Bovines Take Thriller In Extra Time Affair

Oilers Keep Score Close

Steers Victorious 38 To 34 In Extra Five Minute Play

After playing a bang-up fast and furious first quarter, the Steers saw their lead begin to fade after the half, and before the game was up the scrappy Forsan Oilers made plenty of excitement before the Bovines finally nudged out winner, 38 to 34, after five minutes of overtime playing.

As the fourth quarter opened Schultz, Forsan, made good several times from the side of the court to bring the count to 27 to 27. With one point lead, 32 to 31, and one minute to play, Forsan made the costly mistake by calling the fourth time-out. A prolonged argument resulted in Big Spring's favor, and Vendell Wood sank the free throw to tie the game up.

Trustee Explains How Warm Springs Fund Will Be Used

NEW YORK—Speaking of the use to which the endowment fund for Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis would be put, Keith Morgan, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Foundation and treasurer of the National Committee for the Birthday Ball for the President said:

"Today many leading orthopedic surgeons, many of them are on the Foundation's advisory staff, perform infantile operations without cost, then sending the patients to Warm Springs for convalescence. Warm Springs, through its department of education is now carrying on a nationwide effort to arouse the country to the seriousness of infantile paralysis. The National patients' committee operating out of Warm Springs is doing similar work."

"The Foundation works closely with the Rockefeller Foundation and every year furnished voluntary blood for experimentation with serum. As soon as the national birthday ball of January 30 is over and if the financial success is every thing we hope it will be, the Foundation under the leadership of the President plans to centralize and coordinate all other factors in the national crusade against infantile paralysis."

TWO WARD PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS IN MEETINGS

North Ward And East Ward Mothers Meet At School Buildings To Discuss Common Problems

Two Parent-Teachers' associations held meetings Thursday afternoon in their respective school buildings and discussed problems of the day.

The chief feature of the East Ward meeting was an address on "Spiritual Training" by Rev. C. A. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

The North Ward Parent-Teachers' association met at the North Ward school at 3:30 for a regular monthly meeting.

The fourth grade room had charge of the program under the direction of Miss Arthur Hawk. The following New Year's program was splendidly rendered: New Year's song by entire grade; Monologue, "Tomboy" Dorothy Buss; quartet, "Home on the Range"; Winnet Nance, Virginia Harris, Eugene Gobbel and Geraldine Henry; reading, "When Pa Begins to Shave" by Martin Dehlinger, Jr.

The business session was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. Dehlinger. Mrs. Smith led the opening prayer. The reports of the different committees were given. Financial means were discussed by the members and several plans started for raising funds for the organization.

The fourth grade room won a book for having the most mothers present. The book was donated by the president.

Due to inclement weather many of the regular attendants were absent. Present were: Mmes. Earl Phillips, M. Dehlinger, S. M. Stinson, Ralph Smith, J. F. Skalicky, L. L. Bugg, A. H. Bugg, V. L. Patrick; Misses Arthur Hawk, Lois Garden and Mary Fawn Coulter.

The East Ward Parent-Teachers' association met Thursday in a postponed meeting to hear Rev. C. A. Bickley talk on "Spiritual Training."

He said in part: "We used to think that when a child entered school our responsibility ended. Parents see differently now. We realize our sympathy must be with the teacher, as well as the child. Every child has a right to the best, even the poorest one. We should cooperate with the schools to this end; all children can not be successful but all can be useful. The child's development will be determined by the school, church and home. We should train our children for their own sakes, and the sake of the nation. They will compose an army soon to occupy places in the nation. We should realize the enormity of our task and work hand in hand. Our greatest blessings are these boys and girls."

Miss Haley's room gave the program which was opened by a song from the room. Wanda Reese gave two path selections, Alvin Rogers and Edith Hildreth sang "School Days." Melton Johnson, Sam Daniels and Kathryn Fuller put on a play. The West Ward Rhythm Band directed by Mrs. Frost gave two numbers, "Hall, Hall the Gang's All Here" and "Soldiers' Dream."

During a short business session the members discussed plans for a bridge tournament to be given the last of February. The date and plans will be announced later. The East Ward agreed to sponsor a Little Theater program to be given by Mrs. Frost at the high school in the near future. Sixteen trees were donated to the school campus by the mothers. Miss Haley's room won the attendance prize.

The next meeting will be on February 15. It will be a silver tea honoring Founder's Day, and cake and tea will be served. Present were: Mmes. A. L. Carlisle, Frank Covert, F. G. Sholte, D. W. Christian, Jr., J. L. Terry, Granville Glenn, D. Burrell, J. E. Padon, E. L. Newsum, Bernice Rutledge, D. P. Thompson, Weaver, T. B. Clifton, G. B. Long, John Tucker, W. R. Wilson, O. R. Johnson, I. The Daily Sport Mill By Tom Beasley

Bill Terry, New York Giant manager, apparently is courting trouble. Baseball men declare Bill has gone "high-hat" on them since his team won the 1928 world series. In fact some of them hope the Giants finish in the second division this year so Bill will get back to earth and be the agreeable person he was before his team won the pennant and the fall classic.

At Murphy, coach at Austin High school El Paso, has announced that he will return to Abilene high school as assistant coach. He will assume his new duties Monday.

Murphy was line coach at Abilene four years before going to El Paso in 1922. Teams he helped coach at Abilene won the state championship in 1928 and '32.

Rumor has it that there may be a meeting of the district Dads here Monday. The San Angelo representatives apparently has some matter of grave importance to bring before the committee. The nature of the matter to be discussed has not been disclosed.

The southern half of the district basketball tournament will be played at Colorado on February 18 and 17. The northern division will be played at Roby on the same dates.

Big Spring didn't make a very strong bid for the tourney site. The local team won't be a heavy favorite to win, therefore if the meet were held here and the Steers went out in the first round, school officials would probably have a deficit on their hands.

Just when Obie Bristow will return to camp hasn't been learned. However, Coach George Brown, who has been trying to impress on Bristow with the importance of spring grid training, announces that the spring work-out probably will not get under way until about the first of March. Too many of the gridsters are out for basketball seems to be the trouble.

This department resigns as official basketball score keeper. The long argument in the latter part of the Steer-Forsan game last night the number of times outs allowed. The Forsan coach, Horace White, knew the rules but stubbornly refused to acknowledge it. Since no rule book was available and the coaches couldn't agree, the official score keeper ruled that the Oilers had taken four time outs, one too many. Vendell Wook sank the charity toss to tie the game up for an extra five minutes.

We were again called a Har, crook thief, etc. in the closing minutes of the game when we marked no goal on a close toss by one of Forsan's cagers. We admit that the toss was a beauty and a mighty close one, but in my honest opinion it didn't go through the hoop. However, a large number of the spectators were just as sure that it DID go through.

The referee, Ray Cantrell, one of Black-Draught Gives Refreshing Relief "I have suffered a great deal from biliousness and constipation," writes Mrs. D. C. Jones, of Waterloo, Ala. "When I get bilious, I have a bad taste in my mouth, have sour stomach, my color is bad, I get dizzy and have the headache. When I take Black-Draught, it relieves me and I feel like a new person. I don't think there is a better medicine than Black-Draught."

WORLD'S LOWEST PRICED CAR WITH INDIVIDUAL WHEEL SPRINGING

COME SEE... The Only Low-priced Car with Individual Wheel Springing plus... Floating Power..Safety-Steel Body.. Hydraulic Brakes

YOU'VE SEEN TWO of the leading low-priced cars. Now see the only low-priced car with Individual Wheel Springing... PLUS the three other features that are vital to real car value today! Plymouth is the world's lowest-priced car with Individual Wheel Springing. It's on all models—even the lowest-priced. And note this: Plymouth's Individual Wheel Springing is the strongest and simplest type known. In principle, it's exactly like the kind used on much higher-priced cars! And you pay no price penalty to get it! But Plymouth gives you more than one feature to insure smooth, easy riding. Every Plymouth has patented Floating Power engine mountings to end engine vibration. These mountings are more than just rubber under the engine. They suspend the motor in balance—it absorbs its own vibration. You can rest and relax—because with these two big features, Plymouth gives you the smoothest ride in the low-price field. It's the Safest Low-priced Car Everyone wants to be safe—so look at Plymouth's brakes—and Plymouth's safety-steel body. Every Plymouth has a Safety-Steel body—built of steel reinforced with steel—then welded into one permanent piece. That means real protection. It means no joints to rot, pull loose or squeak. It means longer life with less need for "service" because of body troubles. And the brakes are all-hydraulic. No bolts, rods, cotter pins. Sure, smooth, equal action on all four wheels at all times—because hydraulic brakes are automatically self-equalizing. Plymouth is the only low-priced car that gives you all of these important features. In fact—no other low-priced car offers you more than one of them. Ask any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer to prove that Plymouth is a better engineered car. Ride in one today—and see what your money ought to buy this year. LOOK AT THESE PRICES: 2-door sedan $485; 4-door sedan $585; rumble seat coupe $645; business coupe $495. BLOND GODDESS

A New Social by Herbert Jensen

CHAPTER FIVE

It was natural that Grahame be asked to come to Hollywood on an "opportunity contract". It was natural that he should accept it. Grahame was quite willing that he be "found". He loved the jungle; he would always love it, but civilization had begun to take on a more substantial glamor that he had ever thought possible.

He would always feel a poignant ache at dawn or at sunset. In Hollywood flocks of parrots do not spin like vivid green wheels against a background of old rose, smooth savannahs do not shoulder between sullen walls of jungle, or do strange flower scents wrap you when you sleep.

Nevertheless Grahame liked cities, or at any rate, this one. He had discovered two old buddies among the flying stunt-men. Another had "gone native" and played heavies. These spots of still others that he would remember knowing well before he quit piloting planes for plotting jungle expeditions—personal, adventurous fellows that he had known in far corners, with whom he could yarn in vainglorious exaggeration.

He was about to make his decision to stay when he met Janice Kent.

As he helped her from her car and across the lawn to her Beverly Hills house he was sure that this accidental meeting was about to add pleasant finality to this decision.

"I'll be down in a minute or two," she said. "I'll phone Mr. Greene in the meantime."

In the drawing room, standing before the open fireplace, Frank thrust his upturned palms toward the crackling logs. It seemed incongruous in these tastefully appointed surroundings of civilization to allow himself to think of sinister shadows, of furtive pursuit; yet a frown of abstracted reflection reflected remained on his forehead.

Thoughtfully he rubbed at the slight soreness of his right knuckles. He could not drive away the mental image of the vulture-like profile shadowed on the studio window. Some dim memory faintly stirred—obscure as the hushed pulse of a native drum felt, rather than heard across miles of jungle.

Grahame, home in his apartment, stared moodily at the afternoon paper on his lap. With an angry gesture he pushed away the paper and stood up. He turned to another man seated where a westerly sun's rays slanted in. "Tell me, Spin," he said. "You know this racket out here. What in hell do they mean by publishing all this tripe? I called you over here five minutes after I bought this paper. You work for Myberg and the consolidated; so does Janice, and so I suppose, does this little liar Greene. Look . . . He kicked the paper toward the other.

Spin Winslow grinned. He did not glance at the paper but contemplated with a loving absorption the contents of his tall glass. "What's it say? You tell me, Frank. Did Greene say you fought desperately with a hundred things and snatched the swooning Janice from their hairy clutches?" Grahame snorted. "Something like that, only worse. I thought that little ant when I met him last night. He asked me if I had any baby pictures. Baby pictures! He test night—unless Greene shocked her with an outline of what he was going to write today. I phoned today to find out if she really was ill . . . She's a frail, delicate little thing."

Winslow laughed wholeheartedly. "Hold on, Frank. You phoned and couldn't reach her?"

"Yes, it worried me. I—say, how do you know?"

Winslow chuckled into his glass. "She was at the studio with Myberg and Ortega and me. She was confined all right but not to her bed. There's a new picture coming up—a honey—foreign stuff. She's to be the golden haired lead; I'm to fly the stunts."

"They were discussing who'll play opposite her, but they can't tell who'll fit until the continuity men hack out a plot . . . What d'ya mean she's frail and delicate? You couldn't club that girl to death—she's whale bone and gristle under that skin you love to you—"

Grahame's gesture interrupted the other.

"Who's Ortega?"

"A gentleman from Central America, Mexican, maybe." Winslow drained his glass and set it down. "I can't figure him myself. He showed up here a month ago with a lulu of an idea. Well, you know the publicity these Chicken Itza ruins in Yucatan are getting? He says he knows bigger and better ruins further in that country with more jungle around for the atmosphere shots."

"You know how Myberg loves his authentic backgrounds—or should—if you've looked at his pictures. Well this Don Raoul Ortega's idea is to use that old Maya business as the foundation. You're read stories of the blond gods, those ancient folks used to worship."

"Well this is to be a blond goddess picture, or at least she is to be his bride. The Bride of Quetzalcoatl is the tentative name." He laughed. "Myberg said he didn't like the name. It reminded too many people of pants and vests."

Grahame smiled. He liked this gossip fellow whose nerves were of steel beneath his happy-go-lucky, cynical exterior. But he wanted to know more of this man Ortega whose name Janice Kent had defended so arbitrarily the evening before.

He decided to take Spin partly into his confidence. He told him

February Gasoline Production Restricted By Administrator; Texas' Quota 6,000,000 Barrels

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Oil administrator Ickes Wednesday restricted February gasoline production to 27,140,000 barrels and ordered that stocks of gasoline as of February 25, should aggregate 22,180,000 barrels.

Gasoline production during February in the various refining districts, Ickes held, shall not exceed: Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, 3,420,000 barrels; Texas (Gulf Coast) 4,990,000 barrels; Louisiana and Arkansas (Louisiana Gulf Coast including Alabama) 980,000 barrels; North Louisiana-Arkansas (including Mississippi) 500,000 barrels.

TOTAL EAST TEXAS WELLS REACHES 12,123 JAN. 23.

KILGORE, (UP)—Completion of 28 wells since Jan. 19 today brought the total of oil wells in the East Texas field to 12,123, with a daily allowable of 397,497 barrels, Texas railroad commission figures indicated here Wednesday.

Potential production for the field mounted to 7,051,483—a gain of 16,470 barrels.

East Texas pipe line storage gained 15,891 barrels during the week ended Jan. 21, the commission reported, with a total of 2,678,355 barrels on hand on that day.

Total receipts for the week were 3,480,874 barrels, as compared with total deliveries out of the field of 3,229,917.

Forty-two East Texas refineries to their stills 384,887 barrels for the week ended Jan. 21, gaining 7,821 barrels over the previous week.

Thirteen plants in the field were shut down and three were under construction, according to the commission.

that Miss Kent seemed to agree that the idea that the accident may have been planned until Ortega's name was brought definitely into focus as the party responsible.

shooting. A stockholders' committee on which these interests were not represented would hardly be worth its weight in parsley.
The only class of bank stockholders likely to command any attention from the government are the mutual savings banks and insurance companies of Connecticut and Massachusetts. They won't join with the little fellows either but an effort is being made to interest them in protesting against deposit insurance and government intervention in banking affairs.

through the House gave the clearest possible picture of what the nation's attitude has stamped on Congressional brains.
Just one real argument was used by the men who guided it to passage—this is a Roosevelt Bill! And only 38 Republicans and 2 Democrats had the courage to vote against that label.

The only other argument was need for speedy passage so America could leap in and start foreign exchange operations along with or against Great Britain.
Inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt personally said he had had the gold seizure-stabilization fund-devaluation idea in mind since last October it must have been the House leaders who wanted the speed—to get a hot potato off their hands.

Notes—
A. D. Whitteide and Col. Robert H. Montgomery should be experts in the business of cooking up a credit scheme. Whitteide is president of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Montgomery is a member of a nationally known firm of accountants and recognized as a practical economist. James R. Claiborne, one of the two Democrats who voted against the gold bill—is a St. Louis lawyer and was elected by 1,004,170 votes. George B. Terrell—Texas Representative-at-large was the other one. He's a farmer-stockman politician who slid in by a majority of 73,742 votes. They probably figured they could vote their convictions and still spare a few next November.

NEW YORK

By James McMullen
Last Ditch—
Local conservatives are digging in for what is probably their final stand against the New Deal.

The Roosevelt forces have driven them from trench to trench and they know they have reached their last defenses. Every counterattack they have launched has melted under a barrage of public opinion. They have offered no real opposition since their sound money campaign fizzled so ingloriously. Most of their army has either accepted the President's leadership or retired to a sort of hopeless neutrality.

But now the battle's again rings once more. The object is to defeat prospective legislation which doesn't even pretend to be merely for emergency needs and aims frankly at economic reconstruction. The gold bill heads that way. The bill to create a Federal Monetary Authority will eliminate any remaining doubts about the government's purpose. Promotion of recovery in this case will coincide with laying the cornerstone for a new system, which would squeeze New York out of the driver's seat for keeps.
Many opponents of Roosevelt policies have thought it best to play along on the emergency stuff with strong hopes that the tide would swing their way again when the emergency wore off. But if new economic machinery blocks the return to old principles they're sunk. Hence the inner fervor of the last ditch battle on this issue.

Tactics—
There won't be any frontal attack on the administration's reconstruction policies. The opposition has learned that such tactics invite a pure tacking. Instead Congress will be patted on the back and urged to assert itself; the Senate will be encouraged to exercise its deliberative functions; the seed will be sown that such sweeping changes should not be made just on the administration's say-so. Then the hope is that Senatorial pride will assert itself against "White House dictatorship."
It may have been accidental but Owen Young's testimony on the gold bill before the Senate Banking Committee followed these lines exactly.

Hope—
Conservatives believe they can swing a lot of old-line Democratic support by these methods and feel almost chipper about the outlook. The Senate Banking Committee's vote to limit the gold bill to a three year maximum was the best news they had since March 4th.
Hope stirs for the first time in months that all may not be lost. And the last-ditch army is augmented by many who favor the emergency aspect of the Roosevelt program.

Stockholders—
Stockholders in the New York banks are getting uneasy about the effect of Washington policies on their personal investments. A move was started by one of them at the Irving Trust annual meeting to form a bank stockholders' committee as a measure of self-defense.
Bankers say it'll get them about as far as trying to stop a rainfall by cursing. The big local banks have about 800,000 stockholders but insiders remark there are few groups whose worries are less likely to move Washington to tears.
Moreover the bank stockholders with really important stakes—such as the Rockefeller, the Morgans, and the Baker estate—much prefer to play a lone hand than to get involved with a lot of small fry. Now will they assume leadership of the movement because of the perfect target they would offer in that position for Washington sharp-

Insurance—
Several local bank managements used their annual meetings to sound off about the unjust burden they claim is imposed on them by the permanent deposit insurance plan. That stirred up the stockholders more than any other problem.
The Washington outposts of New York banks report there is no hope of persuading Congress to substitute the temporary insurance plan for the permanent. The best they can possibly expect is a compromise which would fix ten thousand dollars as the top figure for insurable deposits.
This outcome would be O.K. with the local institutions if premium assessments were made on the basis of insurable deposits and not total deposits. They insist the latter leaves them holding the bag and the small banks think that would be swell. If you lay your chips against New York's wishes you probably won't be far wrong.

Encouragement—
A U. S. Senator recently visited some old friends in Wall Street. They piled him with questions about amending the Banking Act, the Securities Act, etc. He gave them this encouragement: "You can be darn sure that Congress will do nothing that could possibly please lower Manhattan if it can be helped."

Harmony—
A New Yorker who thought Congress was going to battle the President a bit this session remarks: "What's going on in Washington couldn't be called a fight in a rabbit hutch."

THE LIFE STORY OF LEE TRACY

"One thing I found out during those three years was this: 'Pep yourself up with old-fashioned pep talks. No matter what you want to be, convince yourself that you're good at it. But you've got to keep your senses about you for you never know when you might bump up against a wise guy who knows it all, possibly more than you. When you meet that sort of a fellow, you have to be ready to turn the subject immediately to something you know and something the other fellow doesn't know."
"I've talked myself into every job I've ever had—and I'll continue to do it."
He continued to bounce all over the country, hitting the one-night stands and the ten-twenty-thirties—but kept his eyes constantly trained on that flowing mecca of success, Broadway.
His tours came to end on the road with "The Cat and the Canary," and then he was given his first ride into Broadway for a part in "The Show-Off" at $100 a week. It was only a bit, but he had acted his small part with a fervor and intuition that aroused the noted dramatic critic, Alexander Woolcott of the New York Sun, to announce:
"There are so many theatres in this town that many a good and true performance in a minor role goes unsung, because no one has the time or the space to tell about minor roles. And these come to mind two—such performances which achieve perfection—no less. One is that of Gerald Haman in 'Candida,' the other is Lee Tracy's embodiment of the inventive brooker, 'The Show-Off.'"
So, at last, Tracy was playing on the "big street."
"And I didn't have a dime when I took that bit role," he said. "I had lost my health, my money, my charm and my girl and I was a pretty weak sister when I finally did crash the Broadway gate."
The girl? Tracy said it didn't matter now that he had lost her, but it taught him a lesson.
At the end of seventeen weeks he had saved $690 and had found a second girl.
"But don't ask me what became of that $690 and the new girl. They disappeared like the first did. I wasn't exactly a spoiled child, though I was an only son and you know what that means, but I guess my folks were a little too generous with me."
"The Show-Off" played fifty weeks—and again Tracy found himself without a dime. He decided to cease being a playboy and to save money again.
Then he obtained his first fast-talking role on the stage—as the book salesman in "The Book of Charles."
After that he played in such productions as "Glorious Hallelujah" and "The Wisdom Tooth"—in better roles, more important productions, and won better press notices.
He was selected for the leading role of the hoofer in "Broadway"—his first big chance—and he hit to that characterization a robust gusto that received praises from all the critics. Furthermore, the show ran for eight hundred and eighty performances.
At last, Lee Tracy had arrived. It introduced for the first time in footlight history the actual jargon of backstage and gangster life.
"It gave me an idea," Tracy reminisced. "It convinced me that its success was largely due to the new slant it gave the theatre-going public to a little element of life—language."
"About this time, luckily, I became acquainted with a Chicago gambler whose associates were big-shot gangsters and who, when I first met him, spoke a language so strange that I could hardly understand him."
"It was a gangster's language and I became intensely interested. I asked him to write a glossary of it for me and he labored on it for five days, then gave me five full pages of the strange and unusual words and phrases of the underworld."
"I memorized that rare glossary and have often used it in some of my stage and motion picture roles—not all of it, but only phrases here and there, for to exhaust the entire language in one picture would make my dialogue as difficult to understand as ancient Greek or Latin."
From there, Tracy branched into other "languages."
He began spending a good deal of his time in courtrooms, listening to lawyers address their juries. He studied the technique of the carnival and side-show barkers. He has spent hours watching one particular old-school Barker who ballyhoos for a concession at Santa Monica. He has visited jails as often as he could, has prowled around newspaper offices—until today he is the most fully versed actor on the various slangs of the country than any other player.
Tracy was on the road with "The Front Page" company in 1929 when his talents were noticed by film scouts and the Fox Company gave him a contract to appear in "Big Time."
But before he did so, he went back to Shavertown, Pennsylvania, and talked it over with his mother.

er. His father had died the year before.
"I always talk things over with my mother," said Tracy. "This is perfect. She understands me. She sympathizes with me. She loves me—and she always encourages me."
But Tracy's first year in Hollywood, he complains, was a sad one. Paul Muni had gone West with him in the same year, and also had been won over by a Fox contract.
"I've given three important parts and the idleness drove me crazy," Tracy grew homesick for the stage and New York. Both he and Muni were disgusted, and at the end of the year they went back to Broadway—maybe discouraged, but not beaten.
"I had second lead in 'Born Reckless,' with Charles Farrell, but I failed to set the Hollywood Hills on fire."
"Muni and I were pretty sore, not because we were paid too much money—$1500 a week—but because we never showed on the screen when the films were released."
"I went back to Broadway when my contract was up and worked for Sam Harris in 'Oh, Promise Me.'"
"Then I went fishing in Broadway, all by myself, for four months. I had gone down for only a month of fishing and would be there yet if I had not been called back to do 'Louder Please.'"
It was during Tracy's appearance in this play that Hollywood realized its big mistake—that its Tracy-boy had not been done right by.
"So Warner Brothers signed me—and from then on I've had to work for my living," Tracy sighed.
It was not the only offer. Offer after offer were being showered Lee Tracy's way by all the studios—so many that Tracy could pick the best at that time, so he chose Warner.
One of his first screen portrayals was in a reporter role in "The Strange Case of Molly Louvain" and then he appeared in "Love Is a Racket."
But it was his portrayal as the columnist in "Blessed Event" that skyrocketed his name into bigger lights over the nation's theatres.
He was a new type of player, a rapid-fire machine-gunner with dialogue and a dynamic personality that injected pep and spic into every picture honored by his presence.
Tracy admits he is a psychologist. He admits he finds a lot of pleasure in shocking people with challenging, sensational statements.
"I have a lot of respect for the newspaper columnist who delibrately makes a mistake in their columns. They use those statements to stimulate their readers and command their attention. They jolt people out of their seats and make them think. When they gain the attention they demand, then they go ahead and sell their real, truthful stuff. That's journalism. That's the reason why my columnist in 'Blessed Event' made such a hit. It was life."
After "Blessed Event," Tracy played the representative in "Washington Merry-Go-Around." This was followed by the lead in "Night Mayor," which increased his popularity with the fans.
He was the high-pressure circus press agent in "The Half-Naked Truth," and, next, the rocky Private Jones in the picture of the same name.
But it was his picture, "Clear All Wires," that won for him his long-term contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. In this, he played the leading role of the world-famous war correspondent.
His success in this was followed by "Turn Back the Clock," for M.G.M., the fresh shyster lawyer-abundance character in "The Nuisance," and the dynamic publicity director in "Bombshell," in which he is costarred with Jean Harlow, and as the theatrical agent who calls John Barrymore a "ham actor" in "Dinner at Eight."
"I am glad I am an actor," said Tracy. "I am proud of it. I have no high-flung ambitions to do other things. I believe every person should make a mistake in life—and acting is mine, for acting lifts and eases the burden of woe upon the world."
"Too, actors are happy people. The most hopeless down and outer on the stage, if given the slightest ray of hope, will transport himself into a Seventh Heaven."
"It takes so little to make an actor happy. That's why so many of them are poor, and never learn how to save money."
"For us, there is no Tomorrow—For Today is enough to think about."

Impossible To Send Park Inspector Here

Because it has been difficult to obtain competent landscape architects to plan and direct work, F. A. Dale, state park engineer, said it had been impossible to send a man to inspect the state park here.
The scenic mountain here is a state park, and efforts have been made to secure improvements for it.
Dale said in a letter to the chamber of commerce that if the C.W.A. were extended beyond February 15, he would go his "utmost to look into" the request for improvements here.
Gutzon Borglum, famous Belgian sculptor who conceived the idea of the Stone Mountain monument and is engaged in a similar project in North Dakota, is chairman of the advisory board on state parks.

ing should not be taken as a precedent.
But bear in mind that the first intention was to hold the bank stock bought to bolster weak sisters until a favorable market developed for disposing of it.
Now the order is to hold the stock. If the banks affected should make so bold as to buck future administration plans the RFC could step in where needed and vote itself control.
It's as fair assumption that if credit doesn't loosen up shortly it is going to be jarred loose. Federal deposit insurance banishes the fear of runs so the man on the street can sit back and grin at the shooting.

Whip—
The White House wants the Senate to pass the gold bill in the semi-essential form adopted by the House, 980-0. If you hear a crackling noise today it's the whip snapping from Mr. Roosevelt's end of Pennsylvania Avenue.
If the House can vote 9 to 1 to give Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau single-handed control over that two-billion-dollar stabilization fund, the President thinks it poor taste on the Senate's part to insist on a control board of five.

The Gusher
 Activities Of Forsan Public Schools

The Gusher staff is at a loss to know what to do about some material that has come through the mail. We appreciate any news that might be sent us, but we feel that the Gusher is losing sight of some of its ideals and purposes. We believe that a school paper: First, should carry the news of the community; second, it should encourage honest effort to excel in doing creative work in class recitations; and third, it should be a paper for the students of the school and reflect the school life.

The Staff.

BUFFS LOSE TO "FROSH"
 The Abilene Christian College "Frosh" beat the Buffs last Friday night in a basketball game played at Forsan. The Buffs were licked to the tune of 24 to 17. The Buffs played a good game, but they were not able to ring the basket as many times as did the Abilenelites.

The Buffs are scheduled to play Coahoma some time next week.

I see there's another mysterious character or two running at large around this school plant; one them is the Crystal Gazer and the other is a guy by the name of Mr. Anon or something—anyway that's what he had signed to the prelude to that bit of poetry he had in the paper last week. There's more mysterious things going on around here than any place in the world; it's even a mystery to me how Tommie Holloway and James Thompson have such a pull with their teachers. About this guy who wrote such an elegant piece of poetry about Cynical Sid, well nobody seems to know anything about who he is, but Sid has accused about a dozen people of being him and they say "No, it wasn't me, but if it will do you any good, I'll take the blame. Just tell everybody it was me." Sounds like a frame-up to me. But whoever it was, outside of gettin' a few facts mixed, did a pretty good job. He ought to start writin' these songs for some movie outfit. And that Cynical Gazer seems to know his onions. Why he can find out more about love affairs in one hour than I can in a week. Miss Moore and Miss Nelson didn't make a single blunder down at the faculty-school board dinner last Wednesday night. The board felt so proud of them that they voted to give each of them a silver loving cup. Mrs. Conger thought a torch singer was a guy who held a torch in one hand while he was singing so he would have a good light to read his music by, while we're speaking of teachers we might as well get the latest on Mr. White. Have you ever heard him croon? Of course all the women in the country think he ranks next to Bing Crosby, but here's what happened the other night. He got on a crooning spell and here comes Bill Conger a running with his shot gun. He thought the wolves had hold of his old cow. Doris Sadler and Grace Tension are kinda disappointed cause their names haven't been in the paper for a long time. Well, it's right this way; they have been doing things too mean and scandalous to be put in print. If they get their names in this column they're going to have to slow down a bit. Last week Avice Keith went to the show and saw Bing Crosby in "Going Hollywood." Ever since then she has been trying to get Thomas Yarbo to give up his lonesome cowboy singing and learn to croon. He has been trying to learn, but it seems he just can't get away from the old guitar. He asked James Madding how he could learn very quickly and James said it takes moonlight and Listerine. Mutt Scudsbury took Lucy Gregory to town Tuesday night and spent $2.25 on her. He would have spent more, but that was all she had. John Camp Adams had a date with Nova

SCHOOL BOARD IS ENTERTAINED
 Last Wednesday night the teachers of the Forsan school entertained the members of the school board and their wives, with a dinner at the Settles and a theater party following the dinner.

Mr. Norman C. Malechek was toastmaster and Mrs. Leland L. Martin represented the faculty in the capacity of hostess. Mr. Bethel, of Big Spring, sang "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Just Try Smiling". He was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Kirkpatrick, also of Big Spring. These special numbers were enjoyed by everyone. After the special music each member of the board was called on and made a talk. These talks were followed by remarks from the wives of the Board members and teachers.

Guests of the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. J. I. McCaslin, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Al Wilmoth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adams, Mr. Bethel, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mr. Bill Conger and Miss Frances Coulson.

Hosts and hostesses were: Mr. and Mrs. Leland L. Martin, Mrs. Conger, Misses Doris Turner, Mirl Moore, Eloise Nelson, Kitty Wingo, Messers. Norman C. Malechek, Horace White, and Ira Lee Watkins.

Holloway Saturday night. Ever since then he has been calling her "potter." I guess that is because she's just a big pain in the neck. And that reminds me Audrey Chambers calls his new girl "appendix" because it costs so much to take her out.

Yours,
CYNICAL SID.

Again we print material that was sent to the Gusher through the mail.

RUMORS AND ROOMERS
 There rumors and roomers—But then, some rumors are also roomers after all. There is at present a rumor abroad that a certain roomer also abroad is going under an alias Cynical Sid. Of course, furthermore, this Cynical is supposed to be a very timid individual—says rumor of this roomer. And, no doubt, that is the exact, good and sufficient for the alias. On the other hand it is easy to see that a alias would come in mighty handy under the circumstances—considering some of the deep, dark secrets said roomer exposes, some perhaps more or less true—and probably less than more. Folks telling tales under their own names are far too easy to catch, you know.

"Though we would hesitate to call names, rumor has it that this roomer, Cynical Sid, talks with a distinct drawl which takes time in saying things where the time should be spent rather in thinking first."

Rumor has it that one should think twice before he speaks but we know some roomers who decline to think even once. And so much this time for this roomer!

ROUGH-HOUSE RHYTHM
 A charming young fellow named Molly Can perhaps be excused for his folly When in swallow-tail coat He quite got his own goat When the faculty meeting got jolly.

A resourceful young lady named Frances Had a "come-back" in all circumstances Till a man with a gat Stopped to help fix a flat Then her whole world dissolved in mad fancies.

Miss Dot whom we'll not leave unchecked By the sun is so generously freed She resembles a guinea, Or perhaps a good many, Say the guinea with white has been speckled.

Martin, the murderous monkey Makes molly non-mutinus flunkies Murmur much mighty bad Of monotonous manners most junky.

—Vitrillie Viney.

THE QUESTION BOX
 "Why did Tommy Holloway tear out for home the other day? I saw him running towards home, keeping to cover as much as possible," asked by Lorene Clements. He tore his pants about half-way down, so he thought he had better get home or Mr. Martin would send him to join a nudist colony.

"What was that awful explosion last Tuesday at the fifth period?" —Mr. Watkins.

Mr. Malechek was having an experiment with chemicals in the laboratory, when he got to thinking of Christmas or something, maybe it was the great inspiration, and he mixed the wrong chemicals. The result was that it knocked him through one of the windows. I don't know that he discovered invisibility but he had disappeared. Better luck next time, science class, maybe the next explosion will knock him back into his senses.

Wilma Ford wants to know if Mr. Martin is ever going to grade the solid geometry papers. It will get them graded in the next two weeks, if he has time.

"Who did J. D. Bring to the ball game Friday night?" asked by Ollie Ruth. Her initials are M. S. It looks like a real case. They were at the party together again Saturday night.

"Who wrote that poem about Cynical Sid last week?" asked by Nova Holloway. It is still a mystery to some folks, but I know who wrote it. It was two girls in the senior class. Their initials are M. M. and M. W.

"Will I ever get to play in another basketball game this year?" —John R. Adams. From all indications, no. This goes for all second stringers also. But then there is the Junior tournament.

"Why does Marie Womack think she is so smart?" asked by Audrey Chambers. She don't think it, she knows it.

"What was Bobby and Anita talking about at the school period last Thursday?" asked by Kathryn Cowley. It is too confidential to tell.

"What is Mutt Scudsbury's ambition?" Rayford Liles. To croon over the radio.

"Will I get a job when school is out?" James David Madding. Yes, you will get a job washing dishes in a canteen.

"Why is James Madding so happy this week?" Minnie Campbell. Don't ya know? Doris is back.

Jodie Distler wants to know if he will ever get a date with a girl. Well, I'll tell you Jodie, it's like this, then girls up here in this here school is very particular who they go with. I asked one of them about you and she said she had never gone with such a critter as you, but she might sometimes. That's a hint.

"Will the string band ever be able to play, 'Just Because' so that you can tell what it is?" —Bernice Roberts.

No, the case is hopeless, a new fiddler would help, the one we have ain't no good. (Don't take this to heart Aida, it is just a joke.)

"Why did so many seniors go to the sophomore party?" asked by Charles Bruton. I have no idea, has anybody?

"Did Mr. Malechek really wipe up the floor at the Elbow party, Saturday night?" Vivian Fern Caldwell.

Boy, I'll say he did, he and Tommie Yarbo took a toboggan slide down the main drag when their boots went out from under them telling during a race, and they did a good job of cleaning up the floor.

"Where was I and what was I doing Saturday night?" asked by Carl Adkins. I have not the slightest idea, I wasn't there.

Well, this is enough for this time, so I will close with oodles of love. Yours till Niagara falls,
THE CRYSTAL GAZER.

A MISUNDERSTANDING
 Last week one of the high school girls left her "galoshes" (Look it up in the dictionary) at school. Being afraid that they might be lost, as soon as she arrived at home, she called the high school. Mr. Malechek answered the telephone. She asked him to look in the girl's cloak room for her galoshes, and if he found them, to put them away in safe keeping. He said he would. The next morning as soon as THE QUEEN arrived at school, Mr. Malechek met her and asked her if she found her galoshes. She said "yes, I have found my galoshes." Malechek, it consternation, added: "I thought you said galoshes. No wonder I could not find them. Well, dern it, why in the heck didn't you say overshoes?"

"DIANA OF THE CROSSWAYS"
 By George Meredith
 The opening chapter of "Diana of the Crossways" is a hard one to get by. It gives one the impression that Meredith's mind is so charged with brilliant generalities that he must rid himself of them before he begins his narrative. Indeed he says at the conclusion of the chapter, "Wherewith to our story, the froth being off the bottle."

The narrative begins with the second chapter, and is given in episodic manner, interlarded here and there by essay-like comments from the author.

Diana is one of the super-women of all romance. She is brilliant, imperious, storm-tossed, but ascending. After Meredith has created so peerless a creature, he has her do a most base and despicable act; in brief, she sells a state secret that has been confided to her sweetheart. O first thought one would say, "Meredith, don't Diana, the sinner. He should have kept his hands off the superb creature that he had created." But, if one examines Meredith's philosophy more closely, he will decide that Meredith's thought is: to be errant, even widely, does not pollute the springs of character if the heart be pure.

The book is not light reading, but if one persists and is able to extract the full flavor of Meredith's brilliant profundity, his reward is pure intellectual joy.

Monday afternoon Etha McCaslin, Vivian Caldwell, Lois Reed, Lois Bryant, and DeAlva Ford challenged the grade school girls to a game of basketball. The grade school girls loaned the girls from the high school one of their girls in order that they might have a team. The grade school went in with the fear of being "mopped up" by the high school; however, they had confidence by the end of the game for the score was a tie.

The meeting, held at Hotel Wooten, in Abilene, brought an attendance of 75, including the 13 local dentists who were hosts.
 The speaker discussed the dental profession from the financial angle, telling the group: "Dentistry has adjusted itself—just as the automobile industry has by building better cars for less money—by making possible better dentistry in times like these.
 "If American people would go back to their dentists and discuss the dental problems which come within their ability to pay, there would be fewer restorations and false teeth worn in the future, be-
