Governor Terms Floggings In Cotton Strike As 'Propaganda'

Three Tell Of Being Beaten In Arkansas

Appeal Directed To FD To Intervene In Farm Workers Dispute

MEMPHIS, June 17. (AP)—Governor J. M. Fulton charged "propaganda" against cotton chopper strike sympathizers today in the purported East Arkansas flogging cases.

Sheriff Howard Curlin announced that Frank Weems, negro sharecropper, reported dead from a beating, was alive. A woman and a minister were flogged as they were going to preach the "funeral" for the black.

There were reports of a third flogging in the area, and an appeal was directed to President Roosevelt to intervene in the cotton workers' dispute. Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for president, sent the request to Mr. Roosevelt after Miss Willie Sue Blagden, 29, of Memphis, and Rev. Claude G. Williams, 41, of Little Rock, told of being beaten Monday night by a band of six men. They were the two en route to Weems' "funeral." They said they were accosted by the floggers before they reached their destination. The beating occurred near Earle, Ark.

Third Victim The third alleged victim, Roy Morelock, 35, Parkin, Ark., sharecropper acting as runner for strike leaders, told Memphis police he was beaten by several men who used their fists and "a small sledge hammer."

Morelock said he was seized by the floggers after a deputy sheriff gave him 15 minutes Monday night to get out of Earle. He said he "escaped" and made his way to Memphis.

Sheriff Curlin of Crittenden county, in which Earle is located, said a "wide open" investigation would be held if the victims of the reported floggings will appear there and make a formal complaint.

Telegram Thomas, in his telegram to the president from New York, said: "You have just come from Arkansas where you eulogized the state and its leaders, especially Senator Robinson, without reference to peonage, mob law and murder."

"I appeal to you, not only as president of the United States, but as head of a great political party, to act in this monstrous perversion of everything decent in the American tradition."

Thomas signed the communication as chairman of the emergency committee for relief of strikers.

Assails GOP Farm Plank

Chester Davis Says Proposals Would Kill Foreign Trade

MEMPHIS, June 17. (AP)—Chester Davis, retiring farm administrator, in addressing the cotton interests of the South in a speech before the chamber of commerce here, today attacked two proposals in the farm plank of the republican platform.

He said if enacted, these policies would "throttle international trade between the United States and the rest of the world."

He declared "competitive agricultural products can come into this country only if domestic prices are higher than world prices by more than the amount of existing tariffs."

Britain Would End Sanctions Against Italy

Shift In Foreign Policy Results In Bitter Controversy

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press) LONDON, June 17.—A mid-controversy on the merits of a shift in foreign policy, the cabinet prepared today to face the house of commons Thursday and defend its decision to support abolition of league sanctions against Italy.

The cabinet was to meet formally today to ratify the recommendations of its foreign affairs committee, which has voted against continuing sanctions.

It will discuss the defense of its new policy to be made by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who has agreed to hours of common debate on foreign affairs Thursday.

The policy shift made Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and his government target for bitter attacks.

While the powerful Rothermere press demanded Eden's resignation from the cabinet, Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, president of the league of nations union, said the cabinet's readiness to abandon sanctions is "midsummer madness." He spoke in the presence of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Cecil admitted France supports the policy shift.

Bonus Money Soon To Be In Circulation

More Than $100,000 In Bonds Certified For Exchange For Cash

Considerably more than $100,000 cash will be put into circulation in Big Spring within a short time, probably the most of it this week. The money will be that paid as the government's bonus to ex-soldiers who are cashing their "baby" bonds sent out as direct payment of the adjusted service certificates.

Postmaster Nat Shick said Wednesday that in two days he had certified a total of 2,159 bonds of $50 denominations, for dispatch to Dallas where the exchange for government checks is made. These bonds represent a total of $107,950. Monday, Shick certified $70,250 in bonds, and added $37,700.

Prompt Return The postmaster was informed that the checks would be mailed back from Dallas in short order. Possibly, some of those mailed Monday could reach Big Spring this afternoon. Veterans thus were expected to have cash this week to invest, pay debts and make purchases. It was the general opinion that the new money would be a potent stimulus to trade.

Not all the veterans' bonds have been received. On Monday, more than 600 were delivered, but the mail dwindled the two following days, and postal officials expected the bonds to come in regularly for a time in the volume of about 20 a day.

Bonds Are Flowing In For Conversion Into Cash

WASHINGTON, June 17 (UP)—The flow of nearly $2,000,000,000 in soldiers' bonus bonds sent out Monday started back to the treasury today for conversion into cash. Reports from throughout the United States indicated a large percentage of the bonds, perhaps a majority, would be converted by the $518,000 World War veterans.

Long lines formed at post offices and banks throughout the nation as veterans certified their bonds for conversion into treasury checks, which may be cashed immediately. Veterans will begin receiving these checks this week.

The treasury was ready to make the change as rapidly as possible. Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., said, however, no data was available to indicate the percentage of bonds to be offered for cash. He expected it to be high.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, chief of the veterans' administration, joined with other officials in urging veterans to hold their bonds until date of maturity, June 15, 1945.

Truckers To Meet Tonight

County Transportation Association Will Be Formed Here

Truck drivers and others interested in bus and truck transportation in the district court room tonight at 8:30 o'clock to organize the Howard County Motor Transportation association.

Those interested in trucking problems cite figures furnished by Col. E. O. Thompson showing that during 1935 there were not more than a half-dozen deaths resulting from operation of passenger buses and motor trucks for hire over the highways of Texas.

There are 200,000 miles of road in Texas, of which 21,000 are highways in the state designated systems and upon which operate 5,000 commercial trucks and 1,500 passenger buses under regulation of the commission.

Truckers are seeking to better their standing and lessen their problems by securing better representation at Austin.

Dam Project Is Discussed Before Lions

Penrose Metcalfe Tells Of Activities In Colorado River Program

A discussion of the Colorado river dam project, the work completed and an outline of its present status, was given at the regular weekly session of the Lions club today by Penrose Metcalfe, state representative from the 91st district.

Metcalfe is chairman of the Colorado River Authority which was appointed by the governor to set up an irrigation and flood control system along the Colorado. The members served without pay. Metcalfe stated. He said the dam project would provide irrigation for Coke, Tom Green and Runnels counties.

Under the same project will be the creation of a lake in northern Coke and southern Mitchell counties, where flood waters will be impounded. It will have a shore line of almost 100 miles, Metcalfe said, and should provide a splendid source of recreation for West Texans.

Application was made for $6,200,000 for the Colorado river dam project and it has been passed on favorably by all examining groups. It lacks only congressional appropriation of funds, Metcalfe pointed out.

Program chairman for the day was Clyde Waits. Several accordion numbers were rendered by Miss Broughton.

Cecil Collins presided in the absence of Joe Pickle, president. R. M. and J. R. Parks left Wednesday for a trip to Amarillo and Dallas.

Candidates At Coahoma

Good Crowd Hears Aspirants Present Claims For Election

Candidates for district and county offices, appearing in another of their series of "political rallies" being held in various communities of the county, found themselves before the largest audience to date, at a meeting held Tuesday evening at Coahoma. Approximately 200 persons heard 30 aspirants to office present their claims.

The speaking followed an ice cream supper. Although there are continued indications that the campaign in some contests is gathering heat, anyone expecting "fireworks" in the Coahoma talks was disappointed. Candidates uniformly steered clear of personalities, each presenting his own qualifications for the office he is seeking.

Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo, candidate for the legislature from the 91st district, was a "newcomer" at the Tuesday night meeting. Metcalfe was lead-off man, speaking first. Without an opponent in the race, he spoke only briefly, promising that he would work for better collection of present state taxes before aiding in enactment of more revenue bills.

Candidates for other district offices—district attorney and district clerk—followed Metcalfe. Then those seeking the sheriff's and county judge's offices spoke, followed by candidates for the commissionerships and other posts.

Observers have kept an eye on the judge's race, seeing it as the "hottest" potentially in the year's local campaign. The three candidates Tuesday night, however, limited their remarks to their own platforms. Judge J. S. Garlington reviewed his record for the present term; H. R. Dehenport spoke of his wish to aid in building lateral roads, in administration of the soil conservation act; and Charlie Sullivan presented his legal training as a basis of qualification for the judge's office.

July Fourth Event Being Publicized

Advertising Sent Out To Invite West Texans To Celebration

A bombardment of publicity is getting under way this week, in an endeavor to bring West Texans to Big Spring on July Fourth for the city's first annual sports and water carnival.

Circulars advertising the event and listing features of the program were being mailed throughout the area; news stories and pictures were going out to newspapers, and chamber of commerce representatives were doing advertising work in other towns.

W. T. Strange, chamber of commerce manager, was in Lubbock and Lamesa the first of the week to advertise the Independence Day celebrations here. Last Saturday he and Bob Schermerhorn made a similar mission to Fort Stockton.

Engaged for performances during the celebration are "Happy Jack" Darling and his wife, who put on a rural comic act in the characters of Hiram and Miranda Darling was here this week and said he would assist in advertising the Big Spring show at engagements he has between now and July Fourth. These include dates at Menard, Ozona and Midland.

The Independence Day program will include golf and tennis tournament, softball play, croquet tournament, pistol and gun shoot, swimming and diving contests, baseball, a political rally, old timers reunion and fiddlers' contest; a bathing revue in which "Miss West Texas" will be selected, and a junior bathing revue to name "Miss West Texas of Tomorrow."

Bill Carries Fund For Next Year's Relief

Compromise On Tax Plan Is Near; Adjournment Prospects Brighter

WASHINGTON, June 17. (AP)—Final agreement was reached today by congressional conferees on the $2,370,000,000 deficiency bill carrying next year's relief appropriations.

Two items must yet be voted on by the house, including the public works program and the Florida canal project.

With tax bill conferees swinging toward a speedy agreement on that key measure, congress was lining up its program for adjournment Saturday.

Compromise Near A revised corporation tax proposal advanced by senate democrats, was viewed with general favor, and it was believed a compromise agreement might be reached some time today.

Senate-house conferees terminated a three hour night session last night without a solution for their deep-set differences over the controversial tax bill but gave renewed intimations that they were approaching a break in a long deadlock.

Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the house conferees emerged from the meeting with this word to reporters: "I think we are going to reach an agreement. I don't know how or when, but I think we will do it in a day or two."

Some hints were dropped after the conference that a number of participants were interested—as representing a possible meeting ground—in the results of a revision of rates in a compromise corporation tax plan brought forward earlier in the day by senate democrats.

May Confer With FD Although the legislative situation was definitely clearing up, president Roosevelt, canceled plans to go to New London, Conn., Friday to watch the Yale-Harvard boat race.

There have been some intimations that the tax bill conferees might wish to discuss the measure with him again.

The latest corporation tax plan, offered by senate democrats as a basis for a meeting of minds on the heart of the revenue bill, contemplated a flat 15 per cent tax on corporation income, with a super-tax graduated from 5 to 30 cents on undistributed corporation earnings and a $2,000 exemption for all corporations from the latter.

Several conferees hinted that a conference agreement was likely to develop along the lines of that plan, with perhaps some modifications in rates.

They contended it would meet the senate idea of retaining a corporation income tax that already is producing hundreds of millions in revenue and also fall in line with the house preference—and that of the president—for a graduated levy on undistributed corporate profits.

Income Taxes Up 18 Percent

Collections For Second Period Total Over 276 Millions

WASHINGTON, June 17. (AP)—President Roosevelt's budget expectations of $1,434,000,000 in income tax revenue during the current fiscal year was virtually realized today when the treasury reported collections of $276,933,810 for the first 15 days of June.

This amount, the treasury said, was slightly more than 18 per cent in excess of the amount collected during the comparable period last year. Second quarterly installments of income taxes must be paid on or before June 15.

Total income taxes for the present fiscal year, which began last July 1, now amount to $1,395,315,692. Treasury officials said they expected approximately $375,000,000 to be collected during the full month of June, indicating the year's total on June 30 would approximate $1,493,000,000—$59,000,000 more than the president counted on.

DOUGLAS IS DENIED A PLACE ON BALLOT

AUSTIN, June 17. (AP)—The supreme court today refused to interfere in the action of the state democratic executive committee in denying John O. Douglas of Houston a place on the party's primary ballot as candidate for attorney general.

Douglas was denied a place on the ballot on the ground he had filed too late and had not met legal requirements. The court upheld the committee's ruling.

LAST MINUTE strengthening of major league pennant hopes expected before the trading deadline Monday failed to materialize, and rumors are little changed from what they were a week ago.

Here's a final glance at the major league trading deals as seen by Leslie Avery, United Press sports writer.

Only the St. Louis Cardinals, leaders of the National League race, took advantage of the last trading day, sending Johnny Vergez and Bill Cox to their Sacramento, Pacific Coast league farm, and bringing infielder Arthur Garibaldi to St. Louis.

The tall-spinning Glantz, believed a cinch to acquire a good pitcher and some hitting strength before the deadline, failed to make a deal. Manager Bill Terry wanted Pitches Van Mungo from the Brooklyn Dodgers, but Van's one-man insurrection last week precluded all hopes of his disposal.

Terry also nibbled at Brooklyn's Jimmy Frey, but couldn't meet Casey Stengel's demand for a hitting outfielder.

The challenging Chicago Cubs' acquisition of Curt Davis from the Phillies is turning out all right. He won three games during the Cubs' home stand.

Rumors that the Cincinnati Reds were on the verge of trading their big right-hander, Paul Derringer, who manages to keep in hot water with Vice-President Larry McPhail and Cincinnati fans, to the New York Glants in exchange for an outfielder proved groundless.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, badly in need of a hitting outfielder, were not interested when the Red management offered Babe Herman in a cash deal.

The American league-leading New York Yankees strengthened their outfield for the long summer grind by acquiring Jake Powell from the Washington Senators in exchange for Ben Chapman, whose batting slump and recurrent charley horses endangered the Yankees' pennant chances in the eyes of Manager Joe McCarthy.

Marse Joe also tried to sign another pitcher to take Johnny Broasca's place, but was unsuccessful.

Tom Yawkey's last move to keep his Boston Red Sox in a position to challenge the Yankees for the championship was by purchasing Pitcher Jack Russell from the Washington Senators. Both Yankees and Red Sox angled for Pitcher Jack Knott of the St. Louis Browns, but his past performances in no way warranted the $50,000 price tag Rogers Hornsby was understood to have attached.

The third-place Detroit Tigers are in a bad way with player-manager Mickey Cochrane in the hospital and slugger Hank Greenberg possibly out for another month with his broken wrist. Irv Burns, whom the Tigers acquired from St. Louis, has filled the shoes of the slugging Greenberg.

Cleveland's erratic Indians were promised some "radical changes" by President Alva Bradley if they didn't shake off their slump during the present home stand. Hal Trosky, Indian first baseman who is tied with Jimmy Fox for home run honors, will be out of the game for a few days recovering from an operation.

Bright spot in the Cleveland picture was the return of outfielder Bruce Campbell. Campbell has recovered fully from his recent and third attack of spinal meningitis and been pronounced fit to play. Manager Steve O'Neil believes Campbell's power at the bat—he was hitting .340 when stricken—will put Cleveland back into the pennant fight.

LOUIS-SCHMELING FIGHT TO ATTRACT 85,000 FANS

FIFTH GATE OF MILLION EXPECTED

By GEORGE KIRKKEY United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK, June 17 (UP)—A throng of 85,000 persons will assemble in Yankee Stadium tomorrow night to see Joe Louis, the mighty brown man, battle Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion from Germany, in a scheduled 15-round international bout.

These two fighters—Louis, 22-year-old negro born in a cabin in the cottonfields of Alabama, and Schmeling, 30-year-old German who capitalized on the fact that he bears a striking facial resemblance to Jack Dempsey—will draw the first $1,000,000 boxing gate in nine years.

It will be the fifth fight to draw a $1,000,000 at the gate, and the first since the golden era of Dempsey. Another record which will be wiped out is the $1,033,530 mark for a non-title bout—set by the Dempsey-Sharkey match in 1927.

Ninety-nine cents out of every dollar spent at the gate will be shelled out to see Louis batter another ex-champion into the resin and go on to a world's heavyweight title match with James J. Braddock in September.

Louis is the lure. Schmeling is the sacrificial lamb. Mike Jacobs, Twentieth Century club promoter, has equalled any promotional feat of Tex Rickard's in ballyhooing the Louis-Schmeling match into a $1,000,000 battle.

Schmeling, knocked out four times in his career, badly beaten in his last two appearances in his country and never overpopular because he won the heavyweight title while on the floor crying, "Feed," wasn't much of a figure to beat the tom-toms for.

But there was one quality the dark-visaged German seemed to have that Louis' recent victims lacked, and that was courage. King Levinsky, Max Baer and Charlie Retzlaff all were terror-stricken before they crawled into the ring to face the Brown Bomber's lethal fists. Even Paulino Uscudun, the sturdy oak from the Pyrenees who bled but had never been knocked down, got the jitters as he waited in his dressing room to meet the "brown executioner." Primo Carnera was the bravest of the lot, but even he wilted the first time Shufflin' Joe jolted him.

Schmeling Seems Confident Up to now Schmeling has remained supremely confident of his ability to face Louis' deadly attack, and emerge victorious. Throughout his long training grind at Napanoch, N. Y., the German has kept his poise and confidence. Schmeling's attitude also kept the ballyhoo rolling and the ticket sale humming—but can the German keep his courage up in the last few terrifying hours before the battle? Few think so.

Louis probably will enter the ring a 5-1 or better favorite. The Black Uhlans has made a more intensive study of Louis than any fighter who has yet faced the Brown Bomber. He came to this country purposefully to see Louis in action against Paulino Uscudun. He did not sign to meet Louis until he had seen the heralded Brown Bomber in action. He has studied the moving pictures of the Louis-Carnera and Louis-Baer fights. And he thinks he knows the weakness of Louis.

Says He Has Secret "I know how to beat Louis," said Schmeling after the Paulino fight. He said the same thing again when he returned to this country to start training. Many persons doubt that Max would come back even after getting a $20,000 advance from Mike Jacobs.

Some believe Schmeling, always a good business man, took the Louis match solely because he stood to collect $300,000. That may be true but, if you take Schmeling's word for it, he wouldn't take a licking from any other man for $1,000,000.

Chemists Dig Deep Into 2nd Place In Softball League

By HANK HART Scoring 14 runs on eight hits and numerous Raider errors, the Chemists entrenched themselves firmly in second place by winning their last softball game in the first half from Shell, 14-8.

Led by Horace Wallin, whose big bat has been long overdue, the hard-hitting Labmen tallied 12 of their runs before the Snylleman broke the ice, and had an easy time maintaining that advantage.

Wallin, back at first base after a sojourn to the pitcher's box, crashed out a pair of home runs and batted in five tallies.

Manager Ernie Richardson threw them over in the absence of Roscoe Van Zandt and did a fair job of it. He gave up seven hits and was perfect in all but two innings.

The Raiders got to him for four runs in the fifth and came up with another pair in the eighth.

Able Burrus, with two singles, and Ledy Asbury, with a home run, led the losers' assault.

List Is Made For All-Stars

Texas League Moguls Discover Why Managers Get Gray Early

By United Press (United Press presents herewith the first of a series of stories comparing players eligible for the Texas league all-star game July 25.)

Non-playing and non-paid Texas league baseball managers, who sit in the bleachers and pay for their seats, looked over the rosters of rival clubs Tuesday and discovered why managers get gray.

They studied batting averages, fielding records, and personal appeal of six men eligible to play for the "north" team in the July 25 "dream game" at Dallas.

That date a squad picked from the Dallas, Fort Worth, Tulsa, and Oklahoma City entries will play a "south" team from other cities of the league.

Right field—a comparatively simple choice, until one tries to select one man. Eligible for the honor of playing for the "north" are six players, five of whom are batting at 300 or more.

Return of veteran "Sock" Johnson to the Oklahoma City line-up has given him preference over Ray Flood, Johnson specializes on the offense.

Homer Peel, new Fort Worth manager, gave up his right field berth to Art Weis, 1935 league champion. Weis was disappointing in his early showing. Rejuvenation of the Feather club that seems to have followed Peel's accession to the management has improved Weis' showing.

Stan Schino of Tulsa is another who would be a creditable selection on the all-star team. His hitting is improving, although he still is behind others in that respect.

Jim Mosolf, who pleases Dallas fans with his work in right field, will have the unanimous backing of the home folks and probably will get the nomination. His left-handed hitting has brought a .335 average for the season, good for fifth place among all batters in the league.

The Steer outfielder has several other honors. Tabulations Monday gave him second place in the number of hits, with 87; second in the number of doubles, with 21.

Tony's Path To National Open Title Strewn With Heartbreaking Defeats

HAD MANY LEAN YEARS AS GOLFER

By BILL BORING GREENSBORO, N. C., June 17. (UP)—Tony Manero, the Jimmy Braddock of golf, just had to win the U. S. open crown.

Like the reigning heavyweight boxing champion, the Greensboro pro captured his profession's biggest prize after lean years. Manero hadn't known the feel of big money since before he came here as professional in May, 1933.

Back in 1929 Tony saw better golfing days. He captured the Catalina island open that year and continued the next two years to impress the experts and win prize money for himself.

In 1930 the dapper, moustachioed pro finished first in the Pasadena open, second in the Canadian and St. Paul open events, first in the Glens Falls open, with a sensational 276 (his best 72-hole total, and fourth in the Metropolitan open.

In 1931 Manero tried the big European tournaments, finishing in the money in four of the five he entered.

After that run of brilliant performances Tony began learning first hand that Lady Luck is fickle. But he never lost confidence in his game.

The years from 1931 to 1936 form almost a blank page in Manero's record, as far as golf achievements are concerned. A few second-rate tournament championships—the Westchester open (1932), the North Carolina open (1933), and the General Brock open (1935) were the high spots.

In 1935, the young golfer from New York's Italian settlement won exactly $1,958 in tournament play. Besides his win in the General Brock meet, his last year's recore shows he was second in the Glens Falls open and Southeast P.G.A. championship, and that he tied for third in the Canadian open. He was sixth in the Casadema open, and tied for eighth in the Mid-west Individual.

But even when the postman failed to bring him an invitation to play with golf's "big shots" in the Augusta National, this son of an Italian gardener kept his chin up.

He practiced daily—with a new set of clubs—gunning for the national open.

DROP-KICKS AND SLAMS GIVE JAP VICTORY OVER ALGERIAN PRINCE

A spectacular drop-kick attack mixed with hard slams enabled Matsuda Matsura to take two falls from Prince Omar last night in the main event wrestling match at the athletic club.

Although worried by Omar's powerful arm holds and well directed kicks, the Jap showed a great deal of speed and snap after about fifteen minutes and took the first fall with a smother.

Omar improved after a slow start and hard punches and whirled gave him the second fall.

But Matsuda made short work of the Algerian Prince as they came back for the deciding fall. Matsuda took the decision when he slammed Omar against the mat on his neck. He was carried from the ring.

Ernie Arthur and Jack Hagen went to a draw in the semi-windup. They kicked and fought most of the 45 minutes they were in the ring. First fall went to Arthur with a smother and Hagen took the second to earn a draw when he clamped a headlock on the aging Canadian.

All other branches of track and field they can learn, but something about vaulting, jumping and hurdling escapes them. Probably the meet lies in the lack of able coaches. Whatever it is, a 12-foot-6-inch vaulter can win almost any meet he enters in England and so can a 5-foot-6-inch jumper. They are but little better on the continent.

The best high jumper the Americans will have to beat at Berlin appears to be Kurt Lundquist, of Sweden, whose best recorded effort is 6 feet 4 inches. That isn't high enough. Neither is the 15-foot-7-inch vault, likewise credited to a Swede, Bo Ljunberg.

Europe "Hot" in Field

When it comes to hurdling, the topnotch European threat in the 400 meters is believed to be Ernst Lettner, an Austrian, whose fastest time and national record is 54.6 seconds. Glenn Hardin set an Olympic mark of 52 flat in the Los Angeles games. Hakan Lidman of Sweden, with a recorded time of 14.6 seconds in the 110-meter hurdles, is a smooth performer and the only European candidate likely to give the Americans a brush at Berlin.

In the heavier field events—the discus, shot-put, hammer-throw and javelin, as well as in the broad jump, hop-step-and-jump and decathlon—the European lads, with a little help from Japan and Australia, figure to make things hot for the best America can produce.

The discus, in particular, looks like a fight between Germany and Sweden, while the javelin doubtless will go to a son of Finland, as usual. Germany has in Willi Schroeder the champion of the world discus record, with a distance of 174 feet 3 inches. Sweden has Harald Anderson, winner of the event at Los Angeles, who sailed the platter exactly 174 feet in one meet last year, and who averaged 164 feet in 60 meets. Sweden calls Schroeder's record "dubious."

Finland counts on Matti Järvinen, who heaved the javelin a prodigious 238 feet 7 inches at Los Angeles, to repeat his victory without removing his sweater. Gunnar Jansson of Sweden threw the hammer 174 feet the other day, which should be sufficient.

Europe's broad jumping hopes seem to be wrapped up in Robert Paul, of France, who leaped against Eulake Penock in a meet last year. That is less than two inches under the Olympic record.

Germany has in Hans Woelke a shot-putter who may go places. He beat the American, John Lyman, several times in indoor meets last year. Eric Berg of Sweden is another who gets over 52 feet consistently.

The decathlon championship Germany would like to claim right now, but can't because Hans Sievert is ailing. Sievert, who holds the world record with 8790.46 points, dropped out of competition for a time to study law, then was seriously ill for a period. He's back in training now, gradually regaining his form, but he still has some distance to go.

Local Schools Selected For State Tests

R'Spring One Of 53 Towns Included In Curriculum Revision Study

AUSTIN, June 17—Leading the march toward improvement of teaching methods, Big Spring schools have been chosen as one of 53 schools in Texas to try out new courses of study during the coming school year.

These schools, appointed by the state executive committee of curriculum revision as curriculum of "laboratory schools, have volunteered to test under actual conditions the various courses of study evolved by class room teachers during the past year. Each school will utilize one or more revised courses, such as English, science or history.

The executive committee, headed by W. A. Stigler and J. C. Matthews, co-directors of the revision movement, is urging all teachers who will try out the new courses to criticize freely and to offer suggestions for continuous improvements. The teachers' experiences and reactions will be used as the basis for additional changes the following year.

GROSS INCOME TAX PROPOSED TO PAY OLD AGE PENSIONS

GREENVILLE, June 17. (AP)—Tom F. Hunter, in a gubernatorial campaign speech delivered here proposed a gross income tax, of not more than one per cent on all gross incomes in excess of $6,000 to pay old age pensions.

"Since the people made it mandatory by constitutional amendment to pay the pensions and not dilly dally, it is therefore an obligation which must be fulfilled," the Wichita Falls oil man said.

"The present set-up under the Alford administration is neither adequate nor efficient. Nearly $500,000 has been spent by the old age assistant bureaus created by Alford and not a penny has been paid to the old people."

"I did not feel like doing my housework, and as I had other work besides, I felt more like lying down. A friend of mine asked me to try Cardui, which I did. After my first bottle, I felt much better. I continued taking it until I had taken six or seven bottles. By this time I was so much improved I was able to leave it off."

Plan Appeal On Labor Act

Circuit Court Holds Wagner Law Is Unconstitutional

NEW ORLEANS, June 17. (UP)—Federal attorneys expected an order from Washington to appeal to the U. S. supreme court against a circuit court of appeals decision that the Wagner-Connelly labor relations act is unconstitutional.

The circuit court ruling, issued yesterday in a dispute between the Jones & Laughlin Steel company and the national labor relations board, completed court destruction of all the new deal's attempts to regulate employer-employee relations by law.

A member of the national labor relations board said privately that he had no hope the supreme court would reverse the lower body.

Three judges of the appellate court, the same three who upheld constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority a year ago, concurred in the decision. The essence of their ruling was in one sentence:

"The constitution does not vest in the federal government the power to regulate the relation as such of employer and employe in production or manufacture."

West Texas Fish Fry Is Given By J. C. Lopers And Roy Cornelisons

How to top off a fishing party whose net results was a collection of chigger bites was solved in a very original manner by the Roy Cornelisons and the J. C. Lopers recently. Both couples returned Monday empty-handed from a fishing trip that had been heralded far and wide among their friends.

Nevertheless an invitation went out to these friends to attend a fish fry Monday night at the Loper home. When the suspicious-minded guests arrived at the supper hour they found an arch of fishing poles hung with minnows through which they were to walk. A camp cot, a camp stove and a lantern gave a river-side atmosphere to the yard. When they opened the door and the smell of frying fish greeted them, they decided that the fishing trip had been a success.

The sight of the children of the two families carrying a piece of fried fish on a plate added to the general appetite. There was no way then of knowing that the fish had been bought in Big Spring and was the only bit of fried fish in the house. The fish fry was held out of doors. The meal was served from a big pot. It held baked beans topped with sardines and was passed with catsup and bread. Guests were: Messrs. and Mrs. J. A. Coffey, Wayne Mathews, Vernon Logan, E. T. Smith.

DEDICATION TO BE HELD JULY 1 FOR MEXICAN HIGHWAY

LAREDO, June 17. (AP)—Final arrangements were made here today at a meeting of American and Mexican officials for the dedication July 1 of the Laredo to Mexico City highway.

Joseph Daniels, United States ambassador to Mexico, advised the officials he would be on hand for the dedication, which is expected to draw numerous other dignitaries of both nations.

It was expected that President Cardenas would make a final inspection trip of the road prior to its opening to traffic.

The dedication ceremonies, it was decided, will be held at a point on the new highway just outside the southern limits of Nuevo Leon. In attendance will be Gen. Eduardo Hiny, minister of foreign relations of the Mexican government; Gen. Francisco Mujica, minister of communications, and other Mexican and American officials.

Mrs. S. M. Barbee and daughter, John Anna, are attending the tri-state meeting of the E. I. F. and E. and intend to go to the Centennial before returning home.

Summer Round-Up Plans Made By Committee From Ward P-T. A.'s

Chairmen appointed from the ward P-T.A. units in charge of the summer round-up met at the home of the council chairman, Mrs. H. W. Smith, Tuesday morning to make plans for the round-ups.

Mrs. Smith told the chairman that this was one of the major projects of the national congress of mothers and that Big Spring must have a round-up to become a standard P-T.A. Lack of it in the past has kept the P.T.A. from being rated as a standard association.

The summer round-up is a campaign to free prospective school children of all remediable diseases before they enter school. All children of school age who plan to attend next fall are given physical examinations to ascertain their defects and parents are asked to have these taken care of, if possible. It is a well-known fact among teachers and P-T. A. workers that a child who starts to school not physically fit is under a great disadvantage. It may be great enough to keep him from passing at the end of the year. Physical handicaps are responsible for many children remaining in the grades for several years. The longer they stay there the more they cost the public, without benefit to themselves, either. Under the auspices of the P-T.A. the pre-school children are examined and willing parents do their best to have them in good physical trim by the beginning of the school year.

The chairman voted to carry on the round-up. All interested in the public welfare of future citizens are asked to co-operate wherever possible. School officials have endorsed the movement. The definite date will be announced later.

The chairman of the South Ward committee is Mrs. D. F. McConnell. Working with her are Mrs. J. C. Loper and Mrs. Harry Hurt. North Ward chairman is Mrs. Luther Bonner. Assisting her will be Mrs. O. D. Engle. Mrs. George Hill is chairman of West Ward and Mrs. A. J. Cain of East Ward. Both will announce their helpers later.

Mrs. Frank Hamblin and daughter, Kathleen, of Royalty were in Big Spring Tuesday visiting with friends.

MR. ED WOOD, T & P RAILROAD EMPLOYEE, PRAISES TOM'S PRESCRIPTION 6000

"I am writing this testimonial because Tom's Prescription 6000 helped me so much that I want to tell everybody what a wonderful medicine it is.

"I was just run down and I was in such a condition that I could not work regularly. I work nights at the T & P shops and I would only sleep just an hour or two during the day, because of nervousness and my stomach. My gas pain and bloating like a lump of lead, and cause heart-burn and such terrible gas pains and heat that I would drop me to distraction. I could not sleep. I lost weight and strength. And also had bowel constipation and for years my tongue was coated and the taste in my mouth was awful.

"I took soda and other anti-acid preparations and strong physics but never got any real relief until I tried Tom's Rx 6000. Now I feel like a new man. My gas pain and bloating are gone and heartburn is relieved. I get the good out of food and have gained weight. I now go to work feeling fine and sleep like a baby. All my trouble seems to have vanished.

"During my hard strenuous work at the shops, one day I got too hot and attempted to lift a very heavy shaft, which sprained my back. It settled on my kidneys, and gave me more trouble than I could explain. My back hurt, my kidneys would pass blood and I would have to lay off from work. Two doctors told me that there was no medicine that would cure me but that I would have to outgrow it, which would take years. After taking the boxes of Tom's Prescription my back does not hurt, my kidneys are well and I do not have one bit of trouble.

"I am thankful that Tom's prescription was recommended to me. I bless the day I found out about it."

"If you are suffering as Mr. Wood did try one box today. Tom's prescription is fully guaranteed. You must be satisfied. Sold in Big Spring by Collins Bros. Drug.

MAKE IT SPECIFIC

Closing of the period for filing applications for the placing of the names of candidates on the Democratic primary election ticket makes it possible, and proper, that the voters should at least begin to examine the "platforms" of the various candidates and determine for whom to cast a ballot.

Some candidates are telling what taxes they will reduce, when the fact stares everyone in the face that the taxes now are not producing enough to meet the appropriations made by the legislature.

The way to reduce taxes is to reduce expenditures. Unless that is done talking reduction of taxes is a waste of words.

Some of the candidates for governor propose to reduce certain rates of taxation and increase rates on other items. This is not tax reduction, for no matter from what source taxes are derived the people pay them in increased charges for goods or services.

Every candidate for the legislature should be called on to make an exact statement of what he will vote for to reduce taxes. With most of them, like the gubernatorial candidates, promising liberal support for the schools, liberal old age assistance, liberty highway building and no reduction in costs of other departments their promise of tax reduction is sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—No playwright yet has fashioned a drama about that amazing character of the shipping lanes—Peter Straub. Pete only gets into New York about twice in three years—the rest of the time he is maneuvering his ratty old freighter to far ports where the junkers find their cargoes.

He came in last week after dropping his hook in some of that choice Brooklyn mud, next to a forgotten pier, and one glance at him revealed a brand new scar. That makes three on the skipper's face.

Then there is a half-moon gash in his forehead ("A Javanese lady gave me that one 20 years ago. I caught her cheating at cards and she slashed me with a spiked ring") which shows dead white against his leather countenance.

"Was she a charmer, Pete?" "She had bells in her laughter and the bluest eyes in the islands—a heritage from her old drunken father, a one-time Dutch trader who boozed away his business and ended his days dailying in the rum pots of Batavia."

The third scar—we'll have the history of this one from Pete himself:

"I've been clubbed over the head, knifed, half drowned, beaten and mauled—but nothing ever hurt quite so much. Take a look at this scar—it's a ragged seam leading from the corner of my left eye up around my ear.

"We were having a fine time when I got this," said the skipper. "We were having breakfast in Port Said, on one of those palmed balconies that look down on the waterfront. Frank Buck had just come in and naturally the conversation shifted to wild animals. Finally somebody began talking about pythons. Well, I can't stand the thought of snakes, and I remarked that anybody who could must be crazy in the head.

"That's when it happened—there was a shriek, a sort of wild, uncontrolled snarl, and an olive-skinned young fellow in a white turban leaped across the floor and began jabbering in my face. I didn't mind the jabber but I did resent the fine spray that went with it, so I pushed him one and he toppled backwards in as undignified a sprawl as I've yet seen.

"This fellow was part cat, for he bounded to his feet with one leap and got out a black looking whip from somewhere. He slashed out once and caught me in the face. The slash opened my eye all the way around to my neck.

"Half blinded with blood, I managed to get out of there and back to the ship, where the doc patched me up. But it burned for days—I've never known such agony."

"But what about the guy with the turban?" "Oh, him?—I later learned that he was a fanatic on snake worship—the son of a rich merchant who had gone sort of batty."

"If you ever go back there he'll probably be waiting with a nice fat box to wrap around your neck," we suggested. "I don't think so," the skipper said. "After he hit me with that whip I threw him over the balcony. In Port Said, some of those balconies are pretty high."

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(This is the third of a series of Merry-Go-Round sketches on the Roosevelt family. Another, on Anna Roosevelt Boettger, will appear next week.)

WASHINGTON—The problem of being a president's son, under the best of circumstances, is tough. The Hoover boys found that out, also John Coolidge.

They were rather modest, retiring individuals. But when you have inherited the characteristics of the most active woman in America, and of a father who even today is full of restless, driving energy, then it must be doubly tough.

Jimmy Roosevelt, 28, eldest son of the president, hasn't fully realized this yet—though he should. He has been to enough places, seen enough things to realize it. But for him, life is still just a bowl of cherries. And he has been very busy plucking them.

There have been infrequent times, of course, when the exuberant Jimmy thought life was a little hard. One of these was when he was just out of Harvard, newly married, and anxious to make a living. His father was then governor of New York, and offers from New York business houses literally were thrown at Jimmy's head. He could have had a salary of $25,000 for the asking.

But the governor put his foot down. Salaries of that figure were not paid to a 22-year-old boy for nothing. Jimmy went off to live in Boston—chiefly because his wife's father, Dr. Harvey Cushing, famous brain specialist, lived there.

Insurance Fortune So Jimmy studied law and simultaneously launched himself in the insurance game.

About mid-summer of 1932, as it became increasingly certain that his father would be elected president, Jimmy suddenly woke up to the fact that the old adage "all that glitters is not gold" was not, in his case, true at all. A great deal glittered in those days, and almost everything he touched turned to gold.

His first discovery of this came when he sold a $2,500,000 life insurance policy to George Washington Hill, president of the American Tobacco company.

After that, all kinds of insurance sales came his way. No great salesmanship was necessary. It was only natural that when rates are standardized, as in insurance, people should buy where they thought it might get them some political advantage.

That Jimmy ever promised them any favoritism is not known, and is doubtful. The furthest he is ever known to have gone was to invite certain people to the White House. They were people whom the president profited by meeting, but there is no doubt Jimmy did it for business reasons.

Political Czar Simultaneously, Jimmy went even deeper into politics. His father and Jim Farley did not like Senator Walsh and Governor Ely of Massachusetts, who had backed Al Smith, and although they wanted to work with Mayor Curley they did not particularly trust him. So they made, Jimmy, then only 25, patronage czar of Massachusetts.

As such, Jimmy probably made as many political enemies as it was possible for one human being to make.

He was very young, lacked judgment, was flush with the newness of power, and motivated chiefly by the spirit of "anything goes." He appointed John E. Donahue, drug store clerk, as receiver of the Essex National bank in Haverhill, and sent to Washington, to be assistant attorney general, George C. Sweeney, who did not at first know enough to take the oath of office and begin drawing salary.

Jimmy urged the passage of a bill permitting pari-mutuel betting on Massachusetts horse races. He came out emphatically against the constitutional amendment on child labor, even refusing to alter his stand at the request of his mother, thereby contributing to the amendment's defeat in the Massachusetts legislature.

When it comes to his family, the president is a very patient man—too patient, some of his friends think. But finally he decided to get his eldest son out of Boston. Jimmy had got himself thoroughly disliked, politically and otherwise; had been blackballed by the prominent clubs, and was doing no one, particularly his family, any good.

Word leaked out that Jimmy would be added to the White House staff. Serving without salary, he was to act as a sort of substitute secretary, in place of Louise Howe. In Washington, it was felt, his father could keep an eye on him.

All this had been definitely arranged. It was not mere rumor. But when it appeared in the press, the reaction was bad.

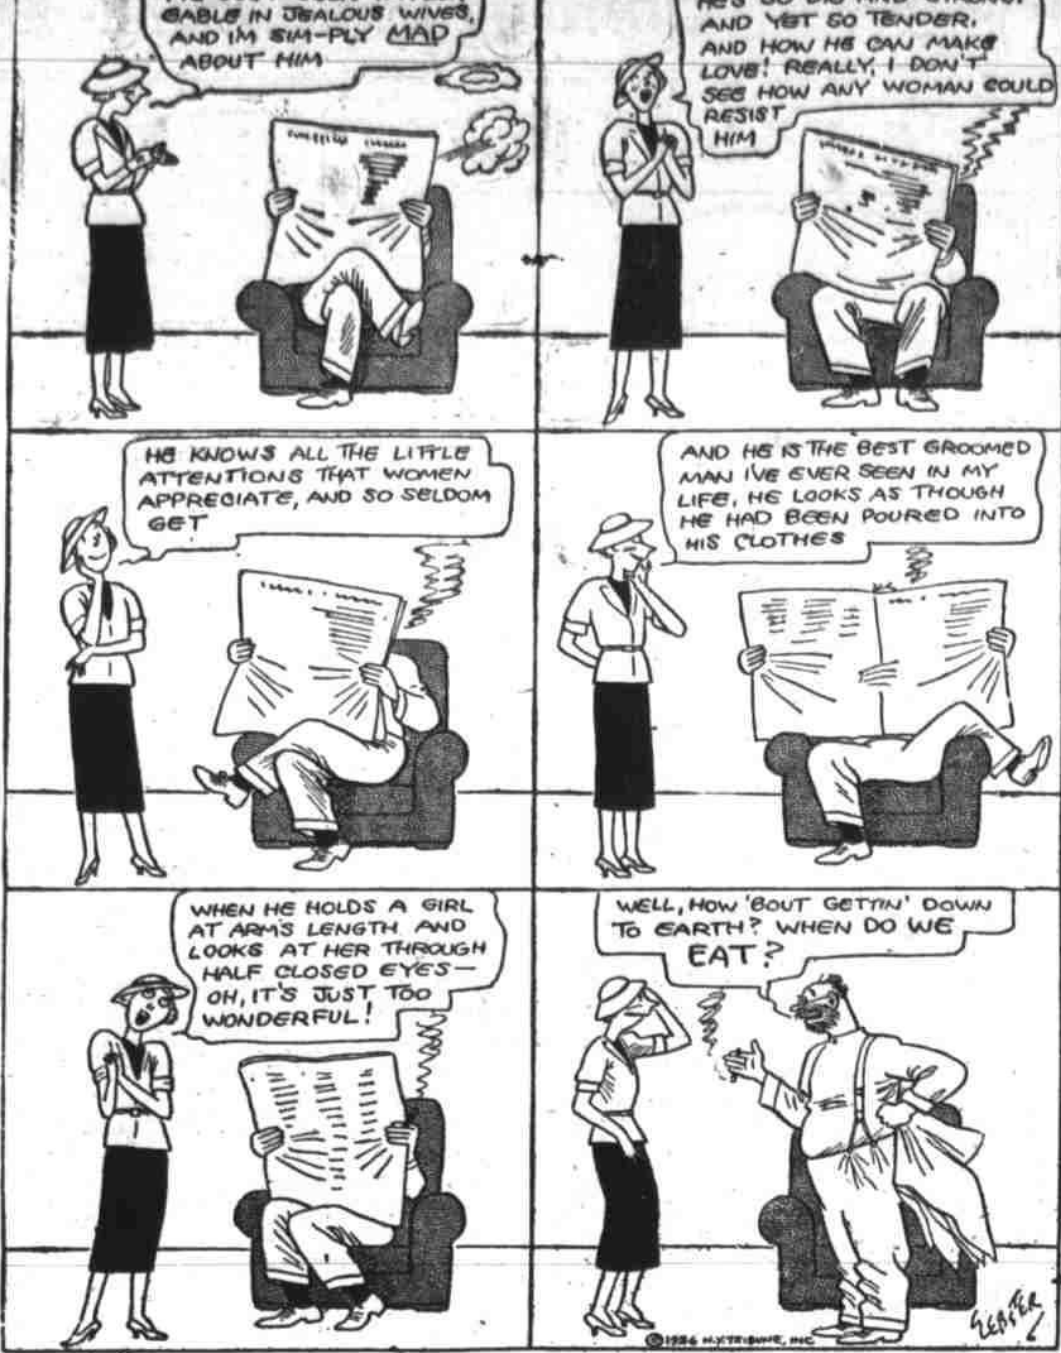

So at the next press conference the president issued a terse announcement to the effect that Jimmy was to be placed in charge of the 12-cow dairy and the forestry preserve on the Hyde Park estate. It was explained that Jimmy had "overworked" at the insurance business and needed a change of occupation.

Jimmy Roosevelt read the announcement that afternoon in the papers. He was flobbergasted. It was the first he had heard about it.

The president, on occasion, has served notice of resignation or transfer on high officers in his administration merely through announcements to the press, and in this case he was equally hard-boiled with a member of his own family.

The funny part of it was that Jimmy never milked a cow in his life, and beyond Joyce Kilmer's poem, knows nothing about trees. Jimmy is an extremely likable

4 Charged In Man's Death

Kin Of Guthrie Liquor Dealer Held In Connection With Slaying

LUBBOCK, June 17 (UP)—Four persons were charged with murder yesterday in connection with the slaying of Ben Pettijohn, liquor dealer, on March 28, at Guthrie. Bob Pettijohn and Cobb Pettijohn, brothers and nephews of the victim, and Jimmy Shores and his sister, Ethel, were under the murder charges.

The men were remanded in the Lubbock county jail, under $5,000 bond each. The woman has been released on $750 bond, pending investigation of the slaying.

Pettijohn allegedly was called to the door of his home during the night of March 28, lured outside, and shot fatally through the chest. County Judge Ross K. Wideman, King county, took the complaints, which were signed by Sheriff George Humphreys.

Quitting Ministry, Rev. Eskridge Says

HOUSTON, June 17. (UP)—Rev. C. Edgar Eskridge, 46, Baptist preacher who was convicted of murdering an Orange peace officer, said here he would abandon the ministry for the farm when he serves the five-year penalty assessed for the crime.

"I don't believe in mockery," the preacher said in his jail cell. "I've still got my farm and I can go back to that."

The husky preacher who goes forays against crime and Orange law enforcement officers led to the killing, said he was happy because the jury Saturday found him guilty of murder without malice.

"I'd rather have that verdict than for the jurors to have freed me on the insanity plea," he said. "The jury was right. It was murder without malice. I had to kill Ed O'Reilly or he would have killed me."

The preacher apparently was much relieved that the two weeks' trial was ended. He agreed with state psychiatrists rather than those called by the defense. He does not believe he is insane.

OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR R. R. COMMISSIONER

CARROLLTON, June 17. (UP)—Frank S. Morris of Dallas, candidate for Texas state railroad commissioner, had opened formally his campaign today in his "own-home county."

Morris spoke last night at a political rally here. He declared himself "for reorganizing the right of every man who owns land in Texas to drill for oil on any size tract, ranch or grilling site and for widening without interference from major oil companies, out to swallow this poor independent."

COTTON EXPORTS AT HOUSTON SHOW GAIN

HOUSTON, June 17. (UP)—Cotton exports from Port Houston for the 1935-36 period including last Friday totaled 1,547,913 bales as compared with 1,397,119 bales for the same period last season, S. Sigitovich & Co., reported today. The firm said that 13,642 bales were shipped last week.

Chapter 25
GHOST STORY

"I couldn't say anything for a minute," Martin continued, "and then I begged her pardon, and told her I had thought it was a burglar. But she wouldn't let me go away. She said, 'Come back. I want you to make sure. Please search the room.'"

"As soon as I went inside I looked at the door that led to Mister Rupert's room to see if anybody could have gone out that way. It was still locked, and that's a big bolt, and hard to push. I went out that way myself, just to see. Then I began to search . . . everywhere, they were my tracks . . . mine and the cop's I called in. I didn't tell them about Logan, of course. I let them think I'd imagined it all, and laugh if they wanted to. They didn't laugh, because Nora told them it was likely the ghost."

"The ghost?" repeated Dirk, though he remembered the legend. The ghost was supposed to have been laid when the old wing was burned.

"The ghost," explained Martin, "that used to haunt the place. Nora says likely, with the depression and all, it's come back. Timothy said, 'Yes. The general unrest!'" her standing over by the bed, bug-ging her kimono around her, and the cold night air coming in the open window.

The ghost was supposed to have been exorcised.

"I looked under the bed, and in the wardrobe, and in the bath and dressing room, and behind curtains. The door to the hall was open, and if anybody had gone into Mister Rupert's room they'd have had to pass it to get to the stairs. I watched it all the time, and I went out through that room, like I say.

Martin managed a nervous smile. Dirk said, "You don't believe in ghosts, Martin?"

"The eyes of the two boys met. Martin said, 'I think, sir, it's the only explanation.'"

"Good," said Dirk. "And whatever Logan may say, you did right in every particular, especially in keeping things to yourself."

"Thank you, sir. You don't know how good . . . how different . . . that makes me feel."

Dirk looked at his watch. It was 6 o'clock. Logan would not be at his post till 8.

"Tell Nora to see me in my room," he said to Martin, and went down-stairs.

"There was only one other way they could have gone and that was through the window."

"A drop of 30 feet," commented Dirk.

"I know, sir. And there were no tracks in the snow. It was a fresh snow, had just stopped a few hours before. Any one dropping from the window . . ."

"Would have been dead on the ground," said Dirk.

"Yes. Or if he'd managed to shimmy down the tower the ivy would have been torn, and there would have been tracks. There was nothing. I went around with Logan, with flashes."

"What did Logan say?"

"He didn't say anything at first, just told the other fellow to stay in the car, and came with me. There were no tracks anywhere except those I made myself. After Logan had looked, he wanted to go up and talk to Mrs. Joris, and when I told him I had already spoken with Mrs. Joris and that she had heard nothing—What she really said was, 'There's no one here—why he gave me the laugh. Said I must be crazy, hearing a burglar in her room that she hadn't heard herself, and that I couldn't find, and that hadn't left any tracks. I let him laugh. But I hadn't said it was a burglar.'"

"And you didn't think it was a burglar?"

"Not after Mrs. Joris said. There is no one here. I simply knew I had heard somebody and that you didn't pay me to think. You paid me to protect Mrs. Joris, and to watch, not to . . . not to work up suspicion about her."

"You didn't mention your suspicions to him?"

"No, I didn't. Anyhow, he decided to think I was crazy. You see I'd been to them earlier, wanting one of them to stay in the house. All that sounded jitters. But I heard the noise, Mister Dirk. And that's all there is to say."

"And Mrs. Joris is ill," said Dirk.

"Yes, sir. Mary says she's not in bed just nervous and upset, what with Mister Rupert being sick, and all this other."

"The servants know about this other?"

"They know, because Mrs. Joris told Mary. She asked Mary if Timothy had heard anything; that night. He hadn't. Timothy and the maids went out and found tracks around the tower, but I explained

"Oh, but Mister Dirk, I'm that glad you've come home! Mrs. Joris will rest now, the poor lady. . . ."

"But yes, I know about the revolver. It was me 'took it to Mister Rupert, in the front place. Big it was, with a foinie pearl handle, a number 45. Mister Rupert said so. Little I liked carrying it in me hand. But I didn't want to leave it where Mrs. Joris might come across it, and frighten herself to death. Or so I thought, sir."

"You found it, I gather," said Dirk. "Where?"

"In the tower-room, sir. Mrs. Joris' room. It was in the wall pocket there . . . the safe, that is, where your grandfather . . . God rest his soul . . . used to keep his nip o' brandy, sir. It was him showed me how to open it once when he was that ill he couldn't walk to it. I very once in a while I open it now, and dust it out, for it's a great place for rats since he died."

LITTLE ROCK MOVES BIG ROCK OF HISTORY

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., (UP)—Workmen have completed the moving of the huge rock from which this city gets its name to a location on the statehouse grounds.

The rock, one of the six that lined the south bank of the Arkansas river, that early day settlers used as a crossing guide in fording the stream, weighed more than five tons.

It has been placed on the site of a Civil war prison that was constructed by the federal army and later used by the Confederate army, when the town was re-captured in the last days of the war.

CAKE WALK IS SLATED AT VEALMOOR FRIDAY

There will be a cake walk and ice cream supper at the Vealmoor schoolhouse Friday night of this week, for the purpose of raising funds for the home demonstration club of that community. The public is invited to attend, and a special invitation is extended to candidates.

La Fern Dehlinger left Wednesday for Sterling City to visit Orell Hodges on their ranch nearby and also to visit in San Angelo. When she returns she will go to Dallas to attend the Centennial exposition.

Exhibit At Centennial Exposition A Veritable Food-Drink Fairyland

DALLAS, June 17—Some folks say they mistook the hall of foods and beverages at the Texas Centennial exposition.

They are probably correct. "Food and drink fairyland" would be more appropriate. When it came to erecting this quarter of a million dollar fire-proof building and assigning it to exhibitors, exposition officials accomplished what no other world's fair ever did.

No food or drink show anywhere or at any time presents such a swanky appearance as the one at the $25,000,000 show Texas is going to run at Dallas for the next six months.

More industries are represented in this palace than have ever been collected under one roof. An outstanding feature is the nationally advertised products to be found there.

Star's great birthday party, fully 75,000 passed through the hall of foods and beverages. No day has passed since that did not attract its full quota of visitors.

Southern Rice industry demonstrates more than 20 ways that makes rice a leading food article.

Dentier Maid products runs a giant machine that turns out tons of potato chips between 10 a. m. when the hall opens to 10 p. m. when it closes at night.

Priests Talks Of New Party

Coughlin Says He Will Support A Third Party Candidate

NEW YORK, June 17. (UP)—Father Charles E. Coughlin announced he would support an un-revealed presidential candidate who will head a third party if the candidate's platform is satisfactory to the National Union for Social Justice. A decision will be made before Friday, Coughlin said.

The Detroit priest would not reveal the man's name and refuses to deny or affirm that it would be former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts.

"This platform would engage the interest of 25,000,000 voters," Coughlin said in an attempt to get clues as to the mysterious candidate's identity. Coughlin refused to give them any leads until the name of Ely was mentioned.

"Now you're getting too hot," the priest said.

Coughlin said he was delivering a radio speech Friday night and that he might endorse the mysterious candidate and reveal his platform at that time.

Coughlin said he had not seen Ely recently and that the only way he knew about the platform of the mystery candidate was through conversations with a third person.

Miss Lajuan Gilmore, a member of the nursing staff at Parkland hospital, Dallas, is spending her vacation here, the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Ora Blankenship. She will return to Dallas June 27 to resume her duties.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, such and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A more powerful movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harshness, gas, acid, get away in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 35c.

No Balance . . . No Beer!

Brewing, like cake-making and biscuit-baking, is really a matter of knowing how to balance the ingredients. It's just too bad for the beer, the cake or the biscuits if the ingredients are out of balance. It takes skill and experience to bake cakes or biscuits that guests rave about. It takes skill and experience to make Budweiser—the beer that guests rave about. Of course, the Budweiser process is exclusively ours. If it were not, there would be lots of beers like Budweiser. As it is, only Budweiser tastes like Budweiser.

Budweiser's Imported Saazer hops cost six times as much as the finest domestic hops with which they are blended. Budweiser's Saazer hops are rich in the flavors and fragrances necessary to give skillfully brewed beer a plus in taste and bouquet.

Budweiser gets the best of each year's barley crop. Wherever the best barley grows in a season, the Home of Budweiser goes after it . . . and pays premium prices. No barley accepted until our laboratory has analyzed and germinated every sample.
