WASHINGTON
By RAY TUCKER

Ready—

Republican pilgrims to Palo Alto are spreading word that Herbert Hoover has a presidential gleam in his eyes. Although Mr. Hoover declined to reveal his intentions, his visitors came away with the conviction that he wants a renomination.

Mr. Hoover is more buoyant and hopeful than he has been since his disastrous defeat, according to those who talked with him. He convinced eastern politicians that the GOP has a chance to come back next year. But he emphasized chiefly the need for mobilizing squabbling factions in his own party for a large-scale attack upon the New Deal.

He "sold" his guests on both ideas. Three visitors who had been fairly mild toward the administration—Col. Frank Knox, Gov. Nice of Maryland and Pat Hurley—lit into Mr. Roosevelt viciously and personally after leaving the Hoover home. Then Gov. Nice collected a group of Hoover-baiters for a weekend on Chesapeake Bay. They underwrote the Hoover program with the exception of his desire to lead the fight next year.

Hollers—

Administration connivers are cooking up some sizzling strategy for breaking the Senate-House conference deadlock on the holding company bill.

Three House conferees—one Democrat and two Republicans—oppose the "death sentence." They won't agree to any conference action which will permit a clearcut vote on this provision in the lower chamber. They get word from their scouts that the lines are wavering because of the Black lobby revelations. The filibuster in conference is based on the presence of Bonnie Cohen, but the real purpose is to block a showdown in the House.

House rules provide that a conference committee may be discharged if it has not been reported twenty days after its appointment. The twenty days will be up August 2. Unless the jam is broken by that date, Speaker Byrns may defy tradition by naming House representatives who will go along with the White House. And then you'll hear some hollering.

Battle—

The appointment of Tom-Tom Hefflin as FHA ballyhoor furnishes a tip-off on the political boys' respect for the trouble-making qualities of Huey Long and Gov. Talmadge of Georgia.

Insiders thought long and hard before they placed Alabama's sartorial on the federal payroll. They anticipated and received many protests from powerful people who recalled his religious tirades in the Senate and his one-man revolt against Al Smith. Restoration of Hefflin to favor is a daring move in view of personal and political circumstances.

Nobody in the know expects Mr. Hefflin to stick to such a routine subject as housing promotion. He has been assigned to the states of Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi—the territory where the Long-Talmadge team may put on an act next year. As a political crooner and rabble-rouser Tom-Tom has no equal. He can fight fire and phantoms with the best of them.

Rescue—

The assignment of Charles West to the Interior Department represents a presidential attempt to make peace inside and outside his official family. Mr. Roosevelt has told friends that too much of his time is given to soothing politicians' sore at Harold Ickes' snubbing.

Mr. West lacks experience and political polish. He is young, enthusiastic and idealistic. But he is personable and likable. As Mr. Roosevelt's liaison man with Capitol Hill, he has achieved prestige by proxy. When he opened his black sapper bag and extracted morning memos signed "E.H.," he spoke with reflected authority. It was a fine build-up. He has established many friendly contacts with House Democrats.

Mr. Ickes has been bereft of any Congressional friends. His department is stacked with Republican holdovers and Progressives. The politicians carried their complaints to the White House when he named Edgar Puryear, former secretary to the late Brown Cutting, as his passage guide. "Another Republican to say 'no' to us," growled the Democrats. So the President countered with Under-Secretary West.

F. H. A. Agents Explain Details Of Housing Act

A. C. Kyle, field representative of the northwestern district of Texas for the Federal Housing Administration, with headquarters in Fort Worth assisted by Pat McHaffey of the Fort Worth office, were here Monday night explaining the working plan of the Federal Housing insured mortgage system.

Much interest was manifested throughout the meeting, as each item was taken up separately, and explained in detail. Many questions were asked and Mr. McHaffey proved himself able to answer all questions regarding the FHA.

Both banks and the First Federal Savings and Loan association are qualified lending institutions, and it is hoped that the people of Big Spring will avail themselves of the opportunity of making application for FHA loans and either build new homes, purchase a home or refinance the present indebtedness on their homes under the FHA plan.

WASHINGTON (A. He said he had not seen E. V. Sellers, Abilene, since the latter testified in the lobby inquiry, adding he presumed they would never meet again.

WASHINGTON (A. P.)—Expenditures by the Associated Gas and Electric system in opposing the utility holding company bill were estimated Tuesday at $791,000, including a fee of $25,000 to the law firm of Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover administration.

Figures presented the Senate lobby committee from a list of the system's expenditures were assembled by company officials and committee investigators.

Babe Herman
Regains Eye
Batting Self Safely Past
10-Year Mark With Reds

CINCINNATI (AP)—Floyd "Babe"
Herman, who even yet occasionally has to deny the fable that he learned to catch fly balls in self defense, has learned to hit the ball—again—in self defense, now that he's come back with the Reds.

The one-time Brooklyn Bambalina, has been fighting for his very major league life since the Crosley club picked him up last June 22
after Pittsburgh had turned him loose and it appears now that he has survived his struggle to escape exile to the Reds' farm at Toronto. His revived bat and incidental ability to double as a first baseman, apparently have pulled him through.

The theory around National league locker rooms and press
coops was that Babe was obtained
merely to be shipped to the Redleg Toronto farm. The notion was that his $18,000 salary was too much for the Reds to carry.

Cuyler's Expense, Too
Then, when the Powell Crosley
purse strings were jerked again, upon Kiki Cuyler's release from the Cubs, and Cincinnati's clubbed seven
other big league firms to land that worthy fly-chaser, it seemed all the
more likely that Babe with face to face with an exodus from the big show. Because Cuyler costs money,
too. Quite a bit, in fact.

But Herman had one important trump card left—the 10-year rule.
If he could prove himself valuable enough to stick with the Reds until August 6 he would qualify as a Cubs, and Cincinnati's clubbed seven
other big league firms to land that
worthy fly-chaser, it seemed all the
more likely that Babe with face to
face with an exodus from the big
show. Because Cuyler costs money,
too. Quite a bit, in fact.

Obie Bristow, lam-basting lord of the links, went to the finals of the city championship golf tournament
Monday afternoon with a 1 and 2
victory over Theron Hicks, southpaw Sand Belt ace.

Bristow will play the winner of the Eddie Morgan-Shirley Robbins match for the title. Eddie has been playing more on grass lately, but Robbins has kept his game in trim and has expressed confidence when playing on the grass carpets. Charley Akoy, Muncy pro, figures the match is a toss-up.

In a first flight consolation match, Shive went to the final round with a neat 3 and 2 win over
M. K. House. In the lower bracket of the same flight, Bob Coffey beat Cecil Collins 1 up after a struggle that went twenty holes.

DEATH RECALLS PERIL OF RACE PREJUDICE
This Lieut.-Col. Alfred Dreyfus
of France, who died just the other day, will have about as odd a niche
in the history books as any man
that ever lived.

It was Dreyfus' unhappy fate to be a living testimonial to the fact that when men give way to prejudice they can lose all reasonableness. Not in all the innumerable years of human stupidity and meanness has there been a more clear-cut display of the sheer dumbness of race prejudice than was evinced in his case.

From the very beginning the case against him was flimsy. The evidence stank to high heaven. It was obvious that the army high command was proceeding against him largely because he was a Jew. It was not long after he had been convicted and sent to Devil's Island that the flimsiness of the accusation was too apparent for any thinking man to miss.

What happened to Dreyfus himself no longer matters very much.
The man is dead, and whatever he may have known of disappointment, of bitterness, of sheer heart-

"Of course, it was kept a secret," said Mr. Drake. "I said rumors got about," replied Laurie, "but we wanted to keep it a secret until he came office will make a little pilgrimage out there. How far did you say it was from your old time?" Laurie prayed for the return of her wits as she had never prayed for anything before. "About twenty miles." "And the name of your old house?" "Fernside Farm—on the Targatta Road." "Do your people still live there, Mrs. Moore?" "Oh, no! My father is dead. My mother died long ago. My only sister is here with me. I have nobody left in Australia."

"And you were in Sydney when you heard the sad news of your husband's death?" "Yes, I stayed on there." "And after your husband's supposed death, you revealed yourself?" "Yes." After that it was easy enough to repeat the recital that she had made so often of her discovery by the Albery firm, and her voyage to England through their kindness, and her subsequent work in the London offices.

Then the young man asked a question that roused her temper. "Could you just give me a few words about how you felt when you had the news of your husband's return the other day?" "No, I certainly could not!" she flashed, and the young man answered in a rebuked voice. "Of course, I quite understand. Such moments are sacred and cannot be revealed to the public."

He got up and thanked her and took his leave, and left her hardly able to stand and biting her lips in an effort to force back an attack of hysterics. Her commensurate had entirely deserted her.

How could she have been so mad? What could she do to stop that young man? Nothing! She could hardly even remember what he had told him, but she knew that they were a pack of clumsy lies.

Why hadn't she said they had been married in Sydney—a big town, where she was a stranger? She might easily have forgotten all details about that. But near her own home—where they would go and make inquiries! She had made a hopeless mess of things. She had given the whole show away.

Well, it was Rex Moore's fault, he told herself, and worked herself into a state of indignation. He ought to have thought of such a thing. He knew all about newspapers. He ought to have prepared her with a proper packet of lies. But when she was in bed that night in the flat, and everything was quiet and dark, she lay and saw Rex Moore's snowy eyes staring at her, and his angry mouth smiling mockingly, and his impatient shoulders shaken with that brusque gesture of contempt. She was terribly afraid.

Mark Albery did not come to the office for the next three days. He was at his country place in Cambridgeshire. According to a custom of Miss Dixie's time, Laurie could have stayed away altogether. But she had a lot of notes to transcribe and papers to arrange and file, and she worked each morning.

Gladys was out in the mornings, but came back to the mid-day meal. They had not started rehearsing yet but she went to the practice room that the manager had hired in a tall old building near Covent Garden. Laurie was more at ease about Glad. There was no sign of the young man who had given her the cigar case. In the afternoon she took her sister into the park, and they strolled among the flowers and listened to the band. And in the evenings they went to the pictures. Laurie wanted to keep Glad amused. And then, on the Saturday morning at breakfast, came a surprise. Mr. Albery rang up from Cambridgeshire and invited Laurie and Glad to come down for the week end. He excused himself for perhaps spoiling his secretary's plans, but he found that he would have to get in some work in the morning. It would be very kind if Mrs. Moore would give up her Sunday. The work was important. There were one or two people staying in the house, and he would see to it that Miss Gladys was kept amused. Laurie was excited and pleased. The keen edge had worn off of the extraordinary scene in the office of last Tuesday. She had not seen her employer since. She had thought about it, of course; not once, but many times.

Mr. Albery had told her that he loved her. No girl could forget such a thing as that. But she had decided that there must have been something the matter with him. Perhaps men were like that. They had fits of "coming all over amorous," as the catchphrase went. Laurie knew absolutely nothing about men for a girl who had knocked about the world as she had. But she was no fool, and during her two years of loneliness in her little Westminister attic, she had read an enormous number of books of all sorts.

So she thanked Mr. Albery calmly, and she and Gladys packed their suitcases and were ready when the princely, silent motor came for them.

"Give me luxury!" said Gladys to herself, as she tripped down the broad, shallow-topped oak staircase of Mark Albery's historic Tudor house.

It was nearly eight o'clock, at which time dinner was served. Gladys had left Laurie up in her bedroom, hastily changing her clothes. Laurie had been working with Mr. Albery all the afternoon. Something very important had happened just before they arrived. Laurie had sent Gladys down, because she could not bear to be watched when she was in a hurry.

Tomorrow, Gladys meet a friend.

Little Bill Picks Bill Tilden As Perry Master

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—William M. "Little Bill" Johnston, U. S. Davis cup hero along with Big Bill Tilden in 1920 and for six years thereafter, believes Tilden at his best would have beaten England's great Fred Perry.
 Tilden's cannot hand serve, he says, would have meant the difference, the two otherwise being about equal. Perry goes to the net more frequently than did Tilden at his amateur peak.
 Johnston calls Tilden the tennis marvel of all time. "He's played more tennis than any man living and is still going at 42 years of age," says Little Bill. "I'm 40 and haven't touched a racquet in two or three years."

Polk Of Fort Worth To Manufacture, Distribute Edwards Water Bleeder

Manufacturing and distribution of the Edwards Hydrostatic Water Bleeder, invented by Will Knox Edwards of Big Spring, has been taken by Polk of Fort Worth, Edwards announced here Tuesday. Edwards has thoroughly tested his invention for more than two years, and it has proved practical and economical in every respect he stated. It is an economical method of draining water without loss of oil, and does not have to be watched or checked in any manner. "The Bleeder," said Edwards, "is being built in dimensions to handle any volume of water, and is adjustable to tanks of various height. It prevents the loss of oil and eliminates dangerous and sloppy conditions surrounding tanks." Since manufacture of the units was started two weeks ago, orders have come in for over two hundred and fifty. Within the next few weeks, Edwards said the manufacturing plants would also be opened in California and Tulsa, Oklahoma. An assembly plant may be located here, and Big Spring made a distribution center. Edwards received his patent about a year ago. The Bleeder will sell for $47.50 f. o. b. factory, Edwards said.

More Than Half Of Deposits In 6000 Banks In Receivership Are Unpaid Dec. 31, 1934, FDIC Says

WASHINGTON—More than half the deposits in six thousand banks in receivership in the United States remained unpaid on December 31, 1934, it is disclosed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as the result of a recently completed survey of bank liquidations. Total deposits tied up with the failure of 6,352 banks for which figures were available were more than 4.7 billion dollars, of which fifty-one per cent was still not realized to depositors at the year-end. Almost all the banks had been closed for at least a year, many of them for much longer periods, the report revealed. Included in the figures are nine closed insured banks, all of which suspended during the last six months of 1934. Records of the F. D. I. C. show that practically every depositor of these banks had received full payment of his claim by December 31st.

The survey of receiverships was made with the co-operation of the state banking commissioners throughout the country and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Briefly summarized, it is as follows: Banks in receivership on December 31, 1934, 6,352 (1,551 national—4,801 state); aggregate deposits at date of closing, $4,739 million ($1,882 million national—$2,857 million state); amount of deposits unpaid on December 31, 1934, $2,296 million ($874 million national—$1,522 million state).

'Smart Girl' Ritz Feature

"I don't want to be an ingenue—I'd rather be a bad girl, or the daughter of poverty-stricken parents, or a farm girl, or anything that has color and romance to it!" That is Ida Lupino's ultimatum to Hollywood in an attempt to live down the title of "England's immortal ingenue" conferred on her by the British press during her rise to prominence on the English stage.

"I don't want to play the 'sweet young thing' in Hollywood," says Miss Lupino, who climaxes a series of important roles for Paramount with the title role in Walter Wanger's production, "Smart Girl" which, with Kent Taylor and Gail Patrick in the co-featured role, opens Tuesday at the Ritz theatre. "To be branded as a 'sweet young thing' puts an actress in a rut from which it is impossible to escape. It is a menace to any serious stage or screen ambition even for a very good actress."

"Smart Girl" gives Miss Lupino the kind of role she wants as a live-wire American girl who refuses to be discouraged because she can no longer live in luxury to which she has been accustomed nor have the man she has set her heart on. She starts from the bottom to win these things back again by her own efforts, and succeeds brilliantly.

Officers said the men were inebriated.
