DISTRICT DIVIDED FOR BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Sections To Arrange For Sites, Dates

Steers Faced With Rough Going In Southern Division

Division of this basketball district into a northern and southern section at a meeting of the committee of this sector Saturday, put some strong competition in the southern section with Big Spring.

In the southern half will be Howard, Mitchell, Nolan and Taylor counties, and city units of Abilene, Sweetwater and Big Spring. The northern division will comprise Scurry, Kent, Jones, Fisher, Stone-wall and Borden counties.

To Arrange Details
 Sectional winners will arrange details of a final district series for the championship, with the supervision of E. A. Hennig, Sweetwater, district director of athletics. The sections will arrange sites and dates for their tournaments.

An entry fee of 25 cents for each basketball player on a team competing for the district championship was set. The same fee will be charged for each contestant in district events in the spring meets.

March 20 and 21 were fixed as dates for the district tournaments in tennis and typing. The track and field events were set for April 6 and 7.

Sweetwater, as center of the new district will entertain the track meet for the first time. A course to accommodate the runners is now under construction.

Big Spring Player Wins All-Star Berth In Wolves' Cage Tourney

Bucket Hare Is Outstanding Player—Neel Displays Greatest Sportsmanship

Big Spring, eliminated in the third round of the Colorado invitational tournament, which was won by the host team, 38 to 32, from Wylie, placed one player, Hare, on the all-tournament team as selected by the coaches.

Miniature gold basketballs were given to members of the all-star quintet, to the high scorer in the championship play, the high scorer in the consolation, and to the player displaying the best sportsmanship. Players making a berth on the all-tournament team, positions, disregarded, were: Elvis Stagner, Colorado, forward; Gordon Wood, Wylie, forward; Jack Cox, Colorado, center; Bucket Hare, Big Spring, guard; Morris Ashley, Dunn, forward.

Cox of Colorado, with 68 points, led scoring in the championship division of the tournament. Thomas Horton of Lorraine was first in the consolation.

The sportsmanship award was won by George Neel of Big Spring. Barnhart, located south of San Angelo, received a cup for traveling the greatest distance to attend the meet.

The Colorado team received a three-quarters size silver basketball for winning the championship, and Wylie, as runner-up, received an ornate cup.

Tomorrow night Coach Jim Cantrell brings his victorious Colorado Wolves to the local Gym for a bout with the Steers. The Wolves passed out of the picture before clashing with the host team in the tourney.

It seems as though George Brown's cagers will never get an opportunity to play the Abilene team. Father, the Eagle coach, made a lot of weak excuses to Brown and called off the game which was scheduled for January 30.

LOST THEIR REEF
 "Tiny" Reed and Obie Bristol, Colorado tournament officials, aren't likely to receive any more offers to officiate games. They called an average of about one out of three fouls, and when "Tiny" would call one, Obie would usually wake up long enough to holler, "double foul." But they did have a hard time working from 8 o'clock in the morning until 11 p.m., 23 to 12, by Fort Stockton. The Devils had previously ousted McCamey, 15 to 12.

This department has been informed that Olsen's Terrible Swedes, world's champion traveling basketball club, will be through West Texas the latter part of February and is seeking teams to play. There has been no prospect of a game here, however.

The Swedes have won over 1500 games in 13 years, and are doubtless plenty good. They are scheduled to play St. Rose during their stay in this state. The team is something on the order of the House of David quip which played here not long ago.

BARNHART TRACK MEET
 Barnhart will hold its third annual, "largest track and field meet in West Texas," on March 17, Year before last Big Spring won the meet, Tack Dennis taking off individual honors. The Steers did not participate last year and it was won by San Angelo.

WOLVES PLAY HERE
 Tomorrow night Coach Jim Cantrell brings his victorious Colorado Wolves to the local Gym for a bout with the Steers. The Wolves passed out of the picture before clashing with the host team in the tourney.

PAY YOUR POLL TAX

Next to unenlightenment, the greatest menace to democracy is disinterest.

Disinterest is really more despicable than ignorance.

An uninformed electorate may be told and made to understand. A listless electorate, understanding and perceiving, cares not and refuses to be led anywhere.

Huge strides have been taken here in America to overcome the handicap of ignorance. While the fight against illiteracy has been raging, an epidemic of disregard has flourished and the citizenry shows little desire to exercise one of the most cherished rights upon which the principles of our government are founded.

When one stops to consider that less than 500 poll taxes had been issued Saturday with little more than two weeks remaining in which to register, people of this county cannot, in good grace, point the finger elsewhere.

At the rate maintained through Saturday, it is doubtful that more than 2,000 of a possible 4,000 will be privileged to vote.

Does it seem real democracy that 2,000 people will rule a county of more than 20,000 souls? Is it real democracy for one person to speak for ten of his fellow men?

This year important elections are to be held. The county ballot will be the largest in years and it is essential that the people of this county choose the best in the field to serve in public office. Congressional candidates are to be chosen and in this transitory period of history it is necessary that intelligent, big men be elected. Election of the best type for city commissioners is imperative. Selection of other state officers is equally important. Choice of a governor or this state will rest upon the electorate.

If you are a citizen and can in any manner pay your poll tax, you owe it to yourself and to your city, county, state and nation to do so without delay. If you are eligible to vote and do not pay your poll tax, you deserve little more than disenfranchisement.

THE "NEW DEAL" ECLIPSES THE DOCTRINE OF LIBERALISM

The old-fashioned die-hard conservative is not happy these days, and the extreme radical never has been happy; but it is doubtful if either of these groups is getting half the misery that is falling in the lap of a certain kind of doctrinaire liberal.

The conservative can at least reflect that he controlled the government for upwards of a decade. The radical can always cock his ear for the rumble of tumbrils down the streets of the distant future. But there is a certain kind of liberal to whom the present era seems to be bringing nothing but confusion and disappointment.

To be sure, the actions that this liberal has always demanded of his government are being taken. The program that he has clamored for for years—or something strikingly like it—is being put into effect. The conservatives are in full retreat, all along the line, and they

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Put down Glenn Cunningham among our athletic young men who shows no disposition whatever to dodge the competitive issue.

The barrel-chested University of Kansas runner has, of course, the incentive of rare rivalry for the indoor campaign. It is not every season that there is such opposition for middle distance foot-racing in sight as Luigi Beccali of Italy, Bill Bonthron of Princeton, Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania and Glen Dawson of Oklahoma. Cunningham doesn't want to miss any of them.

Whereas Bonthron's engagements will be limited by the Princeton authorities, Cunningham has been granted his desire to take part in all the big eastern indoor meets in New York and Boston, with side trips to Butler, Ind., Buffalo, N. Y., and Columbia, Mo. He will compete in the three big one-mile races on the eastern boards, two in New York and one in Boston, but he will likely meet all his main rivals in only one of these events—the classic Baxter Mile of the New York Athletic Club games in Madison Square Garden.

A NEW CROP
 Bonthron and Beccali are the two runners who figure to make it toughest for Cunningham, who has otherwise met and beaten all his real rivals, at home and abroad within the past year.

The Kansas star lost only one decision to Venzke last winter and that by a margin so close that none flight, meanwhile, occupied newspaper front pages from coast to coast, and millions of people waited anxiously to learn how it came out.

Strange, and revealing, the way in which the sympathy of a nation can be focused on one small baby!

Night Football Games Put High Schools On Right Side Of Ledger

HOUSTON (UP)—Night football has placed high school athletics here on the favorable side of the ledger. Superintendent of Schools E. E. Oberholzer said in a report to the board of trustees.

Approximately $6,000 was left in the athletic fund after expenses and some debts had been paid, his report showed. He credited night football with the increased revenue.

The trustees voted to continue nocturnal playing next season.

But the tragedy, to the doctrinaire liberal, is that all of this is being done in the wrong way by the wrong people. The change came before he could pronounce his blessing upon it. He had just got through proving that nothing of consequence could be expected from the present administration when it proceeded to take the wind out of his sails by adopting his whole program.

What has our liberal been demanding, all of these years?

Well, he has called for a "planned economy." He has wanted federal laws to protect union labor in the leading industries. He has wanted the New York financial powers drastically curbed. He has wanted the government to crack down on the power trust. He has wanted vast sums spent by Uncle Sam on public works. He has wanted a systematized federal employment service. He has wanted to see people like Frances Perkins, Ickes and Richberg in important government positions. He has wanted an administration that would place human rights above property rights.

Every one of these goals has been reached. Things that until recently looked like remote possibilities for the millenium are now in actual operation.

MYSTERY IN REAL LIFE

An unemployed engineer in a middle western city recently gave the police a perplexing puzzle by being found, lifeless, alongside a lonely road with a series of stab wounds in his back and a dose of poison in his stomach.

It looked like murder, at first; but the police finally concluded that the man had killed himself and had arranged things to look like murder because of some final whimsy. This theory, the officers said, was strengthened by the fact that a detective story was found beside the man's body.

But a real detective story fan might easily make just the opposite deduction from this fact. There is nothing a mystery addict hates so much as the novel which presents a puzzling homicide and then, in the last chapter, discloses that it was really a suicide. If the man in this case was actually fond of that kind of literature, could he be expected to ape a lot which, if he found it in a book, would fill him with a consuming rage?

WHEN A LIFE IS AT STAKE

Strange, how all the attention of a busy nation can be focused on the plight of one tiny baby!

When 5-month-old Sue Trammel of Texas fell ill of a malady that required the most delicate of operations, the whole country held its breath until she had been got to a hospital where that operation could be performed properly. A visiting nobleman gave up the use of his airplane; one of the land's best aviators dropped everything to pilot the child on a long and perilous flight; officials of distant cities did all they could to expedite matters.

And the story of this spectacular

I did not feel good, so did not feel like doing my work, and there is a lot to do on a farm. I read about Cardui and decided to take it. Cardui helped me. It is the best tonic I have found. I told my daughter to take it, too, and it helped her." Ask at the drug store for Cardui. Used by women for over 20 years.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

by William Byron Howrey

CHAPTER 41

Until he reached old John's lake the Iskitimwah, the prospect of getting into his plane and whirling north had buoyed Curt up and kept him going long after he had gone dead on his feet. But he had touched the limit of human endurance and the shock of floating himself helplessly stranded through Smash's treachery, pushed him over the limit. Stumbling under a pine tree, he slumped down, almost in a collapse, and dropping into the mental oblivion of sleep.

Tenn-Og began looking around the cabin, reading signs—a crushed nettle, footprints, a broken twig with wilted leaves. He announced presently that Smash had not been there yesterday or the day before that. He had left three days ago. To all around and watch the plane for a plane that did not come was more than Paul could bear. Wisely he kept himself busy. While Tenn-Og went down the shore to a small stream where piñon were chortling among the cloudberry thickets he drew out the canoe and gummed it, freshened up the rusty cabin and chopped a dead jackpine into firewood. When Tenn-Og came back with 3 partridge, he cleaned and dressed the birds, cooked them, and prepared a meal.

Near seven o'clock Curt woke up. Paul had supper ready, but Curt could not force himself to eat. The thought of Smash drawing nearer and nearer that headwaters lake sent him tramping the landwash again in distraction. Paul and Tenn-Og made a two-pronged javelin, hardened the points in the fire; and went down to a rock jut to spear trout. As Curt turned once, he saw they had stopped fishing and were listening intently, looking around the horizon.

A few moments later he caught a far-away hum, faint as a mosquito's song. It seemed to come from nowhere in particular; but it rapidly grew louder, deeper and changed to a throaty drone. He located its direction, due south and wished to look.

Out above a lofty range have a glistering speck, shining in the slant evening sun. Curt stood rooted in his tracks, afraid that the growing speck was a delusion and might vanish. But it came on and on, till at last he distinguished the lines of his plane.

For him that glistering plane had all the splendor of a delivering angel. From his height of ten thousand feet it glided down and down, banked over the lake, leveled off, touched and came taxiing shoreward.

The three leaped into their canoe and darted out to meet it. As they swung around the propeller and clambered upon a pontoon, Smash opened a panel and flipped his cigarette into the water.

"Hallo! Didn't keep you waiting, did I, Curt? Darned sorry; but say, you ought to see the dance pavilion and the whole layout down there at Lake Maria—uh—Why, why, what's the matter, Curt?"

Curt glared at him tight-lipped, sent the canoe spinning with a kick slammed open the door and climbed into the cabin.

"I'll take the controls. Get back in the rear place; I want Tenn-Og up front with me."

He lifted the tank flaps and glanced at the gauge. One-third full! For a moment he was tempted to throw Smash off on that wilderness shore and let him get out to Russian Lake afoot, if he could. It was like Smash, with his mind on Lake Marianne, to come off with barely enough gas to return to Tellecoot.

There was plenty to reach the Lili-tuar headwaters, but none to bring the ship back south. When they reached the lake they would have no gas to maneuver with or get out to civilization.

Taking off, he circled to five thousand feet and started west, down the Iskitimwah. Fifteen minutes later, as he sailed out over the river-widening and the island of black lilies, he saw Tenn-Og look down at the country below and blink astonished eyes. Fifteen minutes and that same trip had taken six hard canoe-hours that morning!

Intending to approach his goal from the west in order to keep from flying over the main band of Klooshees, he headed on westward for sixty miles, then swung north and started up across the ranges, gradually picking up altitude till the needle quivered on fifteen thousand.

Tenn-Og kept looking out of the panel windows on each side, trying desperately to guide the flight. In the deep valleys under keel twilight was already gathering; the visibility was made still poorer by a pearly-gray haze that came drifting down from some forest fire in the Yukon country.

But his job was to guide them and he came through with it. As a mountain nomad he was somewhat used to heights, and by recognizing a familiar range or lake system now and then, he was able to keep his bearings.

At last he touched Curt's arm and pointed twenty miles east at two lordly cloud-wrapped mountains.

"Sunall and Dinagwah," he said; and he indicated that on the other side of them lay the headwaters lake.

Curt studied the giant twins carefully. He had to get down on that slightest hint of a plane in that country Karakhan would escape in his own ship, and they had no gas to follow. If the plane could climb high enough, he could cut off the engine and glide those twenty-five miles to the lake and so get there unharmed.

But to reach it without being seen was a harder problem, calling for all the flying skill he had. There was a flock of clouds swirling around the two giants and filling the pass between them. If he could keep behind some big cloud on his approach and fly through the pass by instruments, he would come out on the shadow side of Sunall. It would be twilight there and the plane would hardly be visible a mile away.

He put the plane into a steep circling climb. At eighteen thousand feet he geared in the supercharge to aid the laboring motor. The thermometer on the wing strut showed sixteen below and at nineteen thousand feet it dropped to twenty-one. He noticed his companions nodding drowsily and he kept a sharp watch over his own senses.

In the thin air he managed to get another thousand out of his plane. Twenty thousand feet high, he looked through a rift of cloud be-between the two mountains and caught a glimpse of the dark lake valley beyond. Cutting off the engine, he pointed the ship at the great cleft, and began the long silent glide.

Heading on and on toward the snowy pass, he plunged at last into the clouds that hovered around the giants. For a space of five minutes he slipped silently through fleecy woolpack, where the sky above and earth below were blotted out and only his instruments kept him pointed true.

When he came out of the woolpack, he was through the pass and down in the purple shadows of Sunall.

Dropping on down, with the dark waters slowly coming up to meet him, he veered in toward the south shore, under Tenn-Og's guidance. Three miles from Karakhan's cabin, he leveled off, plowed water and came to a stop. He was there, all right; he had made it without being seen or heard; but with less than six gallons of gas left, he would never get out of that mountain-cradled lake. No escape, no retreat—it was a locked tight now.

A light breeze blowing offshore began drifting the plane out into the lake. Paul reached the two stubby paddles from the canvas canoe outfit, and the four men clambered down on the floats. By strenuous work they managed to check the drift and start the plane
