

Committee to rewrite Student Affairs Code

A joint faculty-student committee will be appointed before the end of this semester to revise the Code of Student Affairs, Tech President Grover E. Murray told students at the initial President's Seminar Monday night.

"You have every right to expect a revision of this code," he said. "But you also must remember that students cannot run a university by themselves."

The code, which governs individual student conduct, had been severely criticized by students last spring following a Committee on Student Organizations decision not to allow unchaperoned women in fraternity lodges.

DR. MURRAY also told students that they should "talk to your parents" concerning higher taxes to support higher education in Texas.

"Somebody's going to have to come up with more money to keep up with expanding education," he said. "And it will probably be higher taxes."

His statement implied that proponents of a rise in tuition at state-supported colleges and universities will have difficulty in getting a bill through the state legislature next year.

Last summer Dr. Murray told members of the state budget board in Austin that he thought a tuition raise—as much as double the present tuition—would "be in order" to help finance the increasing costs of higher education.

Dr. Murray said the purpose of the conference was to "improve communications" between students and administrators. "When communications break down, trouble develops," he said.

HE OUTLINED the basic structure of Texas Tech and discussed some of his major plans for the university.

Dr. Murray said the proposed International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies would "give special emphasis to Texas Tech. It will give us a jump on other Texas universities."

He referred to a request by the Coordinating Board for each university in Texas to instigate a special program to individualize the university. Tech was the first to respond.

Directories on sale soon

Off-campus directories will be delivered and ready to sell sometime this week, the earliest after registration a delivery has been made, for the lowest price ever—30 cents.

Tech's policy of no late registration enables the fast delivery, a Tinsley spokesman said.

Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity in charge of distribution, and Tech Bookstore, also aiding in distribution, will divide the profits made from the 30 cent fee collections.

"TCASALS won't change the institution overnight," he said, "and it's not intended to. It doesn't mean any drastic changes. But it could become a major tourist attraction if it's done right."

"INSTITUTIONS go down in history for having special capabilities. That is what this program is designed to do."

In explaining his role as a public relations man for the university, he said, "Tech has a message to tell the public concerning its programs and problems."

He told of visiting a "major funding agency" in Washington, D.C. and introducing himself as president-elect of Texas Tech.

"They played in the Gator Bowl last year, didn't they? I believe they're down in the valley—what town is it?" was the response.

"THIS ILLUSTRATES that we have to sell this university," Dr. Murray said. "That is what I am trying to do in my numerous speaking engagements."

Another of his major duties, he said, is to work with the legislature, governor and other state officials, including the Coordinating Board. As an example of this, he cited presentation of a proposal for a medical school for Tech at the Sept. 18 meeting of the Coordinating Board.

He also mentioned the possibility of a student serving as "president for a day."

IN A QUESTION and answer period following the new president's presentation, Bill Beuck, president of the Student Association, asked his opinions concerning the name-change issue.

Dr. Murray reiterated his statement that he did not plan to take an active part in the issue and that he hoped it would not be brought to full public attention until the legislature meets in January.

ATTENDING THE SESSION were Beuck; Gary Rose, Student Association; David Lewis, Alpha Phi Omega; Genelyn Cannon, Association of Women Students; Nancy Taylor, Panhellenic;

Sandra Harris, Women's Residence Council; Marston Mardor, Religious Interest Council; Fe Busby, School of Agriculture; Samuel Cummings, School of Business Administration; Norman Glenn, School of Engineering; David Snyder, The University Daily;

Sharon Baumgardner, School of Home Economics; Alan Murray, Interfraternity Council; Suzanne Crain, School of Arts and Sciences; Karyn Poff, Women's Service Organization; Beverly Barlow, Tech Union; Ronnie Brown, Board of Student Organizations; and Bob Fillpot, Saddle Tramps.

Freshman petitions are ready

Issuance of petitions for the upcoming Freshman Council elections begins today at 8 a.m. and continues through Thursday in the Student Senate Office.

Petitions are due Monday at 5 p.m. in the Coronado Room at which time petitioners will receive regulations for the election. Each petition would have 75 signatures.

Requirements for council membership are: classified as a freshman, enrolled for 12 semester hours, maintain a 2.0 grade point average for 12 semester hours over the term of office.

Election day will be October 7. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and resume from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Booths for off-campus voters will be in the Administration and Tech Union Building. On-campus students must vote in their dormitories.

Senate slows Katzenbach confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicholas Katzenbach wholeheartedly supported U.S. foreign policy Tuesday but promised not to become a yes man as undersecretary of state.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee suspended judgment on his nomination to the No. 2 post in the State Department.

Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., at first said the committee had approved Katzenbach's appointment, but then reported the approval was being suspended because of an objection by Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn.

Fulbright said McCarthy, who was not at the committee session, had "an important question" he wanted to ask Katzenbach. So, Fulbright said, the committee suspended action pending another hearing.

AT TUESDAY'S hearing, Fulbright sharply questioned whether Katzenbach, now attorney general, could fulfill the role of devil's advocate-skeptical challenger of policy decisions—within State Department councils.

"I didn't realize that you were so completely and unreservedly devoted to our present policy," said Fulbright. "I don't think you should be quite so subservient to our present policy."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, concerned about too much of a unanimity of view in the State Department, urged the devil's advocate role on Katzenbach.

MANSFIELD, also a member of the committee, recalled that the man Katzenbach is replacing—Undersecretary of State George W. Ball—had performed such a function.

"I would hope that the devil's advocate would not be lost with your appointment. I hope you will undertake that responsibility so the President can have the benefit of all sides of all questions," Mansfield said.

Katzenbach indicated he would try, and said that as attorney general when all his advisers are in agreement on an issue, "That's when I get nervous."

NO VOTES were cast against Katzenbach's nomination, the committee reported. If the Senate concurs, Katzenbach will become the No. 2 man in the department, just below Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

He told the Senate that he "has the greatest admiration for the secretary."

Lt. Gov. Smith stresses 'change' at BSO Banquet

"Social upheavals have changed the relationship of every student to his college," Lt. Gov. Preston Smith told approximately 170 campus leaders Tuesday night.

"As campus leaders a new role has already been thrust upon you. The explosions of knowledge and enrollments have so increased the size and complexity of many universities there have been disturbing and violent reactions," the 1934 alumnus added during the annual BSO Presidents' Banquet in the Coronado Room of Tech Union.

Smith earlier had congratulated the group of presidents from recognized campus student organizations. "Your office is an opportunity and a challenge to contribute to the quality of Tech," he said.

BASING THE majority of his speech on change, Smith cited several areas in which changes are constantly encountered. He said the most obvious and most spectacular changes have occurred in science and engineering.

Another change, developing less rapidly and dramatically than science and engineering, Smith said, is bigness. "Slowly and relentlessly there has been developing for centuries the tendency toward larger, more organized and more complex organizations and institutions."

He said this trend toward bigness and complexity is a threat to individual freedom and integrity. "To relinquish to others that which we have been accustomed to doing in a more personal way is disturbing," the Lieutenant Governor said.

"WE HAVE a feeling of lost identity, a feeling of isolation, and a feeling of being only a number, a statistic," he added.

Applying the theme of change to Tech, he emphasized the changes that have taken place here since he graduated 32 years ago. In 1934 there were approximately 2,300 students enrolled and nearly ten times that many today, he said.

Lt. Gov. Smith, quoting from Mirabeau B. Lamar's first message as president of the Republic of Texas, said, "The cultivated mind is the guardian genius of democracy, and while guided and controlled by virtue, the noblest attribute of man."

The difference between our educational system and that of the Soviet Union is that education in a democracy is not used as a means of producing conformity but should be seen as a means to facilitate the growth of diversity through the development of

U. S. bombing raids supported by Thailand

(AP)—Thailand declared Tuesday that no member of the United Nations nor any of its officials has the right to sell away the right of South Viet Nam to exist as a free nation.

In a policy speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Thanat Khoman, foreign minister of Thailand, opposed any U.S. decision to halt the bombing of North Viet Nam and begin a military withdrawal without matching concessions from the Communists.

The 118-nation assembly also heard Paul Hasluck, foreign minister of Australia, declare that North Viet Nam "wants not agreement, but surrender."

Dr. Murray address set today at 10

Tech President Grover E. Murray will make his initial appearance before the student body at today's 10 a.m. convocation in the Coliseum.

Ten o'clock classes will be dismissed for this first hour-long Student Senate-sponsored convocation.

"We believe every student is eager to know the manner in which we may best join Dr. Murray to make Texas Tech the great university that we know it can be," said Gary Rose, vice president of the Student Association.

"After many years of misunderstanding between the administration and students, we are looking forward to a new era in which students and administration can work together," Rose said. "Dr. Murray's speech will enable us to know how we may best do this."

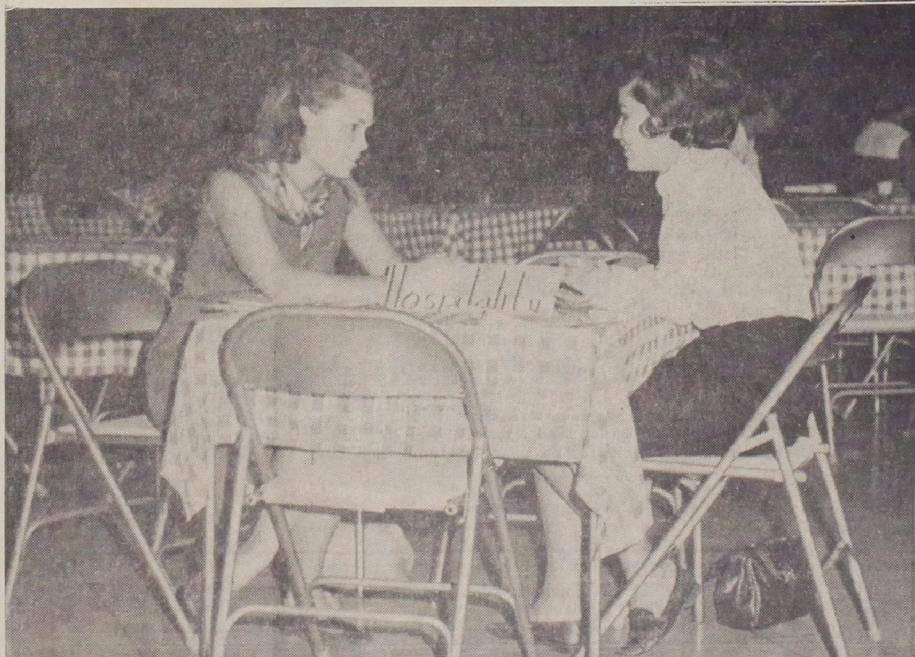

each individual's ability and intelligence, he said.

Smith concluded that the problem of preserving our integrity and identity must be solved without random and senseless rebellion. "A larger institution, whether it be a university or state government, does not necessarily diminish individual freedom. In many ways you live a more liberated student life, because Tech is large enough to include a rich diversity in its programs."

peace conference in Manila next month to be attended by President Johnson. They are allies of the United States in Viet Nam.

"A truly worthy solution to the Viet Nam war must see to it that aggression shall not be rewarded and that South Viet Nam should be assured essentially of being able to maintain its freedom and independence and not be delivered with bound hands and feet to the conquerors," Khoman said.

UNION RECRUITERS—Joan Williams (left) and Diane Lewis talk over strategy for recruiting Tech Union committee members. In keeping with the "Rathskeller" theme a movie, "Student of Prague," will be shown today at 7:30 p.m. in the Coronado Room of the Union.

Students exhibit art

Paintings by two Tech students are among 19 on exhibit until Oct. 8 at the Tech Union. The students are Terry Snyder and Mike Craft.

The paintings are part of the Traveling Art Exhibition of Region 12 Association of College Unions. They represent nine colleges and universities in the three-state region of Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas.

Each painting was a winner in contests at the college it represents. The exhibit will circulate all year in college unions as part of their fine arts programs.

"The exhibit is an attempt of the Association of College Unions to share talent of various campuses," said Dorothy Pijan, Tech Union program director. "The exhibit gives students a chance to have their works viewed and to develop interest in fine arts among college students," she added.

The paintings were judged Sept. 12 at Arlington State College, headquarters for the project, but the winners have not been announced.

PRE-MED & PRE-DENTAL STUDENTS

There will be an organizational meeting for all pre-med and pre-dental students tonight at 7:00 in room 2 of the Chemistry Building.

Make the voice active

This morning's all-school convocation offers Tech students a prime opportunity to learn more about their university and its new president.

It is an opportunity of which we hope all will take advantage. If it is a success, it is logical to expect that more such convocations will follow.

Since officially becoming president 28 days ago, Dr. Murray has continually stressed the need for a "wholesome interrelationship" among the several elements of the university, including students, faculty, administrators, ex-students, parents, members of the board of directors, legislators and other state officials and the general citizenry.

He realizes and stresses the fact that these elements must cooperate with each other before Texas Tech can achieve its full potential.

Today's all-school convocation and last Monday's initial President's Seminar are examples of his efforts to improve communications between students and administrators.

In the past this has been a weak relationship, with students totally unaware of what was happening in the east wing of the Ad Building.

And because they did not know what was happening, they could care less about it. We maintain that if students are informed as to the policies and programs of Texas Tech, they will take an active interest in them.

And along with this active interest will come suggestions for improvements from students. If the administration is willing to educate the student body as to its policies and programs, then surely it is willing to listen to their suggestions. Surely it will be willing to listen to student voice.

Attendance at the convocation at 10 a.m. today in Municipal Coliseum will indicate whether or not students are ready to help close the student-administration gap. It will be a barometer of student interest in the affairs of Texas Tech, often heretofore criticized as apathetic.

It will show whether students are ready to assume a new active, rather than passive, role.

Is Red China preparing for war?

(AP)—Is Red China increasingly isolated from the rest of the world, preparing for a major war?

The turmoil in that vast country and what it might mean to world peace are arousing concern around the world.

THE WORRY is not confined to non-Communist nations. A round of visits by Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Hungary is widely viewed as indicating anxiety about China's intentions.

The official Yugoslav radio pointed out that Peking "no longer recognizes the Geneva agreements" of 1954 on Vietnam, on which it had previously insisted doggedly. This, it said, added to a "mistrust of Peking which is growing at a time when essential world problems are at stake. How this increases the disquiet is obvious."

WORRY IS expressed in some quarters that progressive escalations of the Viet Nam war will reach a point where Red China will intervene directly, perhaps out of desperation to prevent negotiations.

What are the chances of Red China risking a big war?

The current uproar in China, the widespread purge, the struggle for power, the wild rampages of the officially inspired Red Guards and the predominance of a military clique provide plenty of cause for anxiety. Domestic Peking broadcasts add to this concern.

DESPITE ALL the portents, a note of caution remains. Peking propaganda also underscores Mao's injunction that "the Red army is not only for purposes of fighting a war." It is needed on the home front, notably in production.

There has been a spate of Red Guards attached on party committees and functionaries. In 20 of China's 27 provinces and in many cities party headquarters have been attacked, leaders humiliated. All this signifies widespread disarray amid a struggle for power. There are reports from many areas of resistance to the cultural revolution, even of fighting.

WOULD PEKING'S leaders in such circumstances invite major war? It is always possible desperation could impel a shaky leadership to take enormous risks. On the whole, however, China presents a picture of a nation gripped by violent, foreign-hating nationalism but unprepared to face awesome U.S. power.

Peking's warlike noises seem to stem from official conviction that the United States plans war on China. Evidently it sees the escalation of the Vietnamese war as evidence of this. Peking seems to fear war, but not yet to invite it.

BUT FROM all appearances, it will be a long time before the current upheaval has run its course and China's internal situation simmers down.

New rules face high court applicants

Students who wish to apply for the position of Tech Supreme Court justice must meet the requirements of a new application-interview system.

Applications must be seniors with a 2.0 overall grade-point average. A two-page paper on the student judiciary branch of the student government must also be written from one of the following topics: "The Student Judiciary in Our Three-Part Student Government Program"; or "Of What Benefit is Student Government to the Average, Non-Participating Students?"

Following application screening by Lonnie Dillard, chief justice of the court, and Bill Beuck, president of the Student Association, proportionate number of persons selected from each of the six schools will be interviewed next week.

"One person from each school will then be recommended to the Student Senate, which must approve all appointments," Dillard said. "Senators will be given copies of the applications before they HALFBACK BOBBY ALLEN (44) lets the pass go through as an unidentified Texas Longhorn ploughs in to his back. The play knocked Allen out of the game and sent him to the hospital for observation. Looking on the play are Phil Tucker (77) and Joel Brame (61).

Drysdale back in form

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Don Drysdale, big Los Angeles Dodger right-hander, would have you believe his problems just went up in thin air. He admits he had a problem the first half of the season but won't say what it was.

Going into Tuesday night's game against St. Louis and a 2½-game lead over the second place Pittsburgh Pirates, Drysdale was working on a three-game winning streak that has returned him to his customary role as a big stopper for the defending world champions.

But he isn't about to offer any explanation for the sudden turn-about he made after winning only nine games before his streak.

"I got my own reason for what was wrong, but I'm staying away from it," Drysdale said. "I'm not making any excuses because I don't want to sound like I'm alibing. I had a lousy first hand and I just hoped I would be better the second half."

And he was.

But while Drysdale stands behind his no-alibi-shield, there are those who will suggest that since the 6-foot-6 pitcher didn't have any physical problems, it's possible there was a mental hangover stemming from the holdout seige he and Sandy Koufax conducted during spring training.

Drysdale, meanwhile, talks about consistency, although he admits having had a clear-the-air talk with Buzzy Bavasi, the Dodger general manager.

"I think I've been pitching better since the All-Star break," Drysdale said. "The first half of the season I knew I didn't have the consistency I should have. As the season progressed, I got my rhythm down with a little more consistency and it got better like I thought it would."

The latest problem with Bavasi stemmed from a story quoting the general manager as suggesting that Drysdale's pay next season would be commensurate with his worst record since Drysdale had put the salary problem on that basis during his holdout.

It also was interpreted as Bavasi's way of prodding a sharper performance out of Drysdale.

"I talked with Buzzy and everything's fine," Drysdale said. "There was a little discrepancy between what he said and what was actually printed. We've been friends too long to let a newspaper article get between us."

'67 LA VENTANA

A meeting will be held at 5 p.m. today for anyone interested in working on the 1967 La Ventana. Co-editor Nancy Hedleston said the meeting would be held in room 108 of the Journalism Building and anyone, regardless of previous experience, is invited to attend the meeting.

SNAGS PASS—End Larry Gilbert pulls in a John Scovell pass while an unidentified Texas Longhorn moves to the play. The Raiders netted more total yardage and first downs than the University of Texas crew, but came up on the short end of a 31-21 scoreboard reading. Coach J. T. King and aggregation will journey to College Station Saturday for an encounter with Texas A&M. The Aggies have yet to win a game but scouting reports warn of strong offensive and defensive lines and good ends.
