Faye that he wanted her to second for him on the piano. Jim Taylor and Clem Pierce usually furnished the music for local dances at that time, and this act was another surprise but I was still in for more. He then announced "Boys, this dance will cost you one dollar per couple." He put his hat on the table and the boys stepped forward and put their money in the hat. They danced to his music as happily as if it were on the house. At midnight I served the usual cake and coffee and sandwiches. In the wee hours of the morning Floyd played "Home Sweet Home" our guests dispersed. Floyd handed me the hatful of money and said, "New Susan, get your walls repainted'. Then I understood that his surprises were just his way of getting even with the boys for ruining my walls. I think the young folk just thought that "Mr. Wilbanks just wanted to show them all that he could still fiddle". I could not help but see too that times and people were changing, and all for the better. The young people behaved well at our dances. The local boys looked up the boys who were new in our locality and if they were what they considered the right sort, took them around to where the girls were seated an introduced them. I never cared much for dancing when I was a girl, but did go to the square dances once in awhile.

I remember a dance long ago that was being disrupted by a cowboy who had too much to drink and kept velling "Bootee. bootee-who'se got the bootees?" Everyone was getting tired of him and his noisy yelling. Finally. Floyd laid down his fiddle and pulled out his gun and shot into the rafters. After the smoke cleared away, the cowpoke was nowhere to be found and everyone had a big laugh at Floyd, when he said disgustingly "Now, who'se got the bootees"? I was surprised by a visit of my brother from Idaho as we were finishing the house. He arrived in time to help us move in and help clean up about the place He liked the country and people very much, and planned to move to the Panhandle later. He returned another year and helred during harvest His wife died and his plans of moving to Texas. were changed.

LAWRENCE MARRIES Not long after we moved into town Lawrence brought home a lovely bride from Oklahoma. He and Vires lived on the old home stead for many years before moving into Spearman where they now have a lovely home. Their wedding was the second in my family. Our children, like fled, glings leaving the rest, were soon trying their wings in a life of their own.

FAYE MARRIES I was reluctant to see the change in Faye. She was our tom-boy and had led us a merry chase on the farm with her escapades. We could not keep her off the horses. She rode well and usually like the wind. She learned to swoop from the saddle and pick prairie flowers. In winter, she was often seen forcing her saddle horse onto the ice of the frozen lakes in our neighborhood. I tried to keep her long golden hair braided and a sunbonnet on her head but she discarded the bonnet when out of sight and her hair was soon streaming in the wind as she raced over the prairie.

Years later, on a visit to Idaho; my mother talked her into dving her hair black. It was the rage then to dye one's hair. The result was very disappointing, and we were glad when the black turned to gold again.

I was surprised when she fell in love and could hardly believe it, until furnished with what I thought was proof. Ike had a convertible car and was taking care of five sections of his father's land near Morse, Texas. It's his car, I thought. One day however, he came to call on her and there was no top on his car, FI thought. convertible. The goats on the farm ate the top off, Faye did not seem to notice the change. I realized that this courtship was going to be different, and my theory proved correct. They were married in our home by County Judge King, not long after that.

They have operated cafes different towns. They farmed for several years during the depression. Later, in Amarillo, they operated a cafe and an apartment building. While they were running a cafe in Dalhart during the war they made a special effort to make the serice men stationed at the air base feel at home in their place. A bomber fell near the air base and their place swarmed with air men. It was during the win-

Later the air base surprised them by electing Fave SWEE-HEART OF THE BASE A special car took her to the base and as she entered the auditorium a cry went up "Here comes our Faye... She was given a standing ovation.

HENRY MARRIES Before World War H. Henry married Beatrice Walker from Perryton, Texas. He moved to Dumas on two sections of farm land purchased for fifteen dollars per acre. He has prospered in Moore County, and has three lovely children. The eldest, a son, has presented me with a great granddaughter, my first great grandchild. He has a daughter Jane, and another son whom they named after my hus-hand Floyd. Needless to say, this pledsed me greatly.

DUST STORMS There was not much prairie left when Spearman was built. What there was left soon disappeared altogether. The land was under cultivation field to field. The thirties were ushered in with poor yields and poor prices for our wheat. Drouth caused the barren fields to blow. It was a crucial test of our faith in the land that we first viewed as an ocean of billowing grass with myriads of wild prairie flowers growing abundantly in Springtime. We had torn the lush roots from the soil to scoop out a home. Now it was the scene of swirling, blinding dust that stung our faces and sifted into our homes like flour. We planted but did not reap. If the seed germinated, the tender blades were soon blackened and curled by the lashing dust.

CLOUDS APPEAR

War clouds loomed on the horizon giant-like. Italy was in Ethiopia, threatening the peace of the world and Hitler was parading his Storm Troops and casting hungry eyes about for more territory. Unemployment swamped our nation. The government helped out by creating the CCC and WPA.

We rented our spare bedrooms and served special dinners at the request of numerous friends and business men. It was a our children were gone except our old bachelor son, Hiram and Tom Moon. (the boy who came to work for us and stayed fifty-three years, until he died).

Rain clouds also came again, and our land again produced bountifully. Good yields and good prices helped erase the horrors of the dust storms.

On the heels of prosperity came another World War-werse than the first-if possible WORLD WAR II

As in World War I, we bought war bonds to help in the war effort. Our daughter. Spray, and son Glen, worked for Douglas Aircraft at Tulsa, Oklahoma, Later, during the war, Glen served thirty-six months in the Air Corps. Luckily, good crops were harvested over the nation. We were rationed on meat, sugar shoes and tires and a few other items. Some things were scarce, too, but on the whole no one suffered any real hardship, Many of our women worked in factories and Ordnance Plants to help win the war. Some of our friends and neighbors' sons died on foreign battlefields. We were thankful when Global victories brought Peace again to the world. Please God that it shall be pre-

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY Floyd and I celebrated our fiftieth anniversary March 17, 1940. A reception was held in our home in Spearman. Several hundred people came from over the Golden Spread to offer their congratulations. Bill Miller surprised us having the High School Band march from the school and play 'Let Me Call You Sweetheart. on our front lawn. It pleased us very much and Floyd invited the whole hand in to sample the wedding cake and punch. J. D. Wilbanks, our nephew, and Bruce Sheets, beloved local druggist, came in the afternoon and made pictures of us.

it was gala day for us with all our children home and the many old friends and neighbors. A lovely dinner was prepared and served, the house to overflow with flowers and gifts.

I remember a day long ago when I stood before the Minister with my handsome young. Lochinvar, and said "I do". meant it for life. I remembered still, the mischievous gleam in his eyes as he lifted them to the low hanging sun as we rode in the back of the wagon with our folks to church in the late afternoon.

In the fall, after our Golden Wedding Anniversary, Floyd suffered a slight stroke. His health declined until he had a massive stroke that took his life, November 23, 1942. My family helped me to adjust to my great loss and the change it brought in my life by their love and unselfish devotion. They have all made me feel loved and wanted. They spoil me, perhaps, but I repeat,

GOODBYES

My sister, Mollie Selle, twice paid me a visit at my home in Spearman, Once, several years before Floyd's death, and once afterwards. During her last visit I can't forget how thrilled she was when Faye killed a Coyote. We took her in the car with us to visit Henry and family near Dumas. A coyote ran across an open field and Faye gave chase in the car and shot it with a 22 rifle. Sister Mollie was as thrilled as if she had shot it herself.

When her visit was concluded, we took her to the air terminal in Amarillo. Before entering the piane, she turned and waved at me. "This is the last time" I thought as I returned her goodbye and watched while the plane roared down the runway, arose and soared away into the blue nothingness. I remembered the time in Bosque County when the covered wagon pulled away from the old homestead, taking my mother and family away. I experienced the same feeling of loss and loneliness. I was glad when Faye broke my chain of thoughts by saying, "Come on Mamma, lets get home before dark." Sister Mollie died several years later. I never saw her again

New trends are developed in almost every phase of life. Farming has changed in Hansford County and for the better. The good water, from great depth, that we were so fortunate to possess in the beginning, is now channeled for irrigation purposes. Four hundred acres on the home place are irrigated now with pumps operated by natural gas pumped across the road from a gas-line.

An oil well was drilled on our farm. Unlike our son, Virgil, who got a producer on his place, our well was plugged up as a dry hole.

The question was once bandied among old friends, "what would you buy first, if you struck oil?" One old friend from a wooded country, said, "I want a new She forgot that an axe was not necessary in our country to chop cow chips.

I don't have many needs any more, and haven't the slightest idea what I would buy first, like we used to joke about. But, like those who live in hopes, I think it would be fun to just stick around for awhile and see what happens next in our ever changing world-maybe my next oil well won't be a dry hole.

THE END PRAIRIE PICTURES I stood at the close of a winter's day

And watched the sun in majesty lower away Saw clouds, fleecy and white Turn from rose to pink Then mauve, and purple night,

I saw the moon in it's glory of silvery light Cast soft beams across prairie and lake

And listened to a mocking Sing a love song to it's mate,

I gathered prairie flowers in spring Of many kinds and hues

From off the grassy prairie Where I dwelt with you.

Pictures that no artist's hand can paint Linger with me still. Of white faced cattle beside a lake And a wild stallion on a hill. Written for and dedicated to Aunt Susan, who knew and loved the prairie.
