THE UNIVERSITY DAILY, formerly The Daily Toreador, is financed by a student matriculation fee, advertising and subscriptions. Letters to the editor and columns represent the views of their writers and not necessarily those of the university administration. Letters must be signed, but may be published without signatures in justifiable instances. The views of THE UNIVERSITY DAILY are in no way to be construed as necessarily those of the university administration. THE UNIVERSITY DAILY, official student newspaper of Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Texas is regularly published daily, Tuesday through Saturday.

Our bulging mailbag...

During the past week the University Daily has received more letters than we have had space to publish. They will be run as soon as possible. Because some of them have been extremely lengthy, we ask that future letters be limited to 250 words so that they will not have to be edited. Letters must contain name, addresses and, when possible, phone numbers of their writers. The University Daily reserves the right to withhold the publication of any letter.

A WELL DESERVED NOTE OF APPRECIATION TO THE NATIONALLY KNOWN TECH BAND

Throughout the nation half time is a period of deserted stands. The entertainment is rarely of the quality to keep fans glued to their seats. Not so at Tech. That "Goin' Band From Raiderland" consistently puts on a toe tapping - heart stirring show. The enthusiasm they generate in the crowd is always a boost to the team. Very few universities can boast a "band to equal Tech's."

May this tradition of excellence forever prevail in this and every other aspect of the state's fastest growing university.

Too-good-to-be-true grid finale

Twenty-one to sixteen, the scoreboard read, and football fans were shaking their heads in disbelief. Pandemonium reigned. It was a too-good-to-be-true finale for an "almost" disappointing season. But Saturday afternoon's convincing Red Raider victory over the nationally-ranked (6th) Arkansas Razorbacks, czar of the Southwest Conference for the past five years, turned the heretofore disappointing season into a respectable season.

Sacks need sacking

Today, more than 11,000 large paper sacks will flood the Texas Tech campus, distributed with the hope that students will take them home over the holidays and return with them again on Monday.

The sacks hopefully will then contain such common items as soap, salt, bandages, skin ointments, iodine, clothing, and cloth.

The sacks are clearly marked, in bold red letters, "Texas Tech Project Viet Nam."

They are part of a campus-wide project, originated by Campus Christian Fellowship and Phi Kappa Psi, designed to help South Vietnamese refugees and orphans. The project is the result of a request for aid made by a Tech Ex now stationed in Viet Nam.

The sacks have been distributed to sororities, fraternities and other organizations. They are available at Tech Union for off-campus and dormitory students.

Generally speaking, Americans have so much, and South Vietnamese so little, especially living in the midst of a no-end-in-sight war. It will mean but a few seconds to dig out some old clothes, pick up a bar of soap or a box of salt. But to a South Vietnamese, it will mean much, much more.

In fact, though few people have noticed, the Raiders won three of their last four games, bouncing off a 1-5 record. This finish, and especially Saturday's finale, could and should have a great effect on Tech's future football fortunes.

With 17 of 22 starters returning plus an undefeated freshman team and a capable crew of red-shirts, all of who have had a taste of winning and know now that no one is unbeatable, the 1967 edition of the Red Raiders should rival, and perhaps surpass, the achievements of last year's Gator Bowl squad. Then too, the Arkansas victory will hardly damage Tech recruiting efforts.

But for 12 seniors, there is no next year. They will have to be content, and justifiably so, with playing the lead role in what was perhaps the greatest upset in Texas Tech football history.

To the rest of the Raiders, Coach J T King and his staff, we can only say that Sept. 23 and the Iowa State Cyclones are but 10 months away...

A hurry-up weekend

Nov. 24. Thanksgiving. Students driving home. Some leaving early. Perhaps today. Some leaving late, quiz Wednesday. Back in four days. Fast driving. Night driving. Little sleep. Highways jammed. Everyone in a hurry. Wrecks probable. Deaths likely.

Safe driving needed.
 Enough said?

Judiciary has final decision

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of six articles written by Supreme Court Justices as applications for their positions. Johnson, a senior in the School of Business Administration, chose the topic, "The Student Judiciary in Our Three-Part Student Government Program."

By MAC JOHNSON

The Student Judiciary is of utmost importance in our three-part student government system. Within it rests the final decision making authority of the Texas Tech Student Association government as set up by the Constitution.

It can declare acts of any of the other branches of student government void by its interpretation of the Constitution. Thus the judiciary is that part of the student government that has final authority over all matters concerning the Student Association.

A GOOD CONSTITUTION is a vital necessity for an effective governmental system. The Constitution of the Tech Student Association meets the requirements of such a constitution. However, the manner in which it is interpreted then is the vital area of concern.

The interpretation of the Constitution is as much a governing force as the document itself. It is the interpretation which controls the actions of the other two branches of the student government. Therefore, if the judiciary is weak then the executive and the legislative branches suffer, as do the students themselves.

BESIDES ITS ROLE as a check over the executive and the Student Senate, and its advisory functions to those groups, it is also a channel through which members of the Student Association themselves can question the actions of their representatives.

A petition signed by five per cent of the members of the Student Association is all that is required to bring the judiciary into action to review an act of the Student Senate or executive department.

THE SUPREME COURT also has the final authority involved with settling any disputes which arise under the Constitution. Therefore the Student Judiciary is a very important segment of our three-part student government program, and if it is stalwart then the other two branches are not hampered but rather reinforced.

Dr. Murray's 'Project Viet Nam' statement:

"I wish to commend all of those on the Texas Tech campus who initiated Project Viet Nam as well as all who are participating in it. This aid to displaced and suffering families—especially children—in the war-torn country of South Viet Nam is the type of humanitarian endeavor to which the members of a university community should lend their wholehearted support. It is gratifying to realize that the suggestion for this good undertaking came from an honor graduate of Texas Tech who is now serving his country in Viet Nam—and that it is being so enthusiastically supported by the student body. This is a chance for the Tech family to display not only patriotism but international compassion."
