Hosts Make Wise Investment In Bringing Law-Makers To Lubbock

"YOU gentlemen made a good investment in bringing us out here," said Representative Roy I. Tennant, ir., of Longview at the banquet Saturday evening closing the program for the delegation of state law-makers that viewed the college "at work" last weekend.

This statement from the East Texas solon characterized the attitude, both individually and collectively, of the visitors. And with this expression came consolation to those who planned and engineered the weekend tour of the campus, city, and South Plains area.

The Toreador, seeing a task well done, cannot help but give credit where credit is due. Certainly our capable representatives in the legislative halls of Texas, Senator G. H. Nelson and Representative J. Doyle Settle, showed they were "on their feet" when interests of their constituency medical attention. Not only doing themselves proud but Nelson and Settle also aided this section by extending the invitation and starting the caravan on its way from Austin. Members of the Chamber of Commerce and City Board of Development took charge of the situation locally

Commerce and City Board of Development took charge of the situation locally and put the reception over in grand style. J. H. Brock, assistant to A. B. Davis, chamber secretary, stayed on the job during the entire visit until legislators forgot the absence of such a congenial and capable director as Mr. Davis.

THE steering committee could not do enough for our guests. Charles Whitacre, George P. Kuykendail, Homer Grant, and A. C. Jackson worked long hours before the solons arrived and during their presence here to see that true West Texas hospitality prevailed. We have the words of the legislators themselves that this air engulfed every affair given in their honor.

Business Manager Tom Gaston of the college, always willing to say and act the adage, "there is no limit to how much a man can do, if he doesn't care who gets the credit," must receive some compensation in the way of praise for arranging the college tour and other events on the campus. President Knapp, ready at all times to push Tech's interests, kept his shoulders to the grindstone, mingling among the guests to discover their wants and satisfy them. Mrs. J. H. Brock, working with the steering committee, was an asset to the group.

Other persons performed numerous deeds, small in actuality but immense in making the program successful. Their names do not appear on the official lists but their work speaks for itself.

THE excursion made by the legislators was highly successful in entertainment, highly successful in a beneficial way and highly successful as far as the intended purpose is analyzed. Those in charge of turning our government wheels saw the college in operation, verifying needs expressed before in written and oral words. The visit will bear fruit, further showing efforts of those in charge of the junket were not in vain. The appropriations committee shall hear comment from the visitors, and wise, conscientious reasoning will dominate the passing out of state funds. As a result, Tech's cry will be answered as far as wise legislation permits.

"Among the American plains-Indians horseplay, teasing, practical jokes and satirical remarks are encouraged. These customs serve to organize hostility in a socially useful way." Dr. Frederick Eggan, University of Chicago anthropologist, recommends the prod of heckling.

Political Education

Political Education

Now comes T. S. Stribling, noted Southern writer, with a suggestion that an educational qualification be attached to the holding of public office.

In a recent issue of Liberty magazine, Stribling explains that he made a survey of politics and politicians in a number of states while gathering material for a political novel. Evidently he was shocked by his discoveries. They lead him to conclude that "municipal political machines are the festering points in American political life" because "they control city politics, nominate state politics and effect national politics.... It is from these machines' ward clubhouses," he adds, "that the actual practicing American politicians are taught how to win elections." Where our lawyers, doctors, engineers, army and navy officers are "educated in a technique for doing efficient work" in their respective fields, the politician is merely trained in "how to get his job The actual knowledge which would be required to make a successful political leader exceeds that for any other profession. In theory, no citizen should know more than he; in practice, few know less."

THE remedy, he argues, is the application to the profession of public office hold-

THE remedy, he argues, is the application to the profession of public office holding of training and licensing requirements such as are now applied to the practice of the medical, legal and engineering professions. "Graduation from a political college should be," he suggests, "a legally required preparation for a political career. This would insure." Stribling reasons, "that the future American politician would be selected from the best human material, not the worst; that he would be trained in the conduct of social affairs, not in simple chicanery and finally, that he would receive his training not in a slippery district clubhouse but in that code of social conduct and responsibility which forms the moral atmosphere of every great American university."

The "political scandal" which Stribling.

Art Today And Tomorrow

Many of us who visited the art exhibit at the muceur on the campus probably left slightly bewildered by the violent splashes of color apparently thrown at a canvas without meaning or motive. In the last decade the artistic movement has been from one of extreme romanticism to one of extreme cubism and naturalism.

Like much of the modern literature, there is no apparent plot or thought behind the art of the age. This may be explained by the fact that the general trend of today is toward individualism. Each artist seeks to portray his idea of color and pattern rather than something that will be pleasing to the public eye. The paintings in general show the influence of the sentimentalism of the Victorian period, the abstractions of cubism, and the broken color of the impressionists in spontaneous sweep of line, and in fresh crisp color combinations with a sleek surface in juxtaposition with a rough one.

ALL the art of the day is in the extreme. The naturalist finds every tiny detail and includes it. On the other hand there is the artist who looks to the shape, the beauty of line and the blending of color. Still another group sends a message to the age with a portrayal of socialism or possibly some religious movement.

Whether or not modern art will live and whether or not the bourgeois has found what the artist meant to find is uncertain. Nevertheless, one benefit will be derived from the movement—the artist will be more acutely sensitive to line and color than ever before. This fact will likely bring about a better and longer lasting art in the future.

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women-lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.
