HOME TOWN TALK

By Beddy

REFUSAL of the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant the Texas & Pacific permission to extend the Abilene & Southern line from Ballinger to San Angelo marks the first adverse "break" for the latter place in one of the most successful and far-reaching campaigns for additional rail facilities any southwestern city has launched in years.

First the Santa Fe bought the Orient and is building it on through San Angelo to Presidio on the border. Then the Gulf & West Texas was promoted and the Southern Pacific was applied for permission to operate it. This line is in many respects one of the most important proposed in Texas in several years. It will lead from San Antonio to San Angelo via Fredericksburg and Brady.

Present economic conditions throughout the country perhaps make this a rather bad time to seek still more railroad extensions in this section of West Texas. But we believe every local agency equipped to do so should help obtain the data, the facts and the figures necessary in determining whether any additional rail outlet from Big Spring would be profitable.

If this research showed any new line through here would pay we ought to get on the job and try to have it built. This is said without prejudice for or against any existing line.

In the mind of the average citizen the logical new line would be from San Angelo or Sterling City to Lamesa via Big Spring. The railroad map just naturally shows us an inviting gap between those points.

If the Gulf & West Texas is built, there is no good reason to believe it will not be a line from San Angelo to Big Spring would certainly be of tremendous value. A line on to Lamesa would be of still more value, and, then it could be extended on northward its value would mount almost beyond our fondest dreams.

Let Big Spring get an additional railroad outlet, and become a pivotal point on the national rail map; then let us get our state highway in Howard county paved and you'll see this city is another long dash upward not only in population but in wealth and prosperity as well within the coming decade.

Predictions as to the outcome of the governor's race now are in order, it appears. Editors are receiving requests from the larger dailies for forecasts on their counties. Writers and politicians are venturing guesses.

There is no newspaper writer in Texas whose opinion we feel is more sound than that of Raymond Brooks of Austin, who has been in the capital building as a reporter many years, has served as secretary to governor and has traveled many thousands of miles with candidates for the governor's office.

Brooks says he believed there will be 750,000 votes cast in the run-off, including 50,000 women who did not vote in the first primary. He figures the first 600,000 will be divided evenly between Mrs. Ferguson and Mr. Sterling, and that Sterling will receive three-fourths of all votes above 600,000.

The Dallas Dispatch's poll before the last primary had the three candidates ranked highest in the very order that they actually finished. The paper's poll of the result of the run-off indicates it will be Sterling by 100,000.

Take 'em for what they're worth. If anything Saturday night will tell the tale.

BARTENDER KILLED

CHICAGO, Aug. 18. (AP)—A shabbily dressed man killed Ike Partkin, 45 year old bartender today, fought off 25 policemen who cornered him in the West Madison street saloon, and surrendered only after a barrage of tear bombs had been laid against the place.

T & P LOSES SAN ANGELO EXTENSION

I.C.C. Denies Permit to Extend A. & S.

WASHINGTON, August 18 (AP)—The Abilene & Southern Railway, a subsidiary of the Missouri Pacific system was denied permission today by the Interstate Commerce Commission to build a thirty nine mile extension of line from Ballinger to San Angelo, both points in Texas.

The Abilene extension was opposed by the Santa Fe system, which, through its recent purchase of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient has secured entrance to the San Angelo territory.

While the Missouri Pacific stressed the possible introduction of railroad competition into West Texas which would result from the Abilene construction, the commission held the Santa Fe was rendering adequate service. It added the Santa Fe purchase of the Orient had preserved the existence of a struggling railroad.

Chairman McNamany dissented and proposed that the Missouri Pacific be allowed to build in to San Angelo, or the Santa Fe be required to give traffic rights over the Orient line into that town for the Missouri Pacific.

In discussion of the reason for the decision, Commissioner Meyer, concurring with the majority, said: "The real applicant here is the Missouri Pacific System and the real opposition comes from the Santa Fe as owner of the former Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway."

"It is a fact of common knowledge that for many years the Orient struggled for existence," Commissioner Meyer continued. "Repeated appeals were made to us to aid in sustaining its life. No one could even be found willing to receive the property as a gift with the obligation to continue operation. Tenacious devotion of the receiver and a band of faithful Orient officials and employees, loan from the public treasury of the United States, reduced tax and active intervention in behalf of the Orient of strong connecting lines continued to keep it in operation, though on a precarious basis. Except for these measures, operation of the Orient would have been abandoned years ago with calamitous results to the people concerned."

As to Orient, Commissioner Meyer said: "While discovery of West Texas oil revived hope for the property, it failed to give the property, in taking over the Orient the Santa Fe performed a public service which must have brought a sense of relief to all concerned. In view of the hazards assumed by the Santa Fe in taking over the Orient," he concluded, "the commission's decision would give that system an opportunity to work out its destiny in this territory on a more permanent basis before authorizing another strong system to divide with it such traffic as there may be."

In rejecting the proposal of the Missouri Pacific subsidiary for extension to San Angelo, the commission pointed out the Gulf and West Texas Railway holds permission for building into the territory.

"This development reasonably can be expected to give San Angelo the benefits of all direct competition in railroad service which the relatively small volume of traffic justifies, including improvement in transportation service between San Angelo and its primary markets," the decision said.

"Upon the facts presented we find that the present and future public convenience and necessity are not shown to require construction by the Abilene and Southern Railway of the proposed extension of its railroad. The application must be denied."

Commissioner Meyer continued, in talking over the Orient the Santa Fe performed a public service which must have brought a sense of relief to all concerned. In view of the hazards assumed by the Santa Fe in taking over the Orient," he concluded, "the commission's decision would give that system an opportunity to work out its destiny in this territory on a more permanent basis before authorizing another strong system to divide with it such traffic as there may be."

American Liner Rescues All Hands Off Leaking Ship

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Matson Navigation Company today received word the liner Tahiti sank at 4:40 a. m. ships time (12:40 a. m. Pacific standard time).

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Aug. 18 (AP)—Passengers and crew of the British Steamer Tahiti, totaling 317 persons, abandoned ship before dawn today, and were taken safely aboard the American steamer Ventura which rushed from many miles away to answer the Tahiti's distress signals.

The Tahiti, filling rapidly with water from a leak where one of the propellers was torn away, did not remain afloat long. Passengers aboard the vessel upon its departure from Wellington numbered 175, crew and officers 142.

Passengers were disembarked from the vessel first, five boats being launched safely with them despite a heavy swell and an approaching storm and the crew and officers were taken off later. The Penrhyn, Norwegian freighter bound for Auckland from Cuba, stood by to be of any possible aid in the disembarking. The Tahiti was bound from Sidney and Wellington for San Francisco. The Ventura is proceeding to Pago Pago where the Tahiti's island passengers and crew will be disembarked. The Ventura then will proceed to San Francisco where American and European passengers will be landed.

No letter mails were lost with the Tahiti, with the exception of six bags during transfer to the Ventura. About 50 other bags were badly soaked at the same time but were saved.

All newspaper mails and parcels were lost.

The Tahiti lost its starboard propeller and sprang a leak about 450 miles east of Rarotonga, Cook Islands, and drifted about 60 miles with a strong current before being reached by rescue vessels.

No Trace Found Of Store Robber

No trace has been found of the youthful hijacker who Saturday night robbed M. Pregler, owner of the Army Store of $250, and made his escape. The youth, following purchase of underwear, demanded that Pregler place the cash drawer on a counter. Although he did not display a gun, he kept his hand in his coat pocket during the robbery. As he left the store he was pointed out by Pregler to Night Police man Mosely, who pursued him as he ran through an alley between Main and Runnels and escaped.

Passenger Hopping Business at Local Airport in Tailspin

Not air-minded or just short on cash? The bottom dropped out of the airplane passenger-hopping market Sunday afternoon, if reports from the local airport are to be accepted as a criterion.

Although hundreds watched, few took advantage of the Ramsey Flying Service's passenger hopping craft.

In fact it became so serious that the supply of vacant seats exceeded the demand for air tours. Then the market crashed and the price took a tailspin.

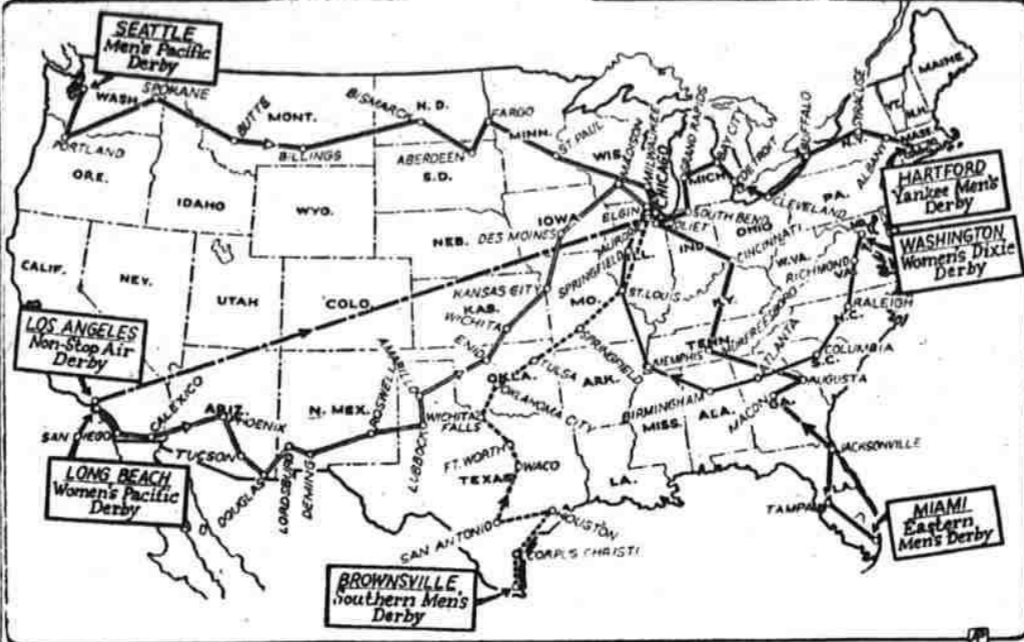

John Blaine, piloting the Ramsey plane, took passengers up for fifty cents each. In all he made five trips for $10. When this failed to produce more passengers he accepted the only remaining alternative.

He offered to take as many as wanted to go free.

None responded.

C. F. Taylor, employe of Pure Oil Co. is in a local hospital in a critical condition, as a result of an accident on a drilling well near Ross City Sunday afternoon. Taylor received a fractured skull when a pair of elevators fell and hit him on the head. He was brought to the Big Spring hospital soon after the accident. It is not thought the injury will prove fatal, although his condition was described as serious this morning. (Continued on Page 7.)

ROARING DERBIES TOUCH OFF AIR OLYMPICS

This map shows the routes and stops of the derbies which open the national air races.

CHICAGO (AP)—Derby fliers will inaugurate the nation's 1930 aerial Olympics, sweeping towards Chicago the last two weeks in August from seven points on the fringe of the country.

The national air races will be held August 23-September 1 but as early as Sunday derbyists started their roaring flight in quest of $40,000 in prize money.

To the women goes the longest test—2,245 miles from Long Beach, Calif., across desert wastes and midwestern plains. The race started Sunday.

Five days later the Dixie derby for women will start from Washington, D. C. for a swing through the southland. Among the entrants will be Mrs. Phoebe Omie and Nancy Hopkins, 22-year-old Washington aviatrix.

IN CALEXICO CALEXICO, Calif., Aug. 18 (AP)—Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Calif., was the first of six women fliers to land here today on the second lap of the air derby from Long Beach to Chicago. Mrs. O'Donnell landed at 10:41:02, making the flight from San Diego in 41:02 minutes.

Premier among the cross-country events will be the men's non-stop race, routed in a straight line from Los Angeles and the sole derby open to all types of ships and motors. It is scheduled to start Aug. 27 with one of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Antarctic fliers, Dean C. Smith, as an entrant.

From the west also men will race in a 2,130 mile event from Seattle in 200-horsepower planes, starting August 21. A day earlier, in place of the one-time Pulitzer planes of the same power, an eastern derby will start from Miami Fla.

Two races will be limited to 100 horsepower planes, the southern derby starting August 19 from Brownsville, Texas, and the Yankee derby, starting August 21 from Hartford, Conn.

Behind the derby background a program of more than 40 events in sporting aviation has been arranged at the Curtiss-Wright-Reynolds airport, host for the week to more than 1,000 airplanes.

Contests have been planned for every type of aircraft, from open to cabin, low powered to multi-motored, and special racers, and for every type of flier, military, sportsman, and civilian.

For the finale, on Labor Day, the Thompson trophy race will be the international free-for-all speed event that is planned to take the place of the one-time Pulitzer races.

WEST TEXAS FORAYS ENDED, TEXAS CANDIDATES TURN TOWARD EASTERN SECTOR FOR CAMPAIGN'S LAST WEEK

By The Associated Press Denunciation and campaign appeals flared forth again today as forces aligned with Ross Sterling of Houston and James E. Ferguson prepared to do battle in the final week of campaigning before Saturday's run-off election to decide the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

West Texas, which went almost solidly for Senator Clint Small and Ferguson, the latter speaking for the candidacy of his wife, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, strove to enlist the votes which observers practically agreed would decide the nomination. And both Sterling and Ferguson were leaving lieutenants in the West Texas field this week to continue the fight.

Trio Charged With Conspiracy to Kill Florida Governor

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 18 (AP)—Fred O. Eberhardt, publisher of Tallahassee; Frank Halls, a former political worker, and Henry Halsema, a real estate operator of Jacksonville, were formally charged with a conspiracy to procure the assassination of Governor Doyle E. Carlton in warrants issued here today.

They were arrested here Saturday night. Each has denied knowledge of any plot against the governor. Sheriff Cahoon, who made the arrests, has declined to give details of the reputed conspiracy.

Warrants sworn The warrants were sworn out by C. E. Hooks, a deputy sheriff. J. C. Madison, a justice of the peace, set bond at $500 each which was made immediately by attorneys for the accused men.

The justice of the peace explained that under Florida law, the charge is a misdemeanor. He said the maximum punishment upon conviction would be imprisonment for one year.

Eberhardt, interviewed in his cell just before he made bond said his arrest was part of "a political plot," and branded the charges of conspiracy against the life of the governor as "just a cheap bid for publicity."

"I am not in the least worried about the charge," the publisher said. "Because of the activity of my newspaper, I have been harassed for the past year. Law suits have been filed against me repeatedly in an effort to embarrass me. This is just part of the political plot."

"I was not told of the charge by officers that arrested me. I did not know what I was arrested for until yesterday when some one other than an officer told me. Nobody has seen me."

Eberhardt said he knew nothing of any plot to kill the governor. "The first I knew of it was when I was told of it here," he said. "The thing is absurd."

Halls said today that he had no statement, advising that newspapermen see his lawyers.

"I think this thing is aimed at Eberhardt," he declared.

Halsema made no statement.

Miniature Golf Endurance Grind Is Started Here

Endurance contests, aside from that of living through the hot weather, had not struck Big Spring until Monday morning, when B. W. Ernest, Joe (Red) Ernest, Tommy Roberts and Walter (Smitty) Smith started playing miniature golf on the West Texas course, East Fourth street near Seary.

The foursome teed off at 7 a. m., and announced that an effort would be made to better a record of 90 hours continuous playing recently chalked up in Sweetwater.

MRS. HURLEY A MOTHER WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP)—Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the Secretary of War, gave birth today to a daughter. The infant weighed ten pounds. The Hurleys have two other daughters and a son.

NEW YORK—The doom of jazz dancing is foreseen by Thomas M. Sheehy, president of the dancing masters of America, who are in convention assembled. He expects that classic and conservative steps will be popular and that bathing suits with Victorian frills will replace the sultan style.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER ARE SAVED

Six-Foot Wall of Water Catches Group

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Aug. 18 (AP)—A six foot wall of flood water swept unexpectedly down upon a party wading in a small creek in the Kent neighborhood five miles from Quitaque yesterday and drowned Miss Alvie Roach, 18, and nearly cost the lives of Miss Stella Adams and her father John Adams.

Warned Adams saw the onrushing wall of water and shouted a warning but a high wind prevented his voice being heard. Miss Roach was swept into a wire fence, in which her body became entangled. Miss Adams was swept over the fence and, with her father, who had raced to the rescue, was rescued unconscious from an island in the swollen creek.

There was an inch and a half of rain at Quitaque and generally over Floyd county, but no rain fell at Plainview.

Two miles south of Quitaque the home of Henry Brunnett was struck by lightning and slightly damaged. Three girls resting on a feather bed were shocked slightly.

In Quitaque Jack Hargrett's home was struck by lightning and damaged slightly. None was injured.

4 Towns Form Sterling Clubs

Sterling-For-Governor clubs were formed Friday and Saturday in Loraine, Westbrook, Coahoma and Stanton, according to E. E. (Pa.) Murphy of San Angelo, who lacked less than 1,000 votes of being nominated to congress from this district in the first primary. Mr. Murphy has opened a series of 16 addresses in this section of Texas for Mr. Sterling. With Mrs. Murphy he stopped briefly here Saturday.

At Stanton Saturday afternoon following an address before about 250 persons a club was formed with N. Kaderli as chairman and S. T. Eidson secretary. S. D. McWhirter, Martin county Democrat, chairman, presided. Mrs. John F. Priddy is leading in formation of a women's Sterling club at Stanton.

Heckling of a group of Ferguson supporters marked the meeting. "We had a good time, though," said Mr. Murphy.

Mayor B. F. Logan was made chairman of the Coahoma club, and W. W. Lay secretary. Mr. Murphy said Sterling supporters there were enthusiastic.

Original members of the Coahoma club are: W. W. Lay, B. F. Logan, V. A. Castleberry, Mabel Logan, M. H. O'Daniel, A. E. O'Daniel, J. E. Nell, J. S. Collins, H. Noble Read, K. G. Birkhead, Alice Lay, G. W. Lucas.

Sweetwater Girl, In Tree 747 Hours, Ends Long 'Roost'

SWEETWATER, Tex., Aug. 18 (AP)—Up a tree 747 1/2 hours, more than 31 days, Dorothy Nell Shuman, was forced down today by commands of her mother.

The little girl climbed up July 17, when tree sitting became the vogue, and was the last of her kind in Sweetwater to come down.

She believed she had a record.

ST. LOUIS FLIERS, $39,000 TO GOOD, LAND AFTER 647 HOURS OF FLYING

Jackson, O'Brine Say Engine Weakened

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18 (AP)—Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine were back to earth today after completing the longest sustained flight in history. Conflicting versions of what brought the sturdy monoplane, Greater St. Louis, back to ground were given by the fliers and their manager.

The pilots said they landed because of a break in the crankcase of the motor.

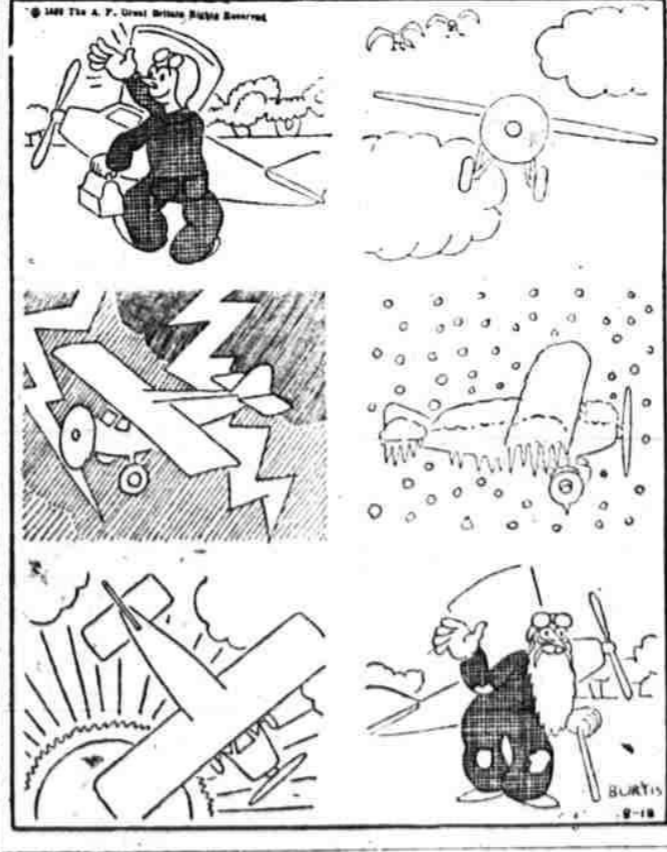

Williams Pickens, manager of Jackson and O'Brine, said they landed because of lack of financial returns.

The Greater St. Louis touched ground at Lambert-St. Louis field at 6:30:30 a. m. (CST) yesterday after having spent 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds cruising over the field. They lacked but 31 1/2 minutes of having been aloft 27 days. Their new record exceeds that of John and Kenneth Hunter by 93 hours and 47 minutes, but lacks 332 hours, 31 minutes and 30 seconds of the fliers' goal of 1,000.

The end of the flight, the only come-back endurance flight on record, was abrupt and unexpected. Between 2 and 3 a. m. mechanics heard the first break in the smooth song of the motor.

"She's missing," they said. From then on until dawn the missing kept up and at 6:15 a. m. the fliers radioed that the crankcase was broken, two cylinders were missing and oil was spraying over the ship. Before a special police detail could arrive the plane began sweeping in wide circles and at 6:39:30 the record-breaking craft touched ground in a perfect three-point landing. Only about 300 persons witnessed (Continued on Page 7.)

BARBERS DROP FINAL FRAY TO COAHOMA CREW

Like Annie said, it's over. We refer, with a certain amount of jargon, to the City League b. b. season. The curtain has dropped. Now all that is necessary is to figure how much of what is left is due for rental on Dusty D, slip Tlay Reed his hush money for keeping anyone from stealing the gate, give George Gentry his release, with no strings attached, as president of the association, and call it a day. Coahoma, dotted with alien players, took the Barbers down in the final set of the year. Considering everything, it has been a mighty successful season. Of course several things happened, and many fists flew, but all that goes with it. We spoke of protests. The one which created the greatest furor was when Dickinson, Richardson pitcher, in one of "broccol" battles, tossed the pellet with a fluttering rag around his wrist. The board of governors had to pass on the protest, and the board of governors did that very thing. They decided that the rag wasn't any basis for the game being tossed out. Which caused a little dissonance. It might be added that one of the boys wrote that great organ known as the Fort Worth Star Telegram for a correct decision. Said decision was that the rag was no basis for the game being tossed out. Rates, it seems, have been tied on other events before. But that is neither here nor way out yonder. As soon as J. C. Moore, the Richardson man, who is rich enough to take a vacation from his vocation, returns to the city beautiful, if he will pay this sanctum a visit we shall be more than pleased to present him with the loving cup. It's empty. Void, as it were, of wet contents.

We don't know what Mr. Troupe and outside are going to do now that the baseball season has reached its end. Mr. Troupe for the benefit of that great horde of Big Spring residents that failed to see the benefit of helping along the City League is the young man with the gray hair, seventy-two year old walking cane, and a pipe equally that old, that sat next to us at the ball park every game and was always trying to "pick you like a bird." Mr. Troupe didn't miss a game. And what we said about some of these boozes that would have come to Dusty D if the admission had been free, and moon beam the Ball Shagger had served cold soda pop off a golden platter.

According to an epistle at hand a West Texas Officials and Coaches Association will likely be formed at Lubbock Saturday, Sept. 6. Football coaches and those who contemplate grabbing the gravy by officiating will meet at the Texas Tech gym to discuss new rules et cetera. Petterrabbit Cawthorn, T. T. mentor, and rated as a crack official of the Southwestern loop, will bring back to West Texas knowledge gleaned from a conference at Houston, Sept. 1. Incidentally, two of Cawthorn's greatest aides when he was mentor at Austin College, are favoring Lubbock, with their presence. We refer to O'Dell Morgan and Henry Franka. Someday, somehow, we hope to settle a difference with each of the latter two individuals. Said difference being that at one time we were a Freshman when they weren't.

We presume that Bill Stevens turned his Steers out of the pasture today and started making beef out of them. One of the lads who donated $5 to the Training Camp Fund came by Saturday night and got it back. So we guess Will and his squad will go into a huddle and sing those "Stay at Home" blues. Workouts, so we hear, will be held at the high school.

We received our wages Sunday for acting as general shock absorber of the City League. Connelly, Richardson hurler and outfielder, and Texas Christian University asset, gave us a handful of cigars. We put the cigars in a sack, wrapped the sack in a dust cloth and put the bundle under the rumble seat and looked same. We wouldn't take any chances on walking into the confines of Dusty D with a cigar, knowing that Prater the battery anchor, was on the inside looking out.

Incidentally the Fort Worth boys will be trekking homeward in another week or so. Big Spring has done much toward forwarding education this summer by furnishing several of the T. C. U. student body employment. If T. C. U. wants to do anything about it they might mail us a box of new balls to start the season with next year. Mickey Spike Henninger and Bruce Nesbitt, when Nesbitt was an umpire in this league.

SUARE AND FLOWERS MEET

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (AP)—Justo Suare, 21-year-old Argentine boxer, will make his third appearance in the United States at the Queensboro stadium, New York, tomorrow night. If his native country gets as excited as it did on the two previous occasions, then sports writers will have a busy evening trying to satisfy the thousands of fans in Buenos Aires, and other South American cities. He will meet Bruce Flowers at ten rounds. Bat Battalino, featherweight champion from Hartford, Conn., who keeps the money rolling in by mixing in non-titular affairs, goes up tonight against Bud Taylor, still the Terre Haute terror but somewhat tamer than in former years. They meet in Hartford with the title not at stake.

It is alleged the debt was created in a cotton transaction when the plaintiffs were doing business as Brown and White Cotton Co. and the defendant was with the Will P. Edwards and Co.

Cotton Drops To Lowest Since '15

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (AP)—Heavy selling swept through the New York cotton market today, depressing all future positions from $1.50 to $2 to the lowest levels since 1915.

Weakness of the Liverpool market and reports of better weather over the cotton belt, together with indications that the cotton crop has suffered less seriously than other crops, prompted the heaviest selling in several weeks.
The October delivery fell well below 11 cents a pound.

WELL KNOWN STAMFORD, TEX., RANCHER GIVES HIS REASONS FOR ENDORSING ARGOTANE.

Harry Hill, a well known rancher and cattlemen residing on rural route B, Stamford, Texas, in a recent statement regarding the benefits he derived from Argotane, says: "I haven't been in very good health for several months. My system seemed to be all run-down, my appetite was poor and I had aches and pains in the pit of my stomach especially after eating. I couldn't sleep well, and the gas would form so at times and press up around my chest that I could hardly breathe and at times I would almost choke. In fact, I never felt good any time and knew I needed something to put me in condition."

"Seeing Argotane so highly recommended by so many Abilene people I decided to try it and it has certainly set me right. My rundown nervous feelings are gone and my appetite is splendid. All those gas pains I used to have in my stomach have left me. I sleep like a log every night and I'm simply feeling good. These are my reasons for endorsing Argotane as well as Argotane and

I have told numbers of others about it. Genuine Argotane may be bought in Big Spring at the Collins Bros. Drug Co.—adv.

Three Petitions Left In Office

Although controversy over the county library and abolishing three of the county departments has subsided somewhat, petitions bearing many signatures continue to be left in the county clerk's office.

At the present time three signed petitions are being kept there until some action is taken. The petitions have not been filed, but merely left there for safekeeping. Several hundred signatures are on the three petitions.

gentleman who "skinned 'em alive" for Ross Sterling here on Thursday night. The reasons for the forecast, say the reporters, are numerous. First, they point out, if Mrs. Ferguson is the next governor she won't hold the office more than two years because two years of 'Ma' and Jim will put the kibosh on their re-election plans, if any. That will leave a nice opening for some one, well known over the state and who has forcefully opposed Fergusonism, to bring home the bacon.

In case Mr. Sterling is elected our forecasting friends point out, he won't want the office more than one term because he will have achieved his aim—his crowning success, the governorship. Mr. Sterling, they say, wants first to be governor and second to apply his business principles to the chief executive's office. He wants to see if business and politics will mix and to carry to completion some of his ideas and ideals. One term will suit him fine, say the reporters, and then, to repay Woodward for the latter's support of the Sterling drive this year, will shift his own aid to his protégé. That also sounds logical.

Then they turn to the West Texas angle. Senator Small's great race has put West Texas on the political map. There is a growing feeling that West Texas has earned a governor—and should have one at the earliest possible occasion. Also, West Texans have learned to stick together—something that means support, 100,000 ballots strong, for any acceptable West Texas candidate. That much, the claim is, is in the cards.

COLONEL GILFEATHER Trade Mark Registration Applied by Dick Dorgan For U. S. Patent Office

invited her to Detroit, and Uncle Jim and Aunt Emy had telegraphed summonses to return to Texas; but in her present mood she wanted to be by herself.

She felt as though she had been spiritually bruised; her heart ached, and her mind was numbed and uncertain. People bothered her—that is, individuals—she preferred to remain in the city because of its immensity, because she could slip unidentified into the endless streams of humanity that flowed through its streets, one of the innumerable chips tossed here and there by the turbid current of life.

No plans occupied her. She merely ate and slept, read enormously, walked in unfrequented byways, drove her car miles into the country. Only her lawyers had her address.

This phase lasted for several weeks. It was interrupted by a cable from Dick in Paris: "Just heard your loss Dearest Dagger—do come Paris Emily and I will do all in power divert you. With much love yours always Dick."

She read it over a second time, and a burst of energy dispersed her lethargy. Darling old Dick! The one friend she could rely upon in such a time, the only one who understood, who'd be silent when she desired silence, who'd supply amusement when she was bored.

To see him, to be with him, she'd even accept the company of that pale ghost-wife of Blaine's. Poor thing, this Emily deserved a share of happiness after so many years. Who could appreciate that so much as Dagger? Who should begrudge it to her?

There was much to do, but the doing of it pleased and excited her. She and her maid packed, bought tickets, secured passports, bought and a week after Dick's cable reached her she stood on deck of a great French liner backing out into the stream.

The gay throngs of passengers, the comfortable living quarters, the courteous officers, the throb and pulse of the engines, above all, the feel and smell of the sea, ravished her. She cast off tragedy's burden, and resolved to exploit this new life so much as was feasible for a young widow, whose mourning exaggerated the slim youthfulness of face and figure.

It was exhilarating to Dagger, and exhilaration was what she needed. In three days her recent troubles were a dark cloud on the horizon of the past.

It wouldn't do to settle into a narrow rut. She must travel, meet people of all races, all degrees, study different civilizations and different countries and religions. That was what Blaine would have had her do.

A third man enters Dagger's life in tomorrow's chapter, and he is destined to play an important role.

Is Relief In Sight?

GEORGE Purl of Dallas, veteran of the lower house of the legislature, was nominated for the upper house in the recent primary. He received a majority over two opponents.

These two men announced after Mr. Purl had placed his name on the ticket, and had, also, told the electorate that he would make no speeches.

He did not. His opponents made many speeches. But he was nominated.

Purl was, of course, already well known to the people of the district, but so were his opponents.

Perhaps this case forecasts a better day in Texas political campaigning. Perhaps the time of the people will not be consumed in such large quantities in the future by necessity of listening to interminable stump speeches if they wish to learn something of the candidates.

Mr. Purl employed personal contact and newspaper space in his campaign. He took the position the office he sought was more important than many local offices.

It is our sincere belief the people could and would arrive at more sane conclusions, and with less expenditure of time if the governor's races were waged along the lines of Purl's campaign.

HOW'S your HEALTH

ERYSIPELAS: A common and dangerous inflammatory condition of the skin is the disease Erysipelas.

It is dangerous in itself and particularly so because it is liable to be neglected in its early stages, being considered nothing more than a simple rash of unknown origin.

Erysipelas is caused by a specific germ which causes the skin to become reddened and swollen. The sufferer usually is feverish and gives evidence of being toxic, that is of suffering from the poisonous effects of the germ.

Certain persons and sometimes entire families show special predisposition to Erysipelas. Those in a weakened condition are particularly liable to the disease.

Erysipelas is contagious. That is, it may be contracted through contact with the sufferer. The poison may also attach itself to furniture, bedding, walls, and may be contracted through contact with these.

Erysipelas is particularly dangerous to women recently delivered and to newborn infants. Erysipelas of the face is also dangerous. It Erysipelas the skin is smooth, tense and swollen. The sufferer complains of tightness and a burning sensation in the skin.

When Erysipelas attacks the face, enormous swellings may result so that the eyes become closed and the ears and the scalp are pushed up so that the sufferer's face may be unrecognizable.

By ROBBIN COONS: HOLLYWOOD—The elaborate bungalow dressing room as the ultimate sign of a movie star's importance seems to have seen its heyday.

Many still stand, roomy and lavishly decorated, and one has been built recently—for John Gilbert—but the time seems to be passing when to attain stardom and great fame implied the immediate construction of an expensive "second home" on the studio lot.

Two studios have more of these concessions to stellar importance than any others. At United Artists the bungalow idea flourishes. Maty Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks each have one, and there are others for Norma Talmadge, Ronald Colman, Eddie Cantor, Evelyn Laye and most of the rest.

Universal has a "stair" row where Mary Nolan, John Boies, Barbara Kent and others have bungalows, but the huge rustic log built for Paul Whitman and his band has been used, since his departure, for rehearsals and other studio purposes.

John McCormack's thatched-roof Irish cottage at Movietone City has been idle since he completed his one talkie and departed and Will Rogers seldom uses his beautiful little "dobe" hut.

WALLE IN: Marton Davies, with her walled-in Spanish hacienda, and Cecil B. DeMille with his rambling establishment, also Spanish have the only pretentious structures at M-G-M besides John Gilbert's new one.

There are only two at First National, and these are left-overs from the silent movie regime. Colleen Moore had the first there, and when Corinne Griffith came to the studio under contract she demanded one as fine as Colleen's.

DAGGER by Mary Dahlberg

Chapter 26: JACK CRASHES AT LAST: "If you please, ma'am! The butler almost choked as he ushered her inside."

She went on up the steps mechanically conscious of the eyes of the bystanders on the street. "Who are they, James?" she asked in a voice that sounded remote in her own ears.

"Newspaper men, Mrs. Jack, Oh, ma'am!" His mouth twisted in a spasm of agony she wouldn't have expected from this cold servant.

"An accident," she prompted. "Mr. Jack?" He nodded dully, closing the door behind her. She stood very still, and when the butler would have supported her she shook her head.

"Is he—?" James nodded again. "It was in a plane, ma'am. There there's an officer in there." He gestured toward the drawing-rooms.

"Mrs. Vanering—?" she asked. "She's all broken up, ma'am. There's a doctor with her, now, and nurses. We've only heard half an hour since."

Dagger put a hand up to her throat. The icy clutch upon her heart was tighter than ever, but she had no inclination to cry. This was something beyond tears. Besides, the Marley women were used to grief. Often they'd seen their men brought home, bustling with Comanche arrows or perforated by an outlaw's six-shooter. It had been like that for a hundred years. But who would have spoken— "I'll go in and speak to him," she said abruptly. "No, you needn't come, James. Please find out if Mrs. Vanering has all she needs, and don't let the doctor go without seeing me."

Outside the portieres, she halted an instant to compose her face, for her lips had commenced to work away from an attack of hay fever, he visited a friend's office.

When he arrived at the resort where he expected relief from hay fever and got none he recalled that his friend's office building had an air conditioning system that filtered everything, including pollen, out of its atmosphere.

He went back to San Antonio and arranged to sleep in this office building. In less than two days, he says, he "was entirely relieved." He lived there four weeks.

"Yes," he answered, looking away. "Was it—immediate?" "Yes," repeated the officer. "I gone over to the field with him—me and Ony were trying out that new six-motor plane. They had a muddy runway, and somehow the ship turned a somersault on the take-off. Smashed both of them."

"Was he sober?" she asked deliberately. "Absolutely." "I'm glad of that," she said with difficulty. "I can't tell you how I—Look there, can't I do something for you? Is there anyone you want me to fetch here?" "No, thanks," she replied, after a moment's reflection. "You might—That is, the arrangements at the field—"

"That's all taken care of," he assured her. "Then I don't think there's anything more Major."

She rose as slowly as she had seated herself, and he took her arm. "A woman ought to have done this," he muttered. "Do you feel all right? You aren't going to faint?" "I'm a flier, myself, Major Broderick. It's just—well, this is what flying means to me."

"You're a woman," he said. "If you don't mind, I'll stay—newspapers, and all that." "Thank you," she assented. "That would be kind."

Out in the hall James awaited her. "Mrs. Vanering is quiet, now, Mrs. —. He checked himself visibly—"Ma'am. The doctor gave her something. You—would best lie down, and let me send him to you."

"Perhaps you had, James," she said listlessly. "Going up in the lift, she had the one refrain running through her mind. "Poor Jack! To end like this. And sober. Poor Jack!"

But as her weeping maid met her in the hall, a second thought pierced her consciousness like a lance. "I'm not married! I'm a widow!"

Strange and shocking implication: a familiar personality gone utterly; old ways, old habits left without point or reason; her whole life to make over again. Her heart fluttered wildly. If only she might weep with Marie!

Bizarre were the days that succeeded Jack's death. Dagger moved through them in a daze, yet a daze which in no wise confused the clarity of her perceptions.

She was honestly dismayed by the tragedy. Death blurred the outlines of Jack's weaknesses, threw into high relief the lovable qualities of his character. And she was sufficiently honest to be disturbed by the let-down in nervous tension which accompanied her grief. For, sorrow as she might, she wasn't as cast down as her mother-in-law, and Mrs. Vanering was as sensible of this as she, herself.

Jack's death had severed the only tie between the two women. Mrs. Vanering's—original—prejudice against Dagger had never been overcome, and now it was intensified by the discovery that under the terms of her son's will his widow was to inherit his entire fortune, including the millions left him by his father.

Nothing Dagger could say would serve to reconcile her mother-in-law either to this fact or to her own personality. And as soon as she decently could, she moved out of the Vanering home. Kitty had

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

Answered By
Dr. S. Parker Cadman

Questions from readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parker Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Brooklyn, N. Y.
Why was it that Great Britain seems to have suffered more financially because of the World War than did any other of the Allied powers?
Because when the conflict began the island kingdom was the center of the financial world. It was also the only European country which paid its way from the beginning to the ending of the World War.

addition Great Britain loaned Russia $3,500,000,000; France, $3,000,000,000, and Italy, $2,500,000,000, making a grand total of $9,000,000,000. Then she borrowed $4,500,000,000 from the United States, one half the amount she had previously advanced to her allies.
At the close of the struggle she agreed to pay her debt to the United States, with interest, extending over a period of sixty years, beginning with an annual payment of $180,000,000. Having made this agreement, she told her debtors that if they would pay her a sum sufficient to cover her liability to the United States, she would cancel the remainder of their obligations.

Great Britain has acted in a thoroughly upright and even generous manner. She has already paid $1,125,000,000. But her late allies have only paid her $170,000,000. Realize the vast difference between a billion and a million, and her financial penalization is apparent.

Brimfield, Mass.
What do you think is the nature of future punishment and the method of its infliction upon spirits in the after life for sins committed here?
Whatever the retributions of the after life may be, certainly they cannot be physical. Lovers of the concrete find it difficult to conceive a purely spiritual realm, presided over by a God who is solely spirit. So some portray a hell of literal fire and a heaven too often resembling a celestial flower show. Hence, the preaching of a perdition which intelligent people instinctively reject and a paradise to which they are not attracted.

We can safely assume that the divine laws which govern life are one and the same here and hereafter. But our physical bodies have no possible place in a nonphysical realm. There human personality persists as it does here, but it is clothed with a spiritual garb. Hence, the punishment was far worse than an act of tooth. The tooth can be extracted, but the thorns that fester in the conscience are not so easily removed. Mental torture endures

It invades the reason, the will, the memory, the heart and the imagination; all of which are attributes of your imperishable personality.

Is there no cessation of such poignant agonies? Does the bitter doom created by the consciousness of lost opportunities and flouted privileges have no ending? The answer is as I see it, that suffering must be remedial as well as punitive. Its final purpose is the restoration of good personality in the sufferer. I cannot believe that the merciful Father of us all punishes merely for the sake of inflicting punishment. I have to believe that His punishments are remedial, because I accept the Delty whom Christ revealed as the all compassionate and all righteous parent of His off spring.

Therefore, when the process of restoration is completed the disciplinary means applied to effect that result are no longer necessary or righteous.

New York City.
My problem and that of my sisters is a mother who is a periodic drunkard, who used to beat us when we were younger, who wrecked the home and used foul language. We have suffered much in consequence. Father is patient and self-sacrificing. Do I owe my mother any love, any respect, any sympathy, when she has killed all these feelings?
It is occasionally and sadly true that even a woman can forget her child. The rage of lust and the alcoholic appetite have slain many a parent's soul and deprived him or her of the possibility of filial affection. You cannot love your mother in her debaucheries. But you can and must remember that she is your mother, and spare no pains to rescue her from her deadly bondage.

That is an extremely difficult undertaking. One who has become a curse to her family, making contact with her degrading, cannot expect appreciation. Nor could you give it without condoning her self-destruction and the injuries she inflicts on the rest of you and on society. Nevertheless your better nature prompts those ministries of her crying needs which I have suggested. And they should embrace everything you can do for her recovery to decency and sanity. Your father's patience and self-sacrifice are commendable and offer you a fine example which I feel sure you will follow. Yet patience ceases to be a virtue and self-sacrifice proves futile when they are trampled under foot. I suggest that neither he nor you should allow the home to be completely shattered by your mother.

Combine your efforts and entreat her to mend her ways, warning her that in the event of further outbreaks she will be put under proper restraint. Let her plainly understand that she can no longer be allowed to do as she pleases. Such

Going to Marry the Richest Bachelor

Lucky and talented Anne Kinsolving, clergyman's daughter and cousin to Author James Branch Cabell, was a little girl reporter for a big Baltimore newspaper until she "filled-in" at a bridge . . . And then began her romance with America's most sought-after heir, John Nicholas Brown of Newport

Lyric
By Anne Kinsolving
The farewell concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra at the last night was simple and triumphant. Gabriel-oitech conducted the fourth symphony of Brahms as if he were locked in a box with the composer, the musicians, and the lord.

Lyric
By Anne Kinsolving
Lyric goes left their stamping ground last evening with a year's supply of opera under their ear-drums after a concert by Beniamino Gigli, Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.
The singing was such as never came out of a gondola, even at low tide. Gigli is about 100 per cent Italian, but about 150 per cent tenor.

By CLINTON H. JOHNSON

THREE months ago Anne Seddon Kinsolving was Baltimore's star reporter. Today she's the very busy fiancee of John Nicholas Brown of Providence, Newport and other fashionable places. Two months from now she'll be Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, with a husband who once was known as "the richest baby in the world" and whose fortune, when he was a Harvard undergraduate, was estimated at about $25,000,000.

And it all came about—the story goes in Baltimore—through a bridge game to which Anne wasn't originally invited at all.

Far from starting the story, Anne hasn't even admitted it. She's been on the receiving end of too many interviews not to know how to parry questions now that she finds herself answering them instead of asking them. If the story of the engagement hadn't "broken" in Baltimore a week earlier than it was intended to she would have completely eluded her erstwhile reporter friends. As it was, they found her packing for a summer of pre-nuptial parties at various Atlantic Coast society resorts. They descended on her with their pads and pencils and Anne tossed up her hands in good natured surrender. She accepted their congratulations, assured them she hated to resign from their group, confided to the girl reporters that "John" was quite wonderful, said she hadn't any idea whether he had eight, 18 or 80 million dollars and indicated she hoped she wouldn't ever find out. There were plenty of direct questions. Anne answered some and pretended not to notice the others. It wasn't until they sat down to write their respective stories of the "romance" that they discovered Anne had out-guessed them. They didn't know a thing about the romantic part of the story. And by that time Anne had gone.

THEY had, consequently, to be content with the meager story of the bridge game that got into circulation somewhat later. It was simply that John Nicholas Brown had come to Baltimore for a visit with a young attorney there who had been a Harvard classmate. One of the items of entertainment for the visit was a quiet game of contract at the home of Anne's sister and brother-in-law. The idea suited Brown excellently. He does like bridge and he doesn't like big parties. At the last minute, however, the evening was threatened by the failure of one guest to appear.

Rather than disappoint the others, so the story goes, Anne's sister got her on the telephone. Would she mind very much coming down and filling in? No, it wasn't a large party—just one or two extra guests. She would? Oh, that was great. Yes, right away.

And thus Anne entered the picture. The story falters there. None of the little group at that bridge game can seem to recall that Anne and John were more attentive to each other than to their cards. Still they must have found time for the beginnings of the friendship which ripened so rapidly. For that was scarcely three months ago.

DURING the earlier days of Brown's visits Anne had carried on her role of Baltimore's most widely featured girl reporter. Almost every day, somewhere in her paper, would be a column or two of printed evidence that Anne was on the job. Sometimes it would be a lengthy impression of some visiting notable, sometimes a word-picture of a murder trial or symphony concert—for Anne's versatility included a workmanlike knowledge of music.

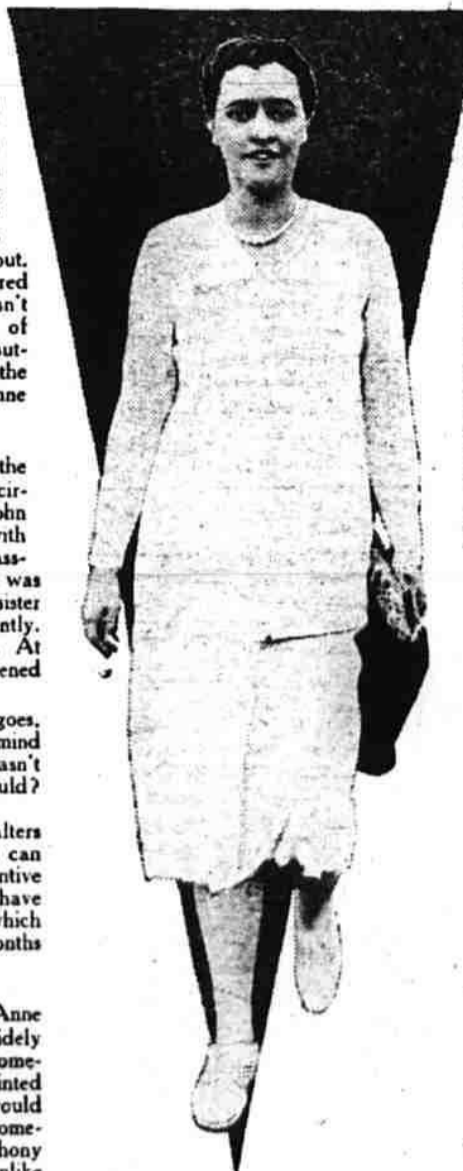

She had, long before, earned the right to type at the beginning of each story "By Anne S. Kinsolving" and there were plenty of Baltimoreans who watched for that signature and religiously read everything she had to say, whatever the subject.

Needless to say they didn't find anything in those columns about John Nicholas Brown of Providence. Not even her most intimate friends in the office heard anything about him. Anne went right along, taking her assignments and turning in her copy. Finally, however, she announced she was going to take a rest. She had earned it, she pointed out, and she wanted it. A mild attack of appendicitis at about that time strengthened her argument and so, one

Saturday afternoon, Anne slipped the cover over her typewriter and departed.

A few of the staff knew, a week or so later, that she entered the Church Home and Infirmary for an appendix operation.

The first rumors of her engagement reached Baltimore via New York on the day she left the hospital. Even as a convalescent, however, she managed to keep out of the way of frantic requests for confirmation. While the telephone kept her parents busy at the Kinsolving home, Anne lounged comfortably at the Baltimore home of John W. Garrett, American ambassador to Italy. She had planned this retreat in advance.

Miss Kinsolving . . . one of the most versatile of young women . . . murders and music were equally interesting grist for her typewriter.

Suzanne Lenglen . . . was attracted by Miss Kinsolving's perfect French . . . and persuaded her to accompany the C. C. Pyle tennis tour as press agent.

AS daughter of the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Sally Bruce Kinsolving, Anne's name was scheduled for Baltimore's Blue Book long before she made her debut. After this occurred, in the traditional form of appearance at one of Baltimore's famous Bachelors' Cotillions, Anne refused to run true to established debutante form, however. She announced flatly to her father that she hadn't any notion of contenting herself with an entirely social existence. She wanted to work. She wanted to work six days a week, eight hours a day and ask no favors. Rev. Kinsolving knew his daughter.

He shrugged resigned shoulders and Anne went to work. It would be interesting to say that Anne started as a "cub" reporter, but she didn't. She didn't have to. She was able to offer a name that already was well known in Baltimore and an ability to write that came to her quite naturally. Her list of relatives includes several persons gifted with the employment of words, the most notable of them being James Branch Cabell, the novelist, who is her cousin.

Anne, consequently, took to journalism easily, and to every task assigned to her she brought a fresh point of view and a breezy manner that kept her readers constantly guessing to see what she'd do next and what she'd say about it.

When her city editor learned she had studied music for years and had been a violinist in the Peabody Conservatory orchestra he gave her the job of music critic. If he expected ponderous and learned reviews he was disappointed. Anne turned out stories that must have left Baltimore's little coterie of staid old music lovers gasping.

Between concerts Anne found plenty of varied adventures to pass on to her readers in always interesting, if frequently unique, style. One day it might be a diplomat, in Baltimore for a conference, the next day a notorious criminal temporarily in the hands of the police, the day after that a famous author or a movie actor or a Central American president come to Johns Hopkins Hospital for treatment. Anne was sure to be on his trail a few minutes after his presence in town became known.

SHE professes not to remember what story during the six years constituted her greatest achievement. Her fellow reporters, however, insist that it was her account of the funeral, at New York, of Rudolph Valentino. That time, they say, Anne forgot all the rules of writing she'd ever learned, forgot to be unique, forgot she had a "public" and turned out a story that was a masterpiece of journalistic writing.

She took a leave of absence from her paper just once—to become personal publicity representative for Suzanne Lenglen, when that star of the tennis world made her professional tour of America. Anne was sent to New York to interview Suzanne on the latter's arrival from France. They got along so well together, partly because Anne's French is faultless, that Suzanne asked her to make the whole tour. Anne readily agreed and, having obtained permission from her paper, traveled all over the country with the Pyle caravan.

As her knowledge of French made a good friend out of the dashing Suzanne, so Anne's knowledge of the difficult Russian language has brought her several interesting acquaintanceships. She became interested in Russian at the age of 12 and, with the directness that has always marked all her activities, started out at once to learn it. She found a young Russian scholar who agreed to help her, and surprised even her parents by the knowledge she acquired of the strange tongue in just a few months. She continued her study until she could handle the spoken language quite easily and read enough of it to do away with translations.

The knowledge helped her considerably several years later. Because of it, she was able to play hostess at a gay party for members of the Chauve Souris when, with the jovial Nikita Balieff, they visited Baltimore.

Now, with her marriage approaching, she insists she is definitely through with the newspaper business, if not with all writing, but not with music. The latter, she admitted, is one of the strongest bonds between her fiance and herself. Although Brown does not play, he has always been an ardent music lover and has turned large sums from his fortune to the support of musical endeavors.

BROWN'S latest gesture has been the endowment of St. Dunstan's School at Providence, which is to be the first Protestant institution of its kind in America. It will be devoted entirely to liturgical music, principally the music of the Episcopal Church, and will serve as a training school for choir boys.

In his interest in liturgical music Brown has found an eager comrade in Anne. As the daughter of one Episcopal rector and the niece of two others, one the late Rt. Rev. George Herbert Kinsolving, Bishop of Texas, and the other the late Rt. Rev. Lucien Lee Kinsolving, Bishop of Brazil, Anne has known her church's music since childhood.

Her farewell gesture, before she left her office for the last time, was one that only a clever reporter would think of.

She went through the files of clippings and pictures maintained in her paper's "morgue" and carefully withdrew every scrap of information about either herself or her fiance. Then, with the bundle tucked into a fold of that afternoon's paper, she walked out.

That night, sitting before the hearth at home, she diligently burned the whole batch. Anne's eager anticipation of her European wedding trip may be heightened principally by her interest in music. But it is more than likely that the idea of a Continental jaunt in search of hidden information also appeals to the reporter's instinct in her.

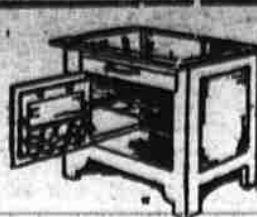

James Branch Cabell . . . probably the South's greatest and most neglected literary figure . . . is a cousin of Miss Kinsolving.

This portrait study of Anne Seddon Kinsolving shows the calm, reflective mind . . . and the ability that would resign itself to a "society" life.

West Texas

would carry the campaign into every town of more than 500 population in West Texas and into many rural districts.

Ferguson turned from West Texas yesterday after an address Saturday night at Breckenridge and planned to speak tonight at Port Arthur, journeying northward thereafter for a closing speech Friday at Marlin.

His line of offensive moved in an opposite course northward to that of Sterling, who expected to speak today at Gainesville and Paduca, moving southward during the week and closing Friday night at Galveston. Sterling rested yesterday at Fort Worth.

The burden of the Sterling appeal was "honesty in government," an attack upon the impeachment record of Ferguson while governor and the pardon record of his wife, and an explanation of Sterling's plan for state highway construction with bonds secured by a gasoline tax, rather than a tax upon property.

Defense
Ferguson's campaign embodied a defense of his wife's pardon record, denunciation of Sterling, former Governor Dan Moody, and a declaration that as "one of the tribe of Judah" he would "lead the people out of bondage," with verbal artillery particularly directed at Sterling's highway financing plan.

Governor Moody continued in the field as a speaker against Ferguson, planning addresses today at Nacogdoches and Lufkin, Tuesday at Dallas, Wednesday at San Angelo, Thursday at Houston, and Friday at Austin.

In a statement issued yesterday at Dallas, where he rested during the day, the governor declared "the forces of good government will win this fight. The people are rallying to the defense of their state against Fergusonism."

"The enthusiasm and the ardor of these citizens spells the defeat of Jim Ferguson and Fergusonism in Texas next Saturday worse than Fergusonism has ever been defeated before.

Moody Statement
"While the people know the meaning of Fergusonism, I wish that Old Jim would withdraw the threat which he hangs over the head of the newspapers to sue them for damages and let them print his record and my comments on it.

"I have told them they could print anything he said about me and that I waive all claims to damages. He wants to keep as much as possible of what I say out of the papers by his threat to bring suit for damages. I do not blame the press; the papers are willing to give both sides but they have something else to do besides meet the expenses of suits filed by Ferguson. It strikes me that a man who wants the public trust, even by proxy, ought to be willing for the people to have the facts and

State Auditor Says Ferguson Forum Charge Incorrect

AUSTIN, Aug. 18 (AP)—State auditor Moore Lynn today took issue with a statement made in a debate at Fredericksburg Saturday in which it was said Lynn signed an article dealing with an audit of Houston insurance companies in which R. S. Sterling was said to have had an interest.

The article appeared in the Ferguson Forum, last week and was referred to in a debate between Ferguson and Sterling supporters.

"It is altogether likely," Lynn's statement said, "that it is being charged throughout the state that the state auditor is the author of the article. This is not true. The article is signed by John M. Moore, public accountant, and is addressed to James E. Ferguson.

"John M. Moore is not and has not been connected with the auditor's department. Furthermore his name does not appear on the list of certified public accountants issued by the state board of public accountancy February 1, 1935.

NEW STATE SENATE WILL BLOCK SUBMISSION OF STATE HIGHWAY BOND ISSUE, SURVEY DISCLOSES

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Aug. 18. (AP)—Ross S. Sterling has finished the circle of a bold swing through Northwest Texas into the Panhandle, down across the Plains and back through mid-West Texas.

He came back assured of a handsome majority of the Clint Small vote, and a margin that his leader, believe, and that he believes will seat him in the governor's chair next January 6.

And in the final five days before the voters go to the polls and return their verdict in the case of Ross Sterling vs. Jim Ferguson, Mr. Sterling will carry his campaign through North, Central and Southeast Texas, in sections that gave Jim Young, Thomas B. Love, Harry Miller, Earle B. Mayfield and Sterling a divided vote. Supporters of each of these defeated candidates have rallied to the Sterling standard, and the candidate looks forward to crystallizing support among these groups in his final appeal.

The Ferguson fight upon the statewide highway bond plan blew up dramatically during the past week. A simple utterance by Highway Commr. W. R. Ely destroyed the effect of all the laborous effort Ferguson has put into the attack upon the bond issue, and took from Ferguson the only attack besides personalities that he had with which to belabor Sterling.

Commr. Ely announced that a poll of the new senate, as nominated in July, or as limited in runoff race, shows that a sufficient number are opposed to submitting the bond issue at this time to block it at the January regular session. The bond issue cannot be submitted to a vote of the people earlier than the regular session of 1936, under this disclosure, therefore the bond question cannot be involved in the two-year period for which Mr. Sterling is seeking the governorship.

Eleven senators can prevent submission of the question, and that many or more are on record against submitting it during the next two years, Mr. Ely said.

That left the governor's race upon the stark issue of whether the people want to put James E. Ferguson back into office for his fourth term—two unofficial as the admitted dictator of the governor's office.

The issue has been declared by Sterling speakers "A moral—not political—issue." The anti-Ferguson forces have directed an appeal to the women voters to resist Ferguson's return to office, on the ground that it would be a discredit to the state and lower respects for its institutions. They have been completely frank about it, and women in hundreds of cities and towns have redoubled their efforts to organize clubs, to enlist feminine voters in the march upon the polls, and to arouse the women to a militant onslaught against Ferguson.

PETSCH AND BURKETT IN DISCUSSION Debate at Fredericksburg Produces Fireworks

FREDERICKSBURG, Tex., Aug. 18 (AP)—Joe Gurnett, former state highway commissioner under Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, and Alfred P. C. Petsch, floor leader in the house of representatives, engaged in a joint discussion of campaign issues here Saturday before a large audience.

Arbitrations and rulings for speakers was left to H. H. McFarland, Republican.

Burkett said his candidate was opposed to the road bonds and was for an elective commission, an old age pensions law and a law giving the defendant two years to redeem property in foreclosure proceedings. He criticized Sterling because of what he said was Sterling's request for Ferguson to hold back the closing of Sterling's banks several years ago.

Petsch said he had voted for Mrs. Ferguson and the Amnesty bill and that he did the latter in spirit of charity to give James E. Ferguson every opportunity to make good on his campaign pledge to help his wife make the best governor Texas ever had. Petsch declared that what he learned as a member of the legislature compelled him to become a Ferguson opponent.

Petsch defended the Sterling bond plan and argued against the elective highway commission. He said an appointive commission was closer to the people than an elective one and that Mrs. Ferguson had appointed three sets of commissioners in her single administration because of the force of public opinion.

At this juncture, Burkett interrupted, saying "you are mistaken."

"I was there," Petsch shouted in reply, "and I know what I am talking about. You resigned because of the pressure of public opinion and because the governor was afraid of impeachment."

WASHINGTON—The Busy Bee has been increasing the chery and apple crops. Dr. E. L. Sechrist, who has been touring for the department of agriculture, has found such things as an apple crop increased from 1,400 bushels to 6,000 and 44 pounds of cherries obtained from one tree instead of four pounds. The bees pollinate sterile trees and those that have small yields.

FT. WORTH GRAIN

PORT WORTH, Aug. 18 (AP)—While there was plenty of demand for wheat as the week started on the Fort Worth cash grain market, the sharp decline of Monday put a halt to trading. Exporters were out of line with sellers' views. Mills were nominally bidding 94 to 95¢ but no sales were posted after the full decline and views were considerably apart as to future values. The market was largely in the same upset condition which prevailed after last week's sharp decline. Demand for corn was reported slow with offerings liberal and tone easy.

Oats were fairly well taken. Barley and sorghums were dull. Estimated receipts for the two day period: Wheat 88 cars, corn 3, oats 7, barley 4, sorghums 8.

Bliss and offers, largely nominal, on coarse grains ranged as follows: Flour (cargoes) delivered Texas common points, freight paid.

Corn number 2 mixed 1.06 to 1.08; number 2 white or yellow 1.08 to 1.10; number 2, 95 per cent white 1.07 to 1.09.

Oats, number 2 red, 50 to 51c; barley, number 2, 73 to 75.

Sorghums, number 2 milo 100 pounds 1.50 to 1.55. Number 2 kafir 1.70 to 1.75.

Dealers quoted number 3 white oats delivered group 1 points at 49 to 50c, to which add 1c for delivery group three.

Wild Oil Well Finally Shut In

LATE SPORT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 12 (AP)—The C. C. Julian Number 2 Houser gusher in the South Oklahoma City field was shut in today with cement after running wild for 25 hours and endangering homes and business houses.

The flow was shut off from the bottom when cement was pumped into the hole under high pressure. The casing will be cemented again to prevent a second blowout when the well finally is completed.

Blowing out between the six and nine inch casings, the Houser went wild through the cellar yesterday morning.

ABILENE, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP)—Dick Harrison, San Angelo golfer, tied J. L. Ward of Albany for first leadership in the qualifying round of the Abilene invitation tournament this morning when he fired a 72, two strokes over par on the local country club course.

Seven strokes on the par four 14th hole kept Harrison out of perfect figures or better.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 8 (AP)—George M. Lott Jr., member of the American Davis Cup forces, today gained the third round of the 11-1 annual Newport Casino invitation tournament with an easy victory over James Van Alen of Newport, 6-1, 6-2, after receiving a first round bye.

Eddie Jacobs of Baltimore, beat Henry Moore of New York, 6-2, 6-1.

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP)—Colman Barnhill, University of Texas netter, will defend his title against a strong field in the fourth annual Tri-State tennis tournament starting here Friday. Among the better known entries were O. K. Evans, former Colorado doubles champion; Wilson McKirahan, a former Tri-State titleholder, and John White, Trinity University ace.

Seven divisions of play were scheduled during the three-day competition.

BOSTON, August 12 (AP)—Cleveland at Boston, postponed, rain.

MADRID—Brooklyn's bullfighter is in bad because of a novel color scheme. Sidney Franklin started the fans with a suit of salmon pink embroidered with white lace, and they booed lustily. The well dressed matador always has a red cape and gold braid, the colors of the Spanish flag.

Railways Asked To Cut Rates On Wool 50 Per Cent

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Aug. 12 (AP)—Five railways operating in Texas were asked today by the Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association to reduce by 50 per cent freight charges on the movement of Texas sheep and lambs to interstate and intrastate points from August 25 to November 1.

The railways pointed out were the Santa Fe, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Southern, Pacific and El Paso.

The telegram was sent by T. A. Kincaid of Ozona, president of the association, and A. H. Priest of Fort Worth, manager of the Livestock Traffic Association of Fort Worth.

They set forth that severe drought exists in parts of West Texas, that prices on lambs are half what they were last year and that because feeders do not have the money to buy lambs the ranchman must ship his lambs to the feed and perhaps feed them on a share basis with the owner of the feed.

The railway officials are meeting at Chicago today.

CHARGED WITH DOUBLE SLAYING

Stanley S. Bogue, 34, world war veteran, was held in New London, Conn., charged with the axe slaying of his boarding mistress and the man who replaced him in her affection. The bodies of the slain pair were found in the cellar of a farm house near Groton, Conn. He is shown being taken from the police station at Groton.

HOLEBROOK, Ariz., Aug. 12 (AP)—Eddie Schneider, 18-year-old junior transcontinental flight record contender, left here at 12:10 p. m. (MST) today, after a stop of two hours, en route from Albuquerque to Los Angeles. He returned and said he expected to reach Los Angeles in four and a half hours.

YOUTH BEATING WAY ON TRAIN WOUNDED

SWEETWATER, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP)—Fourth victim recently of rifle fire near Millsap, C. H. Smith of Birmingham, Ala., was taken from a westbound freight train here today suffering from a bullet wound in the head.

Smith and his companion were beating their way to Arizona to pick cotton they told county officers. At Millsap they said, an unidentified youth alongside the track raised a rifle and fired. Members of the train crew said it was the fourth such attack near Millsap.

Smith and his companion were held for investigation.

WILD GAS WELL

SHAWNEE, Okla., Aug. 12 (AP)—Tossing mud and rocks from ten to 20 feet in the air in a radius of 300 feet around the rig, Prairie Oil and Gas Company's No. 3 Tomlin, SE NW NW 23-6-3 was worrying operators today in the Asher-Wanette pool here as the uncontrolled gas flow increased in volume.

Origin of the gas has not been established although operators do not believe it is coming from the 2500 foot horizon on hitherto productive "in" area. Eight inch casing failed to hold when cemented and was re-cemented at 3,445 feet bottom. No gas is coming from inside the casing.

Ross Sterling Says Ferguson Liquor Charge Is Untrue

DENTON, Texas, Aug. 12 (AP)—Denton county voters today heard Ross Sterling's cause presented by three speakers. The candidate himself, Albert Sidney Johnson of Dallas, secretary of the state democratic executive committee, and Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman.

Sterling referred to the latest charges of James E. Ferguson, husband of Mr. Sterling's opponent in the run-off primary for the democratic gubernatorial nomination, that he formerly was a whiskey dealer.

"I never heard of a man named Sterling running a saloon, but it could be possible. However, you can be assured it was not any of my relatives."

"I heard this morning you'd been a partner in a wholesale liquor house," a man in the audience said.

"There's another one of those lies," the candidate replied.

Sterling charged the race track interests were trying to elect a governor and legislature favorable to the return of race track gambling.

The highway commission chairman said he first became acquainted with Jim Ferguson when the latter came to Humble and drilled a dry hole.

"He usually drills dry holes and he's going to drill the worst one yet Saturday," said Sterling.

Johnson, who joined the party today, told of Ferguson's administration before he was impeached and Woodward, who is leaving the group to fill other speaking dates, continued his attack on the pardon record of Miss Miriam A. ("Ma") Ferguson.

"Johnson said he wanted to educate the people to what Fergusonism has meant by means of court records," Woodward said.

"Of course some of you don't want to hear facts but the majority of you do. It's been thirteen years since Jim Ferguson was impeached and the younger generation must be apprised of the facts."

Son of Wealthy Packer Suicide

NEW YORK, Aug. 12 (AP)—A second autopsy on the body of William E. Swift, suicide son of the Chicago packer, was ordered today by Dr. Charles Norris, chief city medical examiner.

Swift shot himself through the head Saturday night at a Park Avenue sanitarium where he had been a patient.

After claiming the body and making funeral arrangements today, Alden Swift, a brother, indicated that his family did not seek any further investigation of the death but Dr. Norris decided to continue the inquiry because of discrepancies in reports about the shooting and because he wished to determine why Swift, who was known to have suicidal tendencies, was permitted to have a revolver.

Police established today that the gun with which Swift shot himself, an antiquated firearm known as a 38-40 frontier single action revolver, had been in his possession for many years.

Ira Eaker Joins Caterpillar Club

WASHINGTON, August 12 (AP)—Captain Ira C. Eaker, one of the army's crack pilots, today joined the Caterpillar Club at Bolling Field near here when his plane became disabled and he took to his parachute. The plane was wrecked but Eaker escaped with minor injuries.

Captain Eaker was a member of the crew of the army plane Question Mark when it established an endurance record on the west coast two years ago.

Captain Eaker was testing a new type of fighting plane which he put into a spin at 3,500 feet. It continued in the spin, descending to 1,000 feet. Being unable to bring it out, Captain Eaker jumped. The plane followed him down and fell within 20 feet of the flier.
