NEW YORK the Business steps into the final 1953 quarter today with some persons so intent on a possible twist in the trial that they may be missing the view from the high plateau.

Reports now being released tend to stress alight cutbacks from previous records, or any slowing down in the rate of increase. The trend is important to businessmen, of course, since they have to guess abead or find their planning has gone very sour. But at the moment business as a whole is doing mighty well.

Opening Of Grid Games With A Prayer Good Sign Of The Times

Action of the school board in approving plan for opening all football games with a prayer is commendable.

This is not because it conforms to a general practice within the district, but because it demonstrates a proper awareness of the presence of the Divine Spirit in all our affairs.

The objectives of this brief spiritual exercise are worthy, for out of it should come a feeling of fellowship in the face of competition. Moreover, the ideal of sportsmanship and clean play is apt to be promoted in the presence of a sense that God been asked to watch over the pro-those who watch from the states will be given a better perspective for their attentions. Most of the difficulties that have arisen in the past have started in the stands. The saying of a prayer should be a reminder to the few irresponsible persons that they are after all attending a clean and wholesome school activity and should conduct themselves accordingly.

Many places have followed this plan with fine results. Southwest Conference schools habitually open their games with a prayer. It is a good thing when hundreds and even thousands of people, gathered for recreation and relaxation, take time to give thanks and ask for

Prime Function Of Newspapers Is To Provide Accurate Information

Like almost every other group or profession, the American newspapers have their "week." Thus, this special season affords us opportunity to say something about newspapers.

A lot has been said about functions of newspapers, but after all is said and done, the primary job is to gather and distribute the news of the day. The American con-cept is that news should be accurately, reported and as free from bias and distortion as is humanly possible.

To this has been added the task of digging out background material in an effort to help the individual reader properly asnews and to arrive at some basic conception of what is the truth. In this connection we have the field of interpretative writing. Unhappily, there are too many columnists who think and write like most of us—they start with their basic prej-udices and sift out such facts as will fit them. Consequently, the reader is left to through a floodtide of conflicting opinions, something which is rather natural inasmuch as human beings have a faculty for disagreement. The newspaper also deals in opinion, generally speaking in its editorial columns, such as these. Not all of these words approach the profound, much less infallibilty. Nevertheless they serve their purpose they sitr the reader to thinking. suspect that most newspapers would account themselves successful if they were able to stimulate readers in their quest for information and their ability to think

It's Difficult To Understand Why People Flock To Cities ing reports, to be digested and used in

We temporary farmers who, with the first breeze of spring, rush from the city to push a seed into the soil, depart from our farms in the autumn when the leaves turn red and golden.

The mixed life of city dweller and farmer, of woodman and taxi-rider, of eating the fruits of one's labors or the French concoctions of the Colony Restaurant-it is a life of contrasts. Today I write in peace and solitude, except for the call of a cathird, the cooing of pigeons and the rustling of the wind through the leaves; tomorrow I shall hear the incessant clang of steel on steel, the dun grind of a parade of automobiles, a million radios blaring their varied echoes through a million open windows, the conversations that rise from nowhere but are heard all over as the sound of the city.

One sometimes wonders why any of us return to the vast cities; yet, I have seen prospective Thoreaus vegetate on the countryside. The intention is always to produce a great work, to sit upon a rock and gaze upon the heavens whence comes inspiration. And only too often one gazes until ideas flee like the humming bird. The mind relaxes and the work that was intended remains an intention.

1 recall when sometime in the 1920's, I sat upon a rock on the island of Chinsan in the Yangtse River watching the waters of that mighty stream swirl in a torrent and then meekly disappear in the wide stream. I wrote about it then and said that a Buddhist priest told me that it was like washing the brain. That was the first time I had heard the expression, and it was right that it should come from a Buddhist, for that is their objective in life, to achieve Nirvana, the sum total of nothingness, which is perfection.

And that, too, I have noted here in the country where it is possible to sit quiety and wash one's mind of the accumulations of trivia. Who really cares, I ask you, if these two celebrated morons are married or divorced or whether having publicly quarrelied, they have as publicly core reconciled. The robins, too, quartel and more and mate and quarrel and nobaly buthers with it but the robins. The crow flies buch and roars his song, but no pressurent announces the news. The skunk poes by and waves his calling card everywhere like some humans.

Like Dick Tracy's Radio, TV May Be Clamped On Your Wrist

The opinions contained in this and other articles in this column are solely those the writers who sign them. They are not to be interpreted as necessarily reflecting opinions of The Hersid.—Editor's Note.

Science's bid to make Dick Tracy's wrist radio a practicality, the transistor, has lost some of its fanfare.

Touted as the solution to all problems of electronics when its discovery was an-nounced a year ago, the little gadget still hasn't brought television within range of all West Texans.

Chief hurdle the transistor hasn't cleared is its inability to handle high frequency impulses, which are what TV principally deals in. But the research people are busy trying to adapt the mite-sized vacuum tube substitute to high frequency. It may too many years until you can get for $19.95 a transistor-equipped little TV set that you can take wherever you go.

And of course it will pick up television programs on practically any channel you desire, the programs, from all over world, having been boosted across the oceans, mountains and deserts by other transistors strategically situated to take the place of a bunch of wires, transmitters and whatever else the television and radio people use.

Maybe, by that time, the producers and advertisers will have done something about the quality of the programs they push into private homes, also.

The transistor, which will provide everything but the good programs, is nothing more than a tiny metal bead which has the capacity of passing an electrical current in only one direction. One of the little heads, smaller than a match head, takes the place of a big old vacuum tube, like your radio is full of.

Presently, transistors are made of germanium, a rare element which is kinda expensive as well as not adaptable to high frequencies, very high frequencies and ultra high frequencies that TV pushers refer to as VHF and UHF, etc.

Researchers are investigating alloys of antimony and aluminum, antimony-gallium and indium-antimony, which sound scarce but are hoped to have the capacity to do with UHF what germanium does with a slow-motion telephone circuit.

When this new transistor is worked out, manufacturers can stuff enough of them into a watch case to make a TV Set, broadcasters can get into business in a place like Big Spring for less than a million bucks, and the 8-to-5 clock watchers will be sneaking peeks at their wrist televisions.

The watchful workers probably won't forget that the boss might be playing Dick Tracy. He could have his own wrist set geared to the office or the shop, just to see what happens when the cat's away. -WAYLAND YATES

Chances For True Peace Parley On Korea Fading Out Rapidly

WASHINGTON - There will be no Korean peace conference. That is the present conclusion of American policy-makers directly concerned with trying to work out the details of the meeting due to begin less than a month from now.

The shadow-boxing at the United Nations will continue. But the exchange between the Communists and the nations that fought in Korea led by the United States will be almost entirely on a propaganda level. An about face in the Communist attitude could, of course, alter this appraisal. No one expects such an about

In August when the U. N. Assembly met in special session to discuss the time, the place and the participants for the conference agreed upon in the truce terms, it was believed that both Peiping and Moscow desired a meeting. Since that time, according to the belief here, the Communist leadership has rejected a conference held under the truce terms.

But while no one here expects a peace conference, neither is there any serious apprehension that the war in Korea will be resumed. Syngman Rhee, President of the Republic of South Korea, goes on proclaiming his intention to resume the war if no agreement is reached. He makes that statement in his latest interview, in the New York Times, professing, too, his confidence that American and other troops in Korea will join the South Korean division in a march on the North

The Rhee interview may well have been inspired by reports that the United States putting forward a plan for the neutralization of Korga with the removal of all foreign troops, Western and Com-munist, from the Korean peninsula. Never, said the President, would he agree to any such neutralization.

Actually the neutralization proposal has only the most shadowy parentage. It seems to have been a trial ban up to demonstrate that the United States did have a plan for the future of Korea which would be acceptable to the Western Allies in the event that they should sit down together across a conference table from the Communist representatives. The neutralization concept was in the speeches at the current Assembly session of both Selwyn Lloyd, chief British delegate, and Lester Pearson, Canada's Minister of External Affairs Neutralization of Korea with munist Chinese troops leaving the North and American, British and other troops leaving the South is an attractive idea. But no one with real knowledge of the situation expects this to happen.

The South Korean army is strong as the training of additional divisions goes forward to a total of 20. North Korea has at best a weak, puppet army. Therefore the Chinese would not be likely to agree to pull out in effect leaving the field to Rhee and his forces.

The harsh reality, as viewed from Washington, is that a Korean conference would be nothing more than another embittered wrangle in any event. The chances are 99 out of 100 that the only result would be the continuing partition of the the two sides facing each other across the present neutralized zone. Since this is the outlook, no one can feel too badly that the chances of a conference being held diminish to a vanishing point as the

All though the ups and downs of the truce negotiations President Rhee's insistence on unification by force if and when peaceful means failed was a stumbling block which several times nearly ended the negotiations. By unification Rhee invariably means the extension of the power of his government over North as well as South Korea.

The conviction in Washington that Rhee will not go through with his threat is based on several factors. One is the urgent need to get on with rehabilitation in the stricken country. Millions of homeless, widespread disease, hunger, this is the tragic plight of a country fought over from north to south in three years of war. A second factor is the control by the United States of supplies going to the Korean military. Those supplies, which can be pinched off on orders from Washington, are vital for any resumption of the war. The harsh realities of a divided Korea dictate keeping American troops in South Korea at about the present strength for the forsecable future. This means a serious continuing drain on American man-power. It means another interim situation of neither war nor peace as in Germany Austria, Trieste. But that is apparently the normal in an abnormal work

Bats Have High Pitch Hearing

Radar is an invention of the present from tuning forks, from explosions. When century, but something like radar has been employed by certain flying animals for time untold. People use electric waves which bounce back, but bouncing sounds are employed in the animal "radar." Bats, the only furry animals which can fly by flapping wings, employ a sound system to guide them in the dark. Bats have eyes, but their eyes fail to work in truly dark places. Scientists have blindfolded bats at times.

Even with their eyes covered, bats are able to keep from striking wires stretched across a pitch-dark room. With their keen ears, bats are able to hear sounds which bounce back from objects in their way; The animals make noise which the human ear fails to hear, but the bats are warned by the bouncing There are various ways to produce sounds. They may come from vocal cords, a man sings bass (pronounced "BASE") his vocal cords may vibrate only 60 times a second. A woman's high soprano, on other hand, may come from vocal cords which vibrate 1,280 times a second.

We can hear the whole range of human singing easily enough, and we also hear other sounds with lower or higher vibrations. On the average, a person can hear a low sound made by 16 vibrations a second. Some human beings can hear high sounds with vibrations up to 20,000 per second.

The bat, however, could win a contest against us. It can hear sounds up to 98,000 vibrations per second!

While on the subject of sound, let us review the speed of sound waves. They travel about one fifth of a mile per second through the air. They go through water about one mile in a second, and carry along iron at about three miles a second.

Continental Seeks Extended Air Route

WASHINGTON UM-Continental Airlines, Inc., has appealed to the circuit court here in an effort to expand its air service in Texas and Oklahoma.

The airline is appealing a Civil Aeronautics Board ruling last week to operate between Oklahoma City and Dallas-Fort Worth, Tex., by way of Chickasha, Lawton, Fort Sill and Duncan, Okla.

At the same time the board re-affirmed i = decision denying Continental's application for an extenion of its route from Wichita Falls to Dallas and Fort Worth and did not change its ruling allowing Braniff Airways to operate a Tul-sa-Dallas non-stop service. Continental had also sought the Tulsa-Dallas service.

The effective date of its orders was deferred by the CAB until one day after a court decision.
