

Required courses offered too infrequently

The letter in Thursday's University Daily from a student delayed in his graduation because of a once-a-year required course is only the voiced explanation of a problem which many students face each year.

Certain courses are required for graduation, but are offered only one time in a full year; many times these courses also require that the student enrolled be a senior. Thus it is sometimes impossible to graduate as much as a semester early. Failing one course can delay graduation an entire year.

Nothing short of closing such courses to seniors during registration could be more unfair. How can a department or school justify requiring a course, requiring a certain prerequisite for it and then requiring that a student take it when the department wants him to?

Students come to this university fully expecting to take required courses and to pay to take them each semester they are in school. However, they should not be expected to wait around for that certain semester to get that final course.

Many courses offered this semester will not be offered again until the spring semester of 1969, so students who missed it this time and were planning to graduate next January after taking the course in the fall had better file a new degree plan for June, 1969. Other courses are offered only during summer sessions; such a schedule is impossible for many students who have to work throughout the summer to earn money for the fall and spring semesters. Therefore, some students eventually must change their major to ever get out of school.

The only solution for such a problem is for every department which requires certain courses for graduation to offer that course every session of school.

WAC memorable event

The first annual World Affairs Conference, now in its second day, has been an admirable job of planning and organization on the part of WAC head Ronnie Brown and his staff, as well as other persons in the university who have worked toward assembling the remarkable list of Eastern European specialists now on campus.

The conference is well on its way toward becoming a success, from both the attendance and the intellectual viewpoints. It has shown that Texas Tech is capable of hosting high-level national and international seminars.

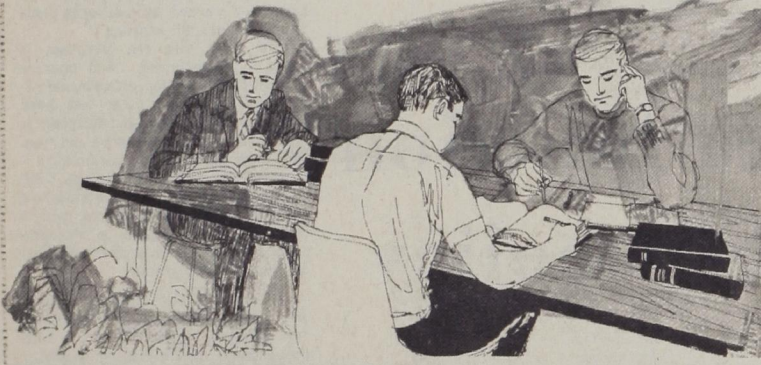

We hope visiting speakers, seminar leaders and delegates have received a warm welcome to the campus, and that they will leave feeling attending the WAC has been three days well spent. The event is a memorable one for Texas Tech.

Dear Editor:

Says Lubbock afraid of dissent

In reference to "Knocks 'Forum'" those who equate academic, personal and ideological freedom with "confusion, turmoil and disorder" have made Texas Tech-Illogical College just what it is today: an overgrown nursery for white, anglo-saxon protestants and social climbers.

One would be led to believe that Lubbock and its famous college are afraid that their time-tested doctrines cannot weather the storm of dissent.

It is time to listen to others' ideas and philosophies and to compare their "hate sheets" with the Christian "Thou Hadst Better" sheets which so righteously line our waste baskets.

We can understand each other and introduce "new" ideas to this community without a civil war. I suggest that the liberals get the ball rolling and "Take a Bigot to Lunch Today."

Intramural thanks

We would like to express our sincere gratitude for the excellent coverage that your sports staff has given to the Texas Tech Intramural Program this year, more specifically the recent all-college basketball tournament.

We feel that the Texas Tech Intramural Program is one of the finest in the nation and with your continued support the interest and enthusiasm of the student body should be greatly enhanced.

We would especially like to thank Rodney Kemp for his tremendous coverage in creating interest in the all-college basketball championship game. The University Daily is fortunate in having a man of this calibre on its staff.

Fears ACLU subversion

I strongly urge you to use all your influence to prevent the American Civil Liberties Union from getting established at Texas Tech.

There is a radical, left-wing, subversive element operating in the college, and they have contacted the American Civil Liberties Union in an effort to get this organization to represent them in the "student housing" controversy.

Once the ACLU gets entrenched there, they are laying the foundation for the same situation to exist at Tech that exists at Berkeley now. It would be a fatal mistake for this to happen.

Of all the movements to the far left, the American Civil Liberties Union, which was born in 1920, is probably the best known to the FBI and the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Letters to the editor

Letters to the editor of The University Daily will be published as often as space permits. If possible, letters should be typed double-space on a 65-character line, and must be limited to 200 words. Letters longer than 200 words will either not be published or will be edited for length. They should be addressed to Letters to the Editor, The University Daily, Journalism Building, Texas Tech 79409.

Letters will not be published unless they contain the true signature and address of the person(s) writing the letter. If possible phone numbers should be included, in certain justifiable instances names will be withheld from publication, subject to judgment of the editor.

mini views/roy mcqueen

Contrasting views

Michigan Gov. George Romney's withdrawal as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's static contention that he has no intentions of entering the race presently leaves Richard Nixon as the top GOP hopeful.

The former vice president is making sounds of a strong candidate. Statements made during his New Hampshire primary campaign this week waked us to the fact that Nixon may have more than just a chance of defeating President Johnson next November.

A CONTRAST OF THE two men's statements this week indicate the direction the country will follow during the next four years—depending on who is elected.

On Vietnam the President reiterated that no end to the war is in sight. There was no real optimism that progress is being made but rather a plea for more troops.

In contrast Nixon said a Republican Administration would end the Vietnam conflict. A hint on how he proposed it was wrapped in a statement striking at America's "no win" policy. Nixon said that never in history has so much money, so much manpower and so much power been exerted so ineffectively as it has in Vietnam.

President Johnson's advisory Commission on Civil Disorders was hardly full of surprises. It calls for enlarged federal housing programs and job training and employment to east disillusionment and rioting in the cities. It would seem that the failure of these programs in the past would show that spending billions won't stop rioting.

Nixon criticized the commission's report and said it in effect blamed "everybody for the riots except the perpetrators of the riots." Nixon said officials should make it very clear to potential rioters that in the event something starts next summer the law will be ready to move in with adequate force to put down rioting and looting at the first indication.

AUTHORITY TO USE FORCE is a necessary element of any permanent state. Force is not negative. Those who break the law should be made aware that they are subject to punishment. Civil disobedience can be expected where there is no respect and no demand for respect for the laws of the land. Another contrast is Johnson's proposal to step up federal funds to aid American Indians by a half billion. It's a nice attempt to buy some votes.

Meanwhile Nixon proposed a civilian program whose function would be "nation building." The corps would be a volunteer army to function in countries threatened by guerrilla uprisings.

Like the President said, the state of the Union is of grave concern.

Wants support for TTU

Once again I take typewriter under hand to express some widespread views concerning the name-change issue. Perhaps I can stir up some response in the vast number of students who refrain from expressing their thoughts on the subject. Who favors Texas State University? It appears that it is mostly A&S students. Why do they favor State? For the good of Tech? No. For their own personal gain. They feel "State" would somehow provide them with a magic door to instant success although the education process would be the same. They fail to realize the recognition already established by such exes as E. J. Holub and Donny Anderson. This recognition is upon Texas Tech, not Texas Technological College or Texas State, but Texas Tech. So why not choose the name which will help Tech the most... Texas Tech University. Ed Bartoo

French classic play

Tech Artists Course series offers Racine's 'Phaedra'

The American Theatre Co. comes to the Municipal Auditorium on March 15th with "Phaedra", 17th century French playwright Jean Racine's greatest masterpiece.

The Racine version of the ancient Greek legend about the anguish suffered when a young wife, Phaedra, falls in love with her stepson, has been a classical tragedy since Euripides first staged it 2,000 years ago.

Phaedra is a woman of dark and complex passions, whose tragedy has stirred creative talents from Euripides to the Roman Seneca to modern dramatists. Her guilt-ridden love for her step-son Hippolytus was dramatized in 1677 by Racine, at the end of a 13-year burst of creativity.

Racine's interpretation, enhanced and different from the original Greek, is perhaps the most lofty and poetic example of true French classical tragedy.

The cast are: Shirley Cox, Phaedra; Robert Blackburn, Theseus; John MacAllen, Hippolytus; Nancy Donahue, Ericia; Audrey Ward, Oenone; Ralph Nilson, Theramenes; Paula Shaw, Ismene; and David Metcalf as Phaedra's aide.

The production is directed by Joseph Gistriak. Scenic design and lighting are by Barry C.

Tuttle. Costumes are created by Jack Edwards.

Tickets will be available in the Tech Union Monday. Admission for the Tech faculty is $1.50, the general public, $2.50 and Tech students free with ID cards.

Belt rule may cause auto inspection delay

A shortage of seat belts may prevent many cars from receiving the safety inspection stickers before the April 15 deadline.

The 1967 state legislature passed a law requiring that front seat belts must be installed in all vehicles in which seat belt anchorages were a part of the manufacturer's original equipment. This covers all American passenger cars built since 1962.

A shortage of seat belts, however, may develop because automotive equipment suppliers are reluctant to build up a stock of belts for fear there will be no market for them after this year's inspection program.

According to Alan Johnson, motor vehicle inspection supervisor of the Texas Department of Public Safety, the purpose of the inspection program is to discover any maladjustments which might become a link in a cycle of events leading to an accident and, by removing the link, prevent the accident.

Steering, wheels and rims, and seat belts are additional items to be inspected as required by the 1967 law.

"I wanted to work for a small company. It may sound crazy, but that's why I went with IBM."

"When I was in school, I dreaded the thought of working for some huge company where I'd be just another number," says IBM's Jim Hamilton. (Jim, who has a B.S. in Electrical Engineering, is a Systems Engineering Manager in Marketing.)

"At the same time, I knew there were definite advantages in working for a large firm. So as I interviewed each company, I checked into the degree of individuality I could expect there."

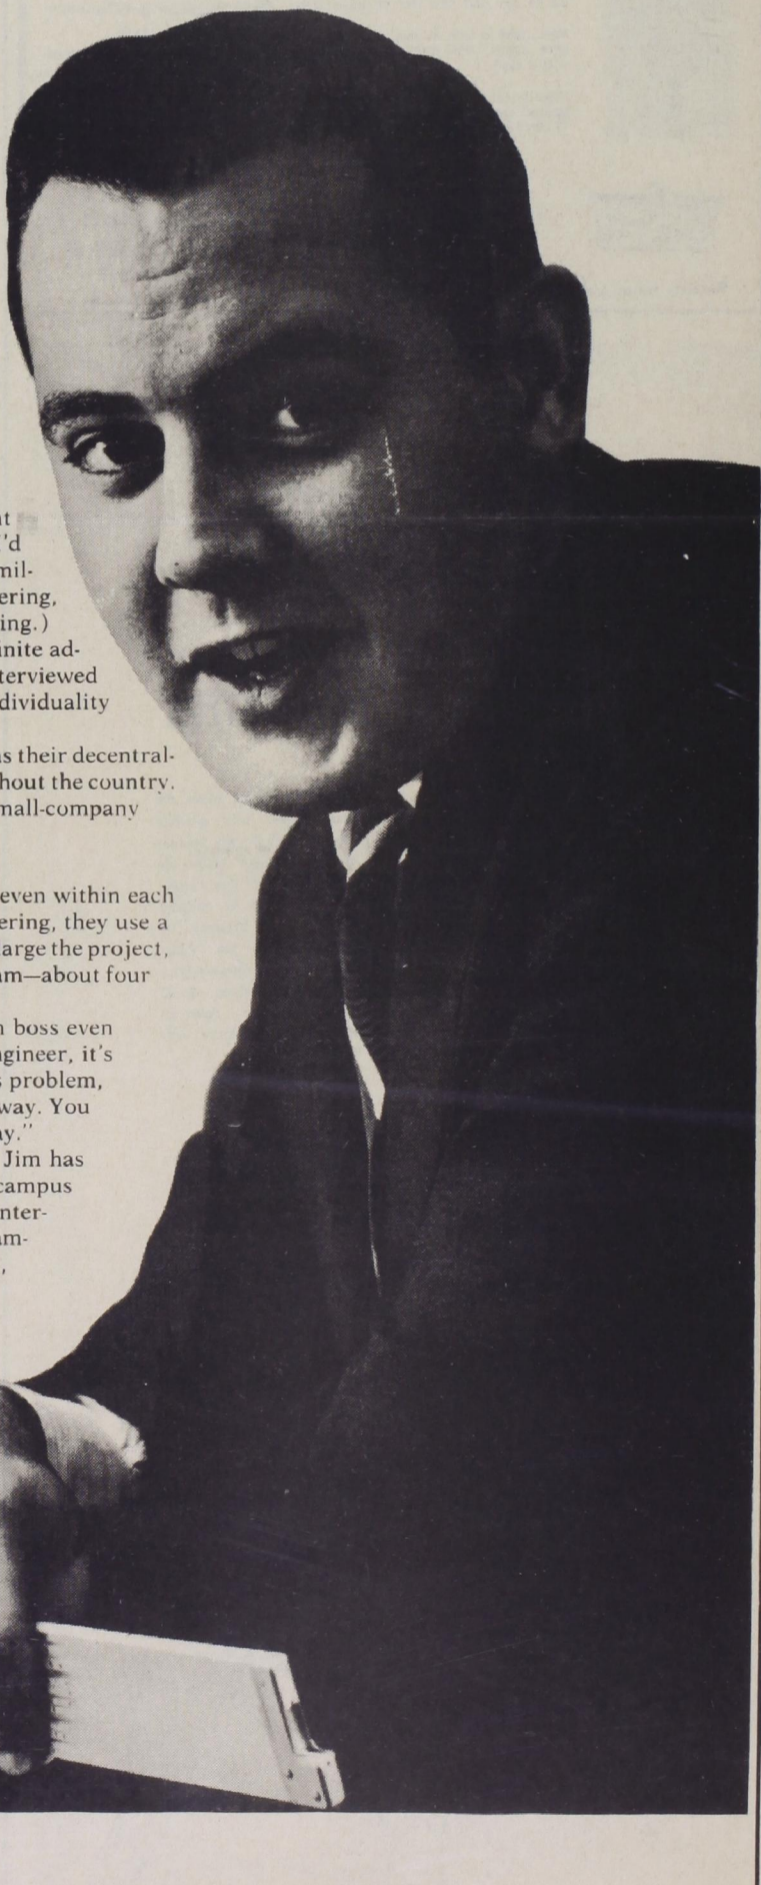

"One of the main reasons I picked IBM was their decentralization. They've got over 300 locations throughout the country. Which to me means a big company with a small-company atmosphere."

IBM's small team concept

"Actually, there's plenty of decentralization even within each location. For instance, in science and engineering, they use a small team concept. It means, no matter how large the project, you work individually or as part of a small team—about four or five people."

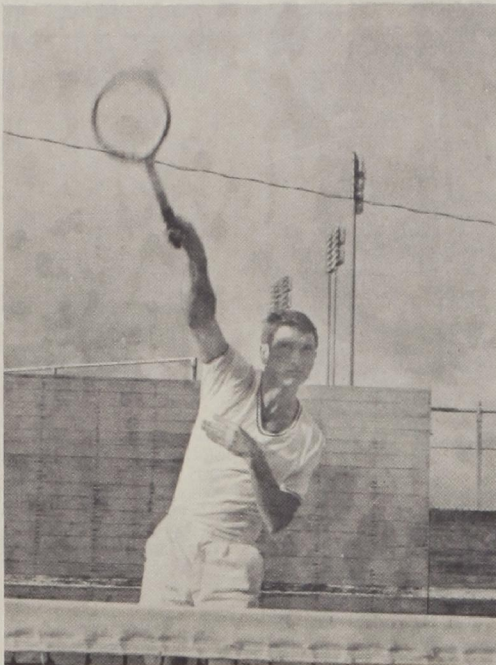

"In marketing, I was pretty much my own boss even before I became a manager. As a systems engineer, it's up to you to find the solution to a customer's problem, and then see it's carried out in the optimum way. You work with the customer every step of the way."

There's a lot more to the IBM story than Jim has mentioned. For more information, visit your campus placement office or send an outline of your interests and educational background to C. F. Tech netmen host meet today

Texas Tech today will host three visiting teams are real strong." "The teams are very evenly matched and anyone is capable of beating another," he said. Concerning Tech's tennis team, Coach Philbrick said they are young but he feels they have the potential to shape into a fine outfit. The top three players for Tech's net corps are Mike Beene, Odessa Junior, Joe Williams, San Angelo, sophomore, and Warren Craig, Abilene sophomore. Next weekend the Raiders, 1-0 on the season by virtue of their 5-1 defeat of Hardin-Simmons Tuesday, will host New Mexico State University, North Texas State University and Corpus Christi University. "I feel the competition will be keen and that the fans will enjoy seeing these matches," he said.

TOP NETTER — Mike Beene Tech's No. 1 seeded tennis player will lead the Raiders in a two-day quadrangular meet with Oklahoma University, Oklahoma City and New Mexico University. The meet will be here today and Saturday.

McKean 4-hits the Lobos, 1-0

ALPINE — Pat McKean, Tech's ace freshman southpaw, won his second game of the young season by going the route in a pitching duel at Sul Ross State College Thursday shutting out the Lobos 1-0. McKean, who has gotten the decision in both the Raiders wins thus far this season, allowed only four hits along the way. McKean, who also was a frosh roundballer also, had good control all afternoon as he struck out 11 while walking but three. The lanky left-hander started the game by fanning the first six Sul Ross batsmen he faced. Tech's run came in the visitor's half of the sixth inning. Shortstop Jim Montgomery singled, stole second base, was advanced to third by Jerry Haggard's infield roller and scored on a wild pitch. Cal Segrist's diamond men were held to six hits on a fine performance by McKean's opposite number, Bob Senteny. Senteny's one mistake was the wild pitch in the sixth which scored Montgomery and cost him the ballgame.

Tech, now 2-1, plays Sul Ross, 2-3, again today at 2:30.

Four sports on tap for this weekend

Tech has three teams on the road this weekend and only one performing at home. The tennis team hosts a quadrangular meet with Oklahoma University, Oklahoma City University and New Mexico University today and Saturday.

The track and golf teams are in Laredo for the Border Olympics. The golf tournament runs today and Saturday while the track meet is set for Saturday. Kal Segrist's baseball team will play the second game of their series with Sul Ross State College in Alpine today.

Next weekend the baseball team returns home for two games against the University of Texas at El Paso. The track team goes to Austin to compete with Texas and Baylor. The swim team will be in Fayetteville for the SWC meet. And the tennis team will host New Mexico State, Corpus Christi University and North Texas State University in another quadrangular meet.

Standing out of bounds

By BILL MOORE

Some coaches are the type that know what their athletes are capable of doing, but are always disappointed when they don't do better. Tech Track Coach Vernon Hilliard is one of these coaches. Following his team's third place finish in the Southwest Recreational Track and Field Meet in Fort Worth Saturday, Hilliard said that he was not fully satisfied with the team's performance although they did about what he expected. "We did about what I expected we could do, but I can't say I'm satisfied," said Hilliard. "We looked fairly good in the field events (two first places, one second and two thirds) but I'm still not happy with our running, especially in the distance events." "We're still a long way from being as good as I know we can be, and I'm hoping that we will be able to reach that point pretty soon — if we ever do," Hilliard continued. The new ruling which allows freshman athletes to compete in varsity sports and the conference track picture were also subject to Hilliard's comments. "A lot of these new freshman are exceptional athletes and it won't be long until they will be coming up their first year and replacing average varsity performers. All of this will add better competition to the various events and cut out a lot of these cheap points a lot of schools have been scoring in certain events," said Hilliard. "But a coach can't always depend on these freshman, even the exceptional ones. These freshman are unpredictable. They don't have the experience to give a top performance every time, against varsity performers with three years experience."

Tech had won the team championship in the Rec meet the past two years in a row and despite what Hilliard termed "the team's best performance there yet," finished third behind Baylor and SMU. "This year's conference meet will be one of the closest there has been in recent years. All the teams have their strong points so the entire thing could be pretty close between all the teams."

Saturday the track team, or at least part of it, will be in Laredo for the Border Olympics. "I'm taking only 15 boys with me because I think that's all we have, right now, that could even compete in the kind of competition they have down there." If Coach Hilliard can ever develop the type of all round team he knows he has with the boys on hand he will, still, as always, know what they are capable of doing. Only at that time he may be a little more satisfied.

Kenny Vinyard and Jerry Don Sanders may certainly be among the pro draft choices when their college eligibility runs out — especially if the pros adopt a proposed field goal scoring change. Both Tech kickers have field goals of better than 50 yards to their credit and this would fit in perfectly with the new rule if it should be adopted. The change would alter the scoring from the traditional three points for a field goal to from one to six points depending on how far the field goal was kicked. The longer the distance the more the points. This rule was suggested along with one which would change the sure "kick the ball over for the extra point" to a not-so-sure "run the ball over on a scrimmage play." They feel this change would make the extra points harder to get with fewer made.
