

Son Of T & P Superintendent Shoots Self Producers Favor New Howard-Glasscock Field Gauge

Declare Oil And Water In Recent Gauge

104,000 Barrels Per Day Too High; Ask Gauge Pipe Line Oil Only

Representatives of producers in the Howard-Glasscock county prated oil field, in a lengthy session here Monday at the Settles hotel, voted 17 to 2 to reject the new gauge of the field's production taken by representatives of the railroad commission upon recommendation of the producers themselves.

The vote came after considerable argument and discussion of results of the new gauge of the field, which showed total potential production of 104,000 barrels per day. Representatives of at least two companies declared the potential, which has been approximately 75,000 barrels, was hiked more than 25 per cent because much of the water production of wells of practically all producers had been gauged as oil.

Rectification of the new gauge potential figure in a formal order of the railroad commission would work an injustice upon producers whose wells make no water, it was declared.

Emulsion Manner in which water was included with oil in measuring the potential with oil in storage tanks after the six-hour test and after free water had been drained off, it was declared.

The operators further voted to ask a new gauge and to recommend that only pipe line oil be measured in reaching a new potential.

Another unfavorable effect of the higher potential figure would be further to reduce daily allowable production of pipe line oil from the field. The allowable at this time, is 15,000 barrels per day, or one-fifth of the old potential.

Experts declared that 40 to 50 per cent of the 104,000 barrels potential just arrived at represented water and that actually the field would not produce more than 40,000 to 50,000 barrels daily if all wells were opened without any proration restrictions.

Representatives of the railroad commission, headed in the meeting by W. R. Rowden, Midland, district oil and gas supervisor, and Slim O'Neal, Big Spring, assistant supervisor, declare the result of the vote was caused by wording of the recommendation of the operators themselves. Their recommendation was incorporated in the railroad commission order authorizing the gauge.

Independents' Plea Independent operators in the local field for months have declared that this field, along with others in West Texas, is being made the victim of discrimination in market price and in fixing of allowable output by the pipe line companies. They declare the margin is 65 cents and 75 cents between West Texas and East Texas crude is too great, and that major companies owning pipe lines which purchase Howard and Glasscock county production, reduced their nominations too radically and without just cause since price of crude oil advanced to $5 to $6 and later to 65 cents per barrel.

Major companies in the field obviously are seeking to prevent new drilling, the independents declare, and add that reduction of pipe line nominations by Humble, Shell and other pipe line companies to prevent new drilling as much if not more than because they actually want to keep the crude.

Monday's action of the producers' representatives will likely call for a new hearing by the railroad commission, which is expected to order taking of a new gauge of pipe line oil only.

Howard county today stands in a position from which she may benefit very greatly from what a lot of people are pleased to call "political maneuvering."

Nevertheless, Howard county is due to become beneficiary of this alleged maneuvering. So why should we worry about what the friends of a candidate for governor do that will help his candidacy as long as the people of Texas generally and those of Howard county particularly, will benefit by their actions.

We refer to the highway commission's new policy of not requiring counties to share in cost of constructing state highways and of

Candidate For Congress, No. 3 Visits In City

J. E. Boog-Scott of Coleman County, candidate for Congressman at Large, Place 3, a visitor here today, has a problem he claims none of the economists who were so active up to October 1929 can answer.

"Perhaps when good times come back some of the bright boys will have it all figured out, but I don't think they've tackled it yet," he explained.

"There is something wrong," he declared, "when wheat is selling at the present price and there are millions of bushels in excess of our need and still people are starving for want of bread. Cattle are down in price and there are plenty of steers, but some of our citizens are in need of meat. The same is true of milk prices and milk supplies, but babies are starving for want of milk. Cotton is cheap, and so is wool and leather, but millions of our people need clothes."

"It is not right that people should be starving in a land of plenty and going ragged when there is an overproduction of materials that go into clothes."

Fee System History Topic Of Professor

AUSTIN—In view of the fact that the fee system as applied to county and district officers in Texas is the subject of much discussion on the part of taxpayers, an article on this topic by Prof. S. B. McAllister of North Texas State Teachers College, published in the current issue of the Southwestern Social Science Quarterly, edited by the University of Texas, is arousing unusual interest.

"The legislature laid the structural foundation for our present fee system in 1876," Mr. McAllister wrote. "Since then it has added or taken from this structure no less than two dozen times. But despite these numerous changes, the system has grown more and more out of date. The tremendous increase in the wealth of the state, the great expansion of governmental activities and functions, and the new inventions—especially the automobile—have brought about great discrepancies in the application of the fee system of our fee system. The legislature has worked on the theory that there is nothing wrong inherently in the fee system itself; consequently, few of its changes have been of a vital nature. For example, little thought has been given to extending the system to new offices, or to eliminating from the system offices that have once been placed within it. No doubt this lack of thought has been due to our ignorance of and great lack of interest in county government as a whole. Not until recently were there any noticeable efforts made to throw a little light on this phase of the "Dark Continent" of American government.

In 1929, the second called session of the fortieth legislature appointed a committee of two senators and three representatives, headed by Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock, to investigate the workings of the fee system. This committee held hearings in something over a dozen counties in Texas, where evidence was taken under oath. The report of the committee as submitted to the legislature showed that under the laws as then existed, many county officers were not required to make detailed reports of the fees received, and in counties of less than 25,000 inhabitants, no account of fees collected was required. In some counties the pay of many fee officers reached staggering sums. Some officers admitted under oath that they drew more than $22,000.

Legislature Laid Foundation In 1876, Says S. B. McAllister

AUSTIN—Support to Governor Ross Sterling in his campaign for re-election was pledged today by A. S. Burleson, postmaster general in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson, in a statement praising the governor's successful efforts to keep the state on a sound financial basis.

Governor Sterling "deserves the support of every honest, thoughtful, patriotic Texan," declared the once active democratic leader.

General Burleson said he had not approved of martial law in East Texas, but added: "Candor compels me to say that it saved millions of dollars to owners of small land holdings in East Texas. Through the agency of martial law, the governor multiplied by eight the revenue the state was receiving from its production tax, thus keeping the state in a better shape than it would have been in had it not permitted it to slip further into the red, where it was undoubtedly headed," said the general.

Praise for the governor's program for the future, as expressed in his speech at Big Spring, was voiced "with intelligent cooperation" from the legislature, Governor Sterling should be able to reduce substantially government costs and oppressive taxes," General Burleson said.

"Sterling has been governor at most two years," said the former cabinet officer, "and no one charges that he has not given Texas an honest administration. I live here at the capital, and never has there been a breath of scandal, a whisper of wrongdoing. This has not always been so. Every self-respecting Texan should feel constrained to vote for those who will protect us from the shame of graft and corruption in public office."

Many Attend Revival Here

Rev. Woodie W. Smith Preaching Twice Daily At East Fourth

Rev. Woodie W. Smith was greeted by a good-sized audience at the East Fourth Street Baptist revival Monday evening. His subject was "Four Great Bible Questions."

He spoke in part as follows: "First, God asked Adam 'Where Art Thou?' God created Adam in a state of perfection and placed him in the beautiful garden of Eden. God gave to him and Eve the keeping of the garden. He made Adam master of all his creation. Adam had a big job, but he wasn't satisfied with it. Adam sinned and then tried to cover up his sins. The cloak of fig leaves was not sufficient to cover his sins. Men ever since have been trying to cover up their sins but to no avail. It takes the blood of Jesus to cover man's sins.

"Second, God asked Eve, 'What has thou done?' The devil put a question mark in the mind of Eve concerning the commands of God. The devil is still trying to discredit the word and works of God. Eve listened and heeded the reasonings of the devil and brought sin into the world. Eve soon repented the results of sin. Her first son was a murderer.

"Third, God asked Cain, 'Where is thy brother?' Cain tried to shift the responsibility. He tried to deny that he was his brother's keeper, but God put His mark on him. Man can not shift the responsibility for his sins.

"Fourth, God asked Elijah, 'What doest thou here?' Elijah was brave in the face of a host of the prophets of Baal. He made fun of them, he jeered at them, he laughed at their gods. He then called down the fire from heaven which consumed the sacrifice to the Lord after the prophets had failed. These false prophets were put to death. Yet the prophet fled before the wrath and the threats of that wicked woman, Jezebel. Elijah was all right as long as he kept his eyes on God, but he became frightened at the thought of the wicked woman. Elijah was too easy to give up. The spirit of Christianity is a conquering spirit. It never gives up."

Rev. Smith spoke at the Tuesday morning service on "The Potter and the Clay." His subject for Tuesday evening will be "Cleaning Out the Old Ways."

Automobile Taxation

THE AUTOMOBILE is bearing an unjust proportion of the nation's tax burden. The total tax revenue of all governmental divisions—precinct, county, state, city, district and federal—is about 14 billion dollars. The automobile's share is one and one-quarter billions. The new tax bill raising a billion dollars in additional revenue places one-fourth of that sum on the automobile.

The American Automobile association, meeting in Providence, was told that the annual tax per automobile last year was $27.4, while the 1932 tax has been boosted to $27.4 per car.

Only a fraction of the tax burden borne by motor cars is used in the construction of good roads.

There is evidence that this increasing tax is reducing the number of cars in operation and cutting down the number of new cars sold.

As a consequence one of the nation's leading industries is hampered and thousands of men are thrown out of work.

The automobile offers a good example of unwise taxation.

While government is encouraging and lending every assistance in the development and improvement of aerial and rail transportation, it

Quebec And Ontario Liquor Plans Often Cited For United States

WASHINGTON (UP)—In all the debate and political oratory that has raged around prohibition, three words—"government liquor control"—have appeared almost as frequently as "my fellow countrymen."

Wets have hailed government control as the solution to what they conceive to be the evils of the 18th amendment. Drys have opposed it as a step back toward the saloon.

In the meantime, across the "unchanged frontier" in Canada that experiment in government liquor control is going on. The United Press, neither advocating nor opposing the Canadian systems—there are more than one—offers this analysis as being of particular interest during a national election year when prohibition promises to be one of the chief issues.

All systems in force in Canada fall between Ontario's, the strictest and Quebec's, the most liberal. Both systems definitely put the government into the liquor business with the clear understanding any profits shall go to the state.

In Quebec a commission of five appointed by the lieutenant-governor, is the ruling body of the corporation and licenses hotels, restaurants and taverns to sell beer and wine. The government monopoly maintains two large warehouses and its own bottling plant in which it puts up 23 brands of wines and 29 of whiskey. A laboratory tests the whiskey. Offices are maintained in France, charged with purchasing continental wines and liquors.

Wines And Beer
All sales are conducted on the theory that wine and beer should be made more accessible to the people.

There's nothing to prevent a person from buying at as many different stores as he chooses, or from going back to the same store repeatedly.

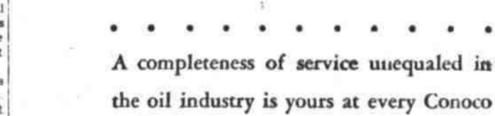

Ontario uses virtually the same system for distribution of liquor, with the important exception the only place wine and beer may be kept is in the home. Under that system there is no such thing as public drinking. Wine can be purchased without a permit, but a government order is necessary to procure beer and spirits.

EVERY RED TRIANGLE STATION IS A COURTESY STATION

A completeness of service unequalled in the oil industry is yours at every Conoco station. When we say "service" we don't mean just gasoline, oil, water and air. Those things are to be expected. The service you find at Conoco stations goes much further.

It includes windshield and rear window wiping, accurate road information, package checking, sports, hotel and camp information for travelers, free road maps...

Conoco service men are chosen for their willingness to give friendly service and are trained to expertness. More than half of their time is given to free service... gladly... cheerfully. Their courtesy and readiness to help; the many unusual services they render regularly; make every Conoco station a Courtesy Station.

Students and Prisoners Debate
An unusual debate took place at Jackson, Michigan, recently, when a team of debaters from the state university public speaking class met a team from the state prison and were defeated by the latter in a debate on prohibition repeal. The prison team contended that prohibition had resulted in improved conditions and recommended that better education in advantages of total abstinence was needed. They urged state cooperation in enforcing the law, and drew arguments from their own experience so skillfully that the student team, speaking for repeal, were defeated.

The American Issue
After all, human greed does not change. The love of money is still foremost as a root of evil. There is an army of men who long for the chance to sell intoxicating liquor to those who will drink it and thus rake in the profits from the business. It does not matter to them what harm is done or who suffers, if they can sell booze. They say they do not want saloons back. They want other methods to control the liquor traffic if they had it. It would be a continual source of trouble socially while it ruined individuals and wrought havoc as it did when we had the saloon as an American institution. Regulation was always a failure. It would be a failure again. Prohibition has succeeded better than regulation ever did. Any man who wants to sell intoxicating liquor is willing to cause trouble and sorrow, heartaches and despair, poverty and distress to others if only he can get money for himself. He may talk personal liberty, but it is greed that controls him.

Every fight for reform the forces for righteousness meet many surprises. The country has been amazed by some changes of sentiment. But principles do not change. Intoxicating liquor is the same it has always been in its deadly effects. It will not change. As long as men make it, sell it or drink it, a stream of evil will flow from it. The worst elements in society, the criminal and vile elements, use it in their nefarious work in all of its ramifications of their diabolism.

The faithful lovers of righteousness and peace and sobriety in this country had just as well make up their minds to go into this fight again and stay in it as long as there is a home to defend against the assaults of the liquor traffic. In the war against evil there is no desert and when greed spurs iniquity on the fight is of the utmost moment to all that civilization has achieved. The saloon must not come back. The best corners in our towns and cities must not again be left as best recruiting stations.—Baptist Standard.

Roosevelt and Al Smith's Supporters

Contrary to custom, when Governor Roosevelt had won the nomination, no motion was offered to make it unanimous. There remained at the end a bloc of almost two hundred delegates who chose to be recorded as irrecusable. Of these about one hundred and ninety were the supporters of Al Smith. They represented slightly less than a sixth of the convention, but their real constituency is potentially a much larger fraction of the Democratic party. The question is whether their refusal to accept Roosevelt will mean that in the large cities from Boston to San Francisco Al Smith's most devoted followers will feel that they can not support the Democratic ticket.

As respects their leaders, beginning with Al Smith himself, there is no reason which they can publicly avow for holding back. The platform is an orthodox Democratic platform. It contains nothing of any consequence to which they can object and in the prohibition plank it contains a complete concession to their views. They can not object to the manner in which Governor Roosevelt was nominated. He came to Chicago with a clear majority assembled as such majorities are usually assembled—by a belief in Mr. Roosevelt's virtues, by a belief that he could win by promises of jobs, by various trades. At this level politics is an ignoble game, but it can not fairly be argued that the Roosevelt managers played the game more ignobly than their opponents would have, or, in fact, did play it. As such things are done, the nomination was won for Roosevelt without any important breach of the rules, and there is by ordinary standards no flaw in his title.

That he is not the ablest man who might have been nominated is hardly to be denied, but this is a consideration which the independent voter must weigh. Regular politicians can hardly use it as a reason for refusing to accept the result. They would not be believed if they did. They can bolt on an issue. They can bolt on a charge of unfairness. But they can not bolt because they do not believe the winner is as good a man as his defeated rivals.

In the absence of any reason that can be avowed publicly the Al Smith followers are in a position where their refusal to support the ticket will be interpreted solely as arising from a belief on their part that the nomination of Roosevelt is a victory for religious intolerance. It is a very serious thing if they believe that and the consequences might be incalculably bad. What are the facts? My own impression is that religious bigotry played a part, but not a decisive part, in the outcome. It was most manifest, it seemed to me, in the fight against Mr. Shouse, for though Senator Walsh happens to be a Catholic while Mr. Shouse is a Protestant, the animus in that fight was directed against the Raskob-Smith influence in the party.

But the recent showed that Governor Roosevelt could have been nominated more easily if this fight had never been started. As for Al Smith, himself, it would be, I think, a dangerous illusion to think that he would have been nominated at Chicago were he not a Catholic. No one who realizes the temper of the gathering has the right to think it would have nominated any man whose associations and whose mentality are as metropolitan as Al Smith's. Right or wrong, the fact is that a great majority of the Democratic party is Jacksonian in its temper and the convention would have nominated so many who is identified with masses of the great cities and with the financial power of the great cities.

As for Governor Roosevelt himself, the worst that can be said is that he is in part the beneficiary of a campaign in which some of his southern and western supporters gathered in delegates by arguing that they must take Roosevelt to avoid Al Smith. It was an ugly argument and Governor Roosevelt would stand higher in public esteem if he had firmly disowned it. But it can not be said that Governor Roosevelt himself is in the slightest degree tainted with bigotry or that in the conduct of his campaign he made concessions to the Klan mentality. His most active managers and his closest advisers were men of all creeds, and it would be a tragedy if the contrary impression were given currency.

Therefore it seems to me that when the whole position is considered coolly it may be said that while those who opposed Roosevelt have reason to be disappointed and may perhaps continue to be disappointed, they have no grievance. They were fairly defeated in an open contest and while the individual voter can and should weigh the merits of a vote for Hoover and Roosevelt and Thomas, there is no good reason why regular Democratic politicians should bolt or sulk in their tents.

them if he had firmly disowned it. But it can not be said that Governor Roosevelt himself is in the slightest degree tainted with bigotry or that in the conduct of his campaign he made concessions to the Klan mentality. His most active managers and his closest advisers were men of all creeds, and it would be a tragedy if the contrary impression were given currency.

Almost always, there is big news for you somewhere in the advertising columns of this paper. Look for it. SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

There are, and we are sure our estimate is correct, some twenty-two baseball players in Howard County. There is, and again our knowledge is based upon careful investigation, no less than seven baseball teams.

Playing on the Forsan club is Bill Tate, Charley Ferguson, the pair of Hines, the Cramer brothers, and one or two others. Coahoma has the Reids and Walkers, a chap named Bishop from R-Bar, and occasionally uses the Cramers.

These players, it is readily seen, cannot make up a separate baseball roster. So when Forsan plays another club they send to Coahoma for Red Hutchinson, Harlow and Hale to Lorraine for Tex Greenest and "Jav" Coffee, and to Stanton for a tall chap named Brown.

California Real Battleground Of 1932 Presidential Campaign

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1932 by United Press)

WASHINGTON, (UP)—California is to be a real battleground in the presidential election this year.

Democrats are preparing to carry their fight into President Hoover's home state.

At the White House it is said President Hoover does not intend to go to California during the campaign.

At the White House it is said President Hoover does not intend to go to California during the campaign.

Normally the state is at least two to one Republican. Sometimes it is three and four to one. Democrats' hopes are built on these considerations.

Senator Hiram Johnson, idol of California progressives, has condemned President Hoover and lauded Governor Roosevelt.

Democrats elected a senator James D. Phelan, in 1924. Otherwise they have had starvation fare in California except when Wilson carried the state in 1916.

MONEY

is your first need in most business transactions. Do you have a financial RESERVE? Why not build one as others—business houses and individuals—do in this bank?

That body's offer, due to be presented formally to our commissioner's court in a few days, to build highways 1 and 9 across Howard county with no obligation on the part of the county except to provide 100-foot right-of-way, fenced.

Not only has the highway commission thus changed its policy but Governor Sterling advocates, for action in a special legislative session in September, allotting $7,000,000 of state highway funds derived from gasoline tax to be used in retiring bonds voted by counties to build roads now designated as state highways.

If this be merely political strategy, why not make the most of it? Political strategy that works hardships or injustices upon the people ought to be punished.

That is why Ross Sterling and his administration should be given a vote of approval at the polls this summer.

When you get an administration into office whose political policies help the people you better hold on to it. Texas has had some administrations whose political methods and policies were unjust to the people, and which, for that reason, were turned out of office both by high courts of impeachment and by decision of the people at the polls.

A man whose candidacy is aided instead of being injured by policies that help the people is worthy of the people's support. The policies which thus aid his candidacy can not be expected to be suitable to his opponents in a race for election and they may cause temporary reactions or upheaval of plans of candidates for district or local offices.

But so long as the people stand to profit by such changes in policy, those policies have our support, and we feel sure, will be supported by a majority of the voters in the Democratic primaries this summer.

Burkett Favors Inflation Policy

Joe Burkett, a former State Senator from West Texas, said he would know, he is now a candidate for Congressman-at-Large, Place No. 3 and was in Big Spring recently in the interest of his candidacy.

Mr. Burkett was not very optimistic about immediate improvement of the financial situation, as he believes nothing of consequence can or will be accomplished until Congress makes provision for the immediate inflation of our currency.

Oil Companies Holding Back $50,000,000 Belonging To Others Says Attorney General's Motion

BY RAYMOND BROOKS

Motion just filed by Attorney General James V. Alford in third civil appeals court, seeking to speed up a decision in appeals growing out of the Whiteside oil case, pointedly calls attention to the fact that $50,000,000 of money belonging to other people and to the state, is now being held back by oil and pipeline companies, awaiting final decision of supreme court in the Smith vs. Turner case, and decision on two other cases hanging upon the Turner case.

The Smith vs. Turner appeal was filed in supreme court 37 months ago. Meantime, thousands of property owners have gone without the money they are entitled to, regardless of the outcome of the case, whenever it is decided finally.

Fifty million dollars is equal to the property valuations of Austin and Travis counties.

Of this sum it is estimated that $25,000,000 belongs to the public school fund of Texas and $25,000,000 to the state and county treasuries.

In the case of the Whiteside case, recently, Mr. Alford moved for an official motion before third civil appeals court to advance the Douglas Oil company appeal from the decision in the state's favor.

"Many millions of dollars worth of oil has been produced from the pool of Pecos county," that has not been paid for by the producing companies because of the existence of the controversies involved in this case.

"Upon the trial of this case, attorneys for one of the producing companies announced in open court that such company had on hand $25,000,000 in funds it could not pay out until the issues of this case were finally determined, such funds being due to various companies and individuals, and to the state for oil and gas produced from the lands involved in this suit.

"There are several other large producers of oil and gas that are involved in this suit, and that are holding immense sums of money awaiting the determination of the questions herein involved, and while the exact amount is not known the attorney general believes that including the $25,000,000 which has been made known to the court, there is probably $50,000,000 in funds tied up by this litigation.

There is also over $10,000,000 in general funds paid to the state which cannot get into the school fund until the cases are decided.

Might Pay Taxes Much of the money owned, but beyond the reach of West Texas landowners would go to the payment of state taxes. The school funds due the state would go to paying school teachers and lengthening school terms.

Here is the way in which the Whiteside case depends upon the Smith vs. Turner case, so long before supreme court and still undecided.

Turner sued to compel the Yates county surveyor to survey out what he claimed a vacancy in survey on 560 acres of land in the fabulously rich Yates pool of Pecos county. He claimed it existed in addition to the 2156-acre vacancy that Ira G. Yates had bought from the state in 1927. The case depended on a legal construction whether actual land markers on the ground—or which markers—of the Poddy survey or other surveys should be adopted, thus deciding whether the school land vacancy existed in the rich Yates field or over to the west of Block 194, where there is no oil.

Decision Might Release Money The identical question of tying down the surveys and determining where the vacancy exists is the deciding question of the State vs. California case, with more than 100 parties, and of the State vs. Whiteside case, involving 600 or more respondents and interested parties.

Supreme court may or may not decide all the questions in the Turner case as affecting the Douglas appeal. If not, a decision in any of the cases will likely release the millions of dollars belonging to individuals, and part or all the millions due the state.

Turner's original suit was filed in 1928. It was tried at Midland,

First To Farm Near Pecos River Heir To Fortune

J. W. Turner, whom they used to call the "foolish Englishman" because he irrigated a farm from the waters of the Pecos near Sheffield and who was 14 years the justice of the peace in that Pecos county inland town, has inherited from his uncle the late Captain William Turner, about 3,000 or more acres of land from the famous Turner ranch on the north Concho ten miles north of San Angelo.

The death of Mrs. William Turner, widow of the captain in Kendall, England, at the middle of June passes the property into the hands of the San Angeleno. Two others are remembered in the will, Stanley and Harley Turner, cousins of Water Valley who got a similar amount of land from the estate. Captain Turner, a steamship captain, who came to Galveston as a boy, heard of West Texas, and on his next trip, came here securing the ranch, went back to the inland town in 1900 and to the county in 1902 and has since then first to C. A. Broome and now to Ed Merz. The old captain once ran about 1000 head of horses and brought sheep and goats from San Antonio here in about 1873 or '74, one of the first collections of sheep and goats to arrive in the country. He called his ranch the "Whitbarrow" place, because of a mountain that resembles a mountain of that name in England. In 1886 he married a two-story house near the mountain and prospered. One Indians shot a horse from under him as he rode on his ranch. He walked to Fort Concho for protection. His path occurred in England in 1922 at the age of 72.

In his will, of which the First National Bank of this city is the administrator, he took a red pencil, drew a line showing how he wanted the property to be divided. His widow maintained a life interest in the estate.

The nephew, who resides at 35 West 13th street said yesterday he planned to go to the coast in search of health, that for the last 18 months he had been troubled bitterly with asthma. He had to make a living, however, and has run a wool yard for about eight years. In addition a sign "laundry guaranteed" hangs in front of the house. "During the time I was ill my wife helped keep things going and took care of me, too," he said yesterday. Should his health permit, he would like to go into the ranch business, but feels that it will not permit his active engaging in business. For once he can afford to loaf.

With interest he recalled the early days of Sheffield yesterday. He was chosen justice of the peace, made to serve and once when he resigned he was forced to return to office. His court was usually held in the street. The old place he was operating is now a part of the John Cannon place and is on the Crockett-Pecos county line. Mr. Turner himself came from England when he was 19 years old and has been in this country 43 years.

His efforts to farm at Sheffield at first drew laughter, but now there are a dozen or more farms in that section—including that of the Holmes, Smith, and Brown.

The old Captain William Turner ranch has as yet not been divided, but H. L. George was there last week doing the surveying for that purpose.

Allred Invites Inspection Of His Record In Office DALLAS—"The Attorney General is the people's lawyer. That office was created for the purpose of defending the people of the state against special interests, and protecting at all times the interests of the State," declared James V. Alford in an address here.

"My public acts are a matter of official record. It is for the people of Texas to judge whether my record during the eighteen months I have held that high office justify my retention for a second term. "The elements opposing my election are composed almost entirely of special interests who by reason of my sworn duty I have had to prosecute in the courts. Infamous charges have been made in campaign literature which has been scattered by truck loads throughout the country. "I am confident that the people of Texas will disapprove the untactful tactics being used against me and I ask an overwhelming vote of confidence and approval at the coming primary."

Gravel Being Hauled For Highway No. 137 ODESSA—More than 50 trucks will start hauling gravel from Odessa north to the county line to state Highway No. 137, this week. The contract awarded to the Lone Star Contracting Co. states that the work must be completed in 75 days. Headquarters for the company have been established in Odessa.
