

Tech AAUP assists four professors denied tenure

Explanations not available to profs

By ANNETTE WOODS
Staff Writer

Four Tech professors recently denied tenure privileges without being given reasons by their respective departments are being assisted in their appeals to the University Tenure and Privilege Committee by the Tech Chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), said Dr. Benjamin H. Newcomb, president of AAUP.

"There are four who have come to the AAUP for help," said Newcomb. "There may be more in this situation that I do not know about."

Newcomb said he was unable to give the names of the professors because, "they came to us in private and it would be betraying their confidence."

"It is a private matter between themselves and the Tenure and Privilege Committee," he said. "And until they want to make a public statement of it, we're going to keep it confidential."

"The matter is certainly of serious concern to all faculty members," Newcomb added.

At a Friday meeting of the AAUP, he said, "these people were denied by their department heads in their original applications and no reasons were given."

Newcomb said the four professors asked for the written statements of explanation at the offices of the deans of their colleges. The deans then referred the professors to their department heads but the professors were denied the statements.

"A written reason is necessary for the professor to appeal his case," said Newcomb.

Tenure is a status of lifetime employment granted after a probationary period to one holding position as a teacher. Tenure protects the professor from dismissal except in cases of serious misconduct or incompetence, determined by formal hearings or trial.

The Faculty Handbook, an annual bulletin for faculty members, states, "in granting or denying tenure to a faculty member, the following procedure is followed: First, the faculty member is voted on by ballot by all tenured members of his department. Then follows the recommendation of the department chairman, the tenure committee of the college (each college has a separate committee), the dean of the college, the dean of the Graduate School, the vice president for academic affairs, the executive vice president, president and finally the Board of Regents."

The Faculty Handbook requires only a period of probation determined by rank. The policy states, "therefore, upon completion of the specified probationary period, the employe affected either must be granted tenure or his employment must be terminated. The application of the tenure policy does not permit nontenure status by persons who would otherwise hold tenure granted solely on their length of service."

Newcomb said he has written the Washington office of the AAUP for information on handling the matter of the four professors. A motion was passed at the meeting for the president of AAUP to confer with Dr. Grover Murray, Tech president, on the matter of tenure policy after suggestions are received from the Washington office.

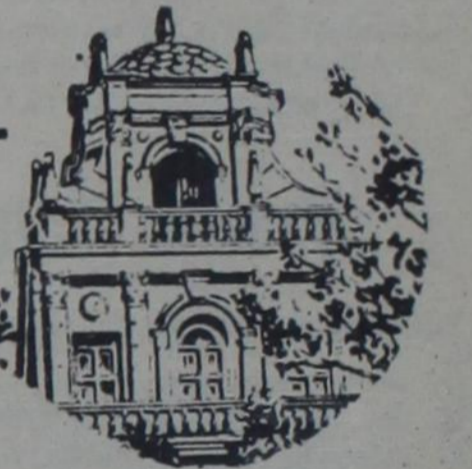

"Nobody has been fired yet," said Newcomb. "So we can't approach the Administration from that angle. It is however, an infringement on faculty rights."

Murray said the problem has never before occurred at Tech. "I do not know why this is happening and I doubt if Dr. Murray could explain why the department heads are rebelling," Newcomb said.

"We want to make sure these people get the opportunity to present their appeals," said Newcomb. He said he has advised one professor to contact a lawyer and then schedule a hearing. Newcomb said the others "are not that far along and have only written their appeals."

At Columbia, Air Force base

Scattered protests continue against renewed bombing in North Vietnam

(AP) — Scattered protests against renewed bombing in North Vietnam continued Monday with demonstrations at Columbia University, Westover Air Force Base in Massachusetts and the McDonnell-Douglas corporation at St. Louis, Mo.

Columbia President William J. McGill announced he would use "all appropriate means" to keep university facilities open after demonstrators closed eight buildings at the New York City school Monday morning, refusing entry to faculty or students.

"All of us at Columbia are sensitive to the divided state of American society and to the strong emotion generated by the peace movement," McGill said in a statement.

"But an old evil in southeast Asia will never be corrected by a new evil at Columbia. Militant blockades of the doorways to some Columbia buildings as a gesture toward peace are an incredible contradiction. Such action suggests to the people we are seeking to reach only that we are irresponsible and irrational."

The school moved in Manhattan Supreme Court for the arrest of two men and other unidentified protesters who defied a Wednesday court order banning demonstrations on the campus.

The defendants were ordered to show cause Tuesday why they should not be arrested for criminal or civil contempt for defying the order.

California abortionists give volume discounts to Houston agency clients

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston abortion referral agency is now doing such a large amount of business that hospitals in California are giving its clients a volume discount.

Bob Mosby, director of Problem Pregnancy Information, Inc., here, said it's actually cheaper for a Houston woman to fly to Los Angeles for an abortion than it is to receive a legal abortion in Texas.

Legal abortions, said Mosby, cost around $550 in Texas with the best medical care, but a woman can receive the same service in Los Angeles, plus pay for a round-trip airline ticket, for a total of only about $365.

"Abortion is one of the rare parts of medicine that deals with supply and demand," said Mosby. "Since we here are dealing with a substantial number of patients, we have been able to make arrangements with hospitals in Los Angeles. It, in effect, is a volume discount."

The Houston agency operates as an unofficial clearing house for women from all over the state seeking abortions.

Mosby said the agency works closely with agencies in Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and Lubbock and arranges legal abortions for about 6,000 women a year.

The agency has 90 to 100 clients from the Houston area a week, plus 20 to 30 from Dallas and six to 10 a week from San Antonio, Lubbock and Austin.

In some cases, he said, the State of Texas foots the bill for the abortion medical costs.

"We can get Texas medicaid to pay for abortions performed in California," he said, "if that person is on medicaid when she comes to see us."

But the majority of women who come to the problem pregnancy agency don't qualify for medicaid. Most are average, middle-class women between 13 and 25.

"The need for an abortion is definitely a white, middle class phenomenon," said Mosby.

Sixty-five per cent of his clients, he says, are unmarried and only recently experienced in their relations with men. Most are victims of what Mosby calls "a Bible Belt ethic."

"The type of birth control used by 74 per cent of them is none," he said. "Most of them see the use of birth control as affirmation of promiscuity. They're not realistic enough to accept the possibility of pregnancy."

He said a referral agency in Atlanta has noted the ethic among its clients but this is not generally observed outside the South.

Mosby said the social stigma of being unmarried and pregnant seems to be declining in Texas, however, and most of the agency clients are seeking help for what he called "pragmatic reasons," whereas only four or five years ago abortion was chiefly a moral issue.

"Now the reasons they give are centered on the idea that it's just not practical for them to have a child now," he said.

The Houston agency usually gives its clients choices of where they want their abortions performed. New York, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas and the District of Columbia all permit abortions on demand. Most women, said Mosby, choose California because it's cheaper.

Abortions cannot be performed in Texas, legally, except to save the life of the mother.

"This law is interpreted pretty liberally here in Houston," said Mosby. "For instance, if a woman tells a doctor she'll commit suicide rather than have the baby, and the doctor believes it, this can be interpreted as justification under the law."

"The real artitrators of abortions in Texas are the hospitals. They could legally get away with a lot more if they were inclined to. But the hospitals are all rather conservative and take a stiff line on abortions."

The U.S. Supreme Court is expected to rule on the constitutionality of the Texas abortion law. If the law is tossed out, hospitals and doctors will not be forbidden from performing abortions on demand.

If that happens, he said, there are hospitals in Houston prepared to start providing abortions. Mosby said the increased number of such operations in Texas will inevitably bring cost down.

"This happened in both New York and California," he said. "The operations cost $600 at first in New York. Now the cost is down to $150."

Ruling on Hicks death pending

A ruling on the death of Bill D. Hicks, a sophomore from Amarillo, is still being withheld by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy until autopsy results are complete.

Hicks, 20, was found dead in his room at Gordon Hall about 10:30 p.m. Sunday by dormitory officials. The body was lying on the floor, clad only in pants. There were no marks on the body.

Judge LeCroy estimated Hicks' death to be four to five days prior to the discovery of the body.

Services are pending at Sanders Funeral Home.

Female VP discusses woman's role at UT

AUSTIN (AP)—A woman vice president at the University of Texas has told the school's top scholars that the "women's movement," like the "cultural revolution," appears to be here to stay.

"More women will be seen in leadership positions—on the faculty, on the staff and in the administration of our universities," said Dr. Lorene Rogers.

She spoke at an initiation dinner honoring new members of Phi Beta Kappa, the leading honorary scholastic society in arts and sciences.

Ms. Rogers said studies since 1968 show that in many college departments women "have no position at all—they are simply not employed for faculty positions. For example, at the beginning of this year, 25 departments on this campus had no women faculty members at any rank—and this in spite of the fact that more than 12 per cent of all Ph.D. degrees last year were conferred on women, both locally and nationally."

Ms. Rogers, chairman of a special committee on the status of women at UT-Austin, said in departments where women are employed, "they are concentrated at the lowest levels and lowest salary levels."

"This is a situation which must change—both because it is right that it should and because pressures are being brought by the federal government to see that it does," she said.

Ms. Rogers said the "cultural revolution" of the young is certain to bring changes to all areas of university activity.

Also, she said, colleges find themselves "the object of an intense public scrutiny which did not exist in the past. More and more, the question is being asked, 'why can't the educators solve the problems of society?'"

Protestors picket Waco dental college

DALLAS (AP)—A small number of protesters picketed Baylor Dental College Monday afternoon calling for revisions of the school's dress and hair code for students.

Dr. Kenneth V. Randolph, the dean, said the dress and hair code had been in effect at the dental college since 1970 and revised each year by agreement of student representatives, faculty members and trustees.

"The pickets are outsiders. As far as we know no students were involved," Randolph said. "However, they did include a graduate dentist who wears long hair."

Randolph said the college felt the code was especially important in dealing with health and treating patients at the school clinic.

"We do not believe anyone likes a dentist or student looking down into his mouth who has unusually long hair or a beard," he said. "It is unpleasant and poses a danger to hygiene."

To convict Jackson

Angela Davis admits writing love letters

SAN JOSE, Calif (AP) — Angela Davis' defense attorneys acknowledged Monday she wrote convict George Jackson love letters but sought to suppress two of them as "totally irrelevant" to her trial on murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges.

The dispute over the letters was in open court but with the jury excused for the day.

The jury was excused for the day after attorney Leo Branton challenged introduction of Ms. Davis' impassioned letters as prosecution evidence in her murder-kidnap-conspiracy trial.

"We do not quarrel with the authenticity of the signature of Miss Davis," Branton said of the letters.

But when prosecutor Albert Harris Jr. tried to introduce two of the five disputed letters in evidence, Branton objected, labeling them "totally irrelevant and immaterial to the issues of this case."

Additionally, he said their seizure was "a violation of the privacy of Ms. Davis and a violation of her various constitutional rights."

The state has said the letters vow love and political solidarity to the subsequently slain Jackson and link Ms. Davis to an Aug. 7, 1970 Marin County courthouse escape attempt which claimed four lives, including that of a judge.

The state says Ms. Davis, 28, in collusion with George Jackson's brother, Jonathan, 17, plotted to kidnap hostages at Marin and exchange them for Jackson, then imprisoned at San Quentin on charges of killing a prison guard. She is a former UCLA philosophy teacher and a self-described communist.

The defense fought for two days last week to keep jurors from reading Ms. Davis' letters — including a "diary" found in Jackson's cell after he was slain in what was described by prison officials as an escape attempt last Aug. 21.

With the appearance of the state's 50th witness, hand-writing expert Sherwood Morrill, the defense announced it would agree that Ms. Davis wrote and signed the letters.

The judge then ruled them admissible, but said the defense had the right to renew its objection later in the trial.

Defense attorneys also acknowledged that Ms. Davis signed four sales slips for guns — including one for a shotgun bought Aug. 5, 1970, just two days before the escape try.

Witnesses have said this was the sawed-off shotgun which killed Judge Harold Haley, Jonathan Jackson and two black convicts also were slain.

The defense also agreed that eight checks cashed by Ms. Davis within a month before the escape try are authentic — including one she used to buy an airplane ticket four hours after the violence.

Letters to the editor

Protestors question abridgement of rights

The rights of Americans have been severely challenged once more on this campus. The constitution guarantees the right of freedom of speech and the right of peaceful assembly. Our forefathers considered these rights important enough to fight and die for. Why do some of the patriotic citizens of Lubbock and the fine upstanding members of the Board of Regents and Administration of Texas Tech find these guaranteed rights of such insignificant importance?

Perhaps we should go through point by point the reasons by which they feel these rights should be abridged to Tech students. The first objection is the disruption of classes. The demonstration took place on a Saturday, a day on which no classes are held. The second might be the disruption of free flow of traffic, again the demonstration took place on a Saturday, a day on which there is little traffic yet we very carefully did not march on the streets of Texas Tech and assembled on Memorial Circle. We were given permission to march on the sidewalks and in the street at 1:30 p.m. down Broadway by the city of Lubbock.

Third there is the question of amplification. We came to be heard and we provided our own amplification in the form of bullhorns. Thursday ROTC amplification was used on Tech during classes in the form of loud speakers. Their fourth objection might be the location of the demonstration. We are sure some people would have preferred that the demonstration was held in an area away from the view of most people. However we felt that this stipulation was an arbitrary abridgement on the rights of Tech students.

In effect the Administration and Board of Regents are once more showing Tech students their true feelings towards them. The UD on April 24 stated, "Events determined by Murray to be 'All University' events could be staged at the circle regardless of amplification use, structure erection or traffic disruption." Therefore the policy is distinctly discriminatory.

Perhaps many feel that this demonstration was not worth the risk of being arrested and kicked out of school. Let us review the purpose of this demonstration. April 22 has been set aside as a day of Peace Demonstrations through out the country. Many people including some in the United States Senate and House of Representatives feel that this war is unconstitutional. If it is not that, it is certainly a war that is tearing our country apart. There are people who believe that all of the peoples of the world are brothers.

There are people who feel that in order not to completely destroy the world we must put an end to all wars. There are people who question if quadruple amputees or dead men could care what the communists get or what U.S. business is threatened. Yet these are just convictions of some individuals.

But as citizens of the United States concerned about the rightness of our country's actions, we feel obliged to speak out when speaking out is called for, and to do so in the most effective way possible. The war in Vietnam is immoral and unjust by a consensus of the world's people and at least of doubtful constitutionality. But those points aside, what more appropriate place could be found for the expression of ideas — any ideas — than the center of the campus of a university, whose very life is supposedly the pursuit of ideas?

DOONESBURY

Administration over-reacts childishly

Once again, Tech's administration has completely over-reacted in a very childish manner to initially uncomplicated and simple situation.

By seeking and receiving a temporary restraining order prohibiting certain individuals from participating in a peaceful protest against the war, many students now sincerely question the validity of free thought and speech that has been ingrained in us throughout our education. The people specifically named by this order were those who had signed a petition requesting of Dr. Murray the use of the Memorial Circle as the site for a peaceful demonstration against the war.

Now, I am aware of the other sites on campus that could have been used for this purpose, however, what is so almighty sacred about the Circle — I cross it every day between class and I have never noticed that the grass was blue or the stunted West Texas shrubbery gold. As a matter of fact if this restriction against using the Circle for anything but All-University events — whatever that is — or classes was literally applied, then the University should put up "Keep Off The Grass" signs or else put one of Lubbock's tanks at each entrance to keep students off between classes.

Further, I question why only some of the names on that petition were singularly honored by the restraining order and not all.

As Donny Richards pointed out in his editorial, why must any little action by students, for whatever cause, become the catalyst (no pun intended) for a more severe reaction by the administration.

Even if no legal action comes against those who actively protested on Saturday, the apparent necessity for the multitude of police officers, video-taping and court orders is indicative I suppose of the pre-neanderthal paranoia that still runs rampant in this portion of the world.

Finally, to you proponents of democracy and progress, don't give up the ship. I guess after HAIR and liquor-by-the-drink, we needed something to help even the score.

Disgusted with sports story

Sports editor:

I have been a student at Tech for four years and I am finally fed up.

Last Saturday morning and afternoon I spent nearly five hours in 80+ heat and a typical West Texas duststorm to shoot one of the most solid competitive rounds of golf I have ever had the enjoyment of playing. A missed putt on the 17th hole cost me a tie for the championship with a well deserving Randy Robinson. All in all it was a day to remember until you ruined it!

This morning when I read your story on the tournament I was so mad I was sick to my stomach. Not only did you completely leave my name out of the story, you gave the credit to someone else! This is the third time since 1968 that you have slighted teams that I have competed on or me personally. I am sick of it!

If you can't report a sporting event correctly, then don't report it, damnit! Nothing hurts an athlete or anyone for that matter more than when someone else gets the credit for an accomplishment of his own. I don't wish to blow any horns for myself and for that reason I ask that you do not print my name even though I am signing this for your own information and curiosity. I have the trophy that I won to prove my case.

In the future, I am sure that I speak for every deserving student at Tech. If you cannot get it right, then get off the pot and let someone else try!

Praises Saturday demonstrators, urges court attendance

At times, I have seen the administration at Tech take obvious self-interest actions, but none reach the degree of that of Saturday, April 22. On that date, the first antiwar street march and subsequent rally took place in Lubbock. Prior to the march, the April 22nd Coalition, a united front of 12 recognized campus organizations against the raging war in Vietnam received a parade permit from the city of Lubbock for the march up Broadway to Memorial Circle, and had petitioned the administration for the permission to use Memorial Circle for the Rally.

We were denied that right even though ROTC had full use of the grounds the previous day for a real pretty militaristic show.

Opinions expressed in The University Daily are those of the editor or of the writer of the article and are not necessarily those of the college administration or the Board of Regents.

The reason that the administration gave for the denial was that it was not an "all campus event." When the majority of students as well as 73 per cent of the American public want out of the war now, I would conclude that it was indeed an all campus event.

The march up Broadway was very peaceful and attracted a group of some 200 people. We had already stated that we would use Memorial Circle, and when the march reached the Tech campus the students went to Memorial Circle, to show that we had as much right as anyone to use the grounds and also to show the absurdity of President Murray's policies.

After approximately 20 minutes into the rally, those who signed the petition supporting our right to use memorial circle, and those speakers at the rally, myself included, were handed a court injunction requiring us to appear in court on a set date. The number on the injunction itself was over twenty campus leaders, and it soon swelled even greater by those who refused to leave and by those who turned their names in to the Sheriff's Dept.

I would like to personally show my gratitude and admiration to those who stayed at the Circle with us and who will have to appear in court for the expression of the right to freedom of speech. I would like to also ask those who did not wish to face arrest but believe that the war is wrong and that the administration is slowly stomping the Bill of Rights to death, to come to our hearing, write letters to the administration and demand an end to such tyranny. The court hearing will be on Monday, May 1 at 10 a.m. in 137th District Court at the Lubbock County Courthouse.

For years the doves have been telling us that we were involved in an immoral war against the people of Southeast Asia and that they were really fighting a civil war and we should bug out.

That is a bunch of bull! The three week old invasion of South Vietnam clearly shows what kind of war this is. My only regret is that Johnson stopped the bombing in 1968. To Nixon I say RIGHT ON!

Big Plans

BIG PLANS — Discussing plans for a gala dinner party to honor retired faculty and staff at Texas Tech University are, left, Accounting Prof. Haskell G. Taylor and Prof. Emeritus C. C. Perryman, who taught engineering graphics at Texas Tech.

Campus entrance closed Thursday

The Broadway entrance to campus will be closed to traffic Thursday morning so that workmen can erect the seal by the fountain. The entrance will be closed from 7 a.m. until the seal is in place.

Retired Tech faculty, staff to be honored at banquet

For the first time in Tech history a gala dinner and program have been planned to honor retired faculty and staff. Approximately 400 expected to attend the event Wednesday in the University Center ballroom.

A buffet dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m. Vice-President for Academic Affairs S.M. Kennedy will be master of ceremonies. Entertainment will include the music of Merry Notes.

Accounting professor Haskell Taylor heads the committee in charge of arrangements. He said the committee expects to make the event an annual affair.

"This is for everyone," he said. "It is for former presidents and former groundskeepers—everyone! It gives us an opportunity to show our appreciation of past services and gives the honored guests an annual opportunity for their own 'family reunion.'"

"We hope to achieve," he said, "a closer relationship between these retired people and the university, to help them feel they still are a part of the university community."

The 1972 event will honor formerly retired faculty and staff and those who will retire on or before Aug. 31. Honorees will receive certificates of appreciation.

Also, those retired persons will be reminded of benefits available to them.

Taylor said guests will include many of the present faculty and staff at Texas Tech.

Among the special guests will be: Frank Jackson, executive secretary of the Texas State Teachers Retirement System (TSTRS); John G. Hutton, manager of the Lubbock District Office, Social Security Administration; Nat Williams, chairman of the Board of Trustees, TSTRS; and Ed Irons, superintendent of the Lubbock Independent School District.

Working with Taylor on arrangements have been other members of his committee, John Baumgardner of the animal science faculty and John S. Phillips of the faculty in home and family life, and a women's committee headed by Ms. Glenn E. Barnett. Assisting Ms. Barnett are Ms. Kennedy, Ms. Taylor, Ms. Roy Wells and Ms. Gertrude Morse.

Dr. Sujit Roy is named Ag 'Teacher of Month'

Dr. Sujit Roy has been selected Agriculture Teacher of the Month for May by the Aggie Council.

Roy is an associate professor of statistics in the Department of Agricultural Economics.

He teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in statistics and distribution economics. He was cited for his effective teaching and interest in students.

Roy was also elected Outstanding Teacher of the Year for the College of Agricultural Sciences by the Aggie Council.

Rick Kellison, Animal business major from Lockney, has been selected Aggie of the month for April.

Kellison was commended for active participation in the Block and Bridle Club and the Rodeo Association.

Tech non-swimmer swims, saves boy

By KEITH GLASS
Staff Writer

Ray Brummett, 18-year-old freshman in pre-law, saved a local youngster from probable drowning in a lake at A.M. Leftwich Park last Friday evening, though Brummett himself cannot swim.

"I wasn't really scared," Brummett said. "I saw his head bobbing in the water and at first I didn't think anything was the matter. When I realized he was in trouble, I just went in the water and brought him out."

The boy Brummett saved was 10-year-old Don Culpepper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carel Culpepper of 3014 59th Street, who had been fishing at the lake with friends.

Brummett and a friend, Kenneth Cowling, 17, were riding motorcycles through the park when Culpepper's friends called to them for help. Brummett pushed the Culpepper boy to Cowling and together they brought him to the shore.

Brummett said that his future plans are to finish law school and go into private practice. He said that his father and others in his family are lawyers and he hopes to inherit his father's practice.

His hobbies and interests include cycles and stereos, though he adds that there is really no limit to what he is interested in.

As a result of his action, Brummett lost his glasses in the lake. He noted that he received a new pair of glasses from a local optical firm.

Brummett resides with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Brummett, at 4001 47th Street.

Nine business administration students will be honored at a reception held by Dean Jack D. Steele, Friday at 2:30 p.m. in the dean's conference room.

Receiving awards for superior academic performance and for fulfilling individual requirements necessary for each award will be Ernest Dwain Camp, Gary Allen Williams and Robert Dale Luchsinger, Jr. Camp will receive the Richard Pollard Memorial Fellowship, Williams will receive the James L. Quicksall Scholarship and Luchsinger will receive the Lubbock Traffic Club Scholarship in Transportation.

Home Ec frat honors two

Tech's Home Economics department held its annual spring banquet April 18 at Hodges Community Center. The banquet was sponsored by the Fashion Board, American Home Economics Association and Phi Upsilon Omicron, home economics honorary fraternity.

PUO were recognized.

Ms. Lola Drew and Ms. Ilse Wolf, two retiring faculty members in Home and Family Life, were honored for past services at Tech. Officers for AHEA, the Fashion Board and Interim Dean Donald Longworth was awarded for his service to the department this past year. Pat Zuelke, vice-president of AHEA, delivered a speech.

Biblical lit instructor resigns

Claude Dollins, an instructor in the Biblical Literature Department, has announced his resignation, effective July.

Dollins has been at Tech for three years, having come from Richmond, Va. He received his B.S. degree from Hardin-Simmons in 1963 and his M.R.E. degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1966, under the auspices of the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Dollins is presently instructing classes in the life and teachings of Jesus and introduction to the New Testament. Besides his duties as an instructor, he is also director of the Baptist Student Center.

Reasons for his resignation of both his teaching post and his post at the BSU is so that he can complete his graduate degree in counseling here. He will also be doing internship at the Mental Health Center in Plainview.

Secretaries name new officers

The National Collegiate Association for Secretaries chapter at Tech installed its officers for 1972-73 at a banquet Sunday.

Linda D'Acosta was named president and Paula Green, vice-president. Susan Dirks will be the new secretary and Julie Chapman will take over the treasurer's duties. Historian will be Lou Ann Hargue, and Joy Higgins will handle publicity.

Carolyn Walker received a service award for being the senior who contributed most during her membership. Miss Chapman received the non-officer award for contributing most during the year. Peggy Young and LaNelle Polley received scholarship awards for having the highest grade point averages among the members.

DR. RUDY ACUNA

MECHA founder advocates self-help

By MYRLEEN PARLETTE Staff Writer

The founder of MECHA and expert in Chicano studies told a group of about 60 Tech students that Chicanos need to determine their own future.

Dr. Rudy Acuna, professor of Chicano Studies at San Fernando Valley State College, Calif., said "Chicanos have a need for cultural pluralism and self-determination in education."

Acuna spoke Friday afternoon in the University Center Ballroom.

Acuna said the American government has used the educational system as an advertising agent. He said "a good student did not criticize the government, did not criticize the institutions and spoke English."

The Chicano has a need to grow in his own background, he said. Acuna said that the Chicano student has problems in American society because he faces the conflict between his own culture, represented by his life at home and the Anglo culture, his life at school.

According to Acuna, the answer to this "failure complex" is for the Chicano to "grow in his own background and find a positive self-image in his own culture."

Acuna explained that historical information on the migration of the Chicano into America is necessary for a complete understanding of today's problems. He traced the image and the economic situation of the Chicano in America from the initial migration in 1910 to the quota immigration act passed in 1921.

He said that most Americans think of the Chicano as a temporary worker with no economic stability. Acuna said the economic situation of the Chicano is the main reason the Chicano is unable to help himself. He said that the middle class Chicano college student is forced to identify as a "brown anglo" instead of gaining his own identity and helping in his own community.

Acuna said, "I don't judge a man by how much money he makes, but by how much a man can contribute."

Rodeo changes coliseum into picture of Old West

By JACQUE WOODRUFF Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Rodeo Association's rodeo this weekend was full of surprises. Backstage from the arena were surrounded by more horses and cowboys than are in a TV western. It was a different world, a different century.

On a campus of sandals and long hair, there existed people with hats, and boots, and chewing tobacco. Several of the entrants would bite off a hunk of the dark brown tobacco, chew it, then spit, as if to punctuate their short sentences.

It's not uncommon to hear a "yes, ma'am." Bell bottoms are out of place. Not even the coliseum escaped the transformation. There an eight-inch dirt base covering the floor gave the appearance of a cotton field, and colored flags overhead suggested the big top of a circus.

The crowd of about 1,800 consisted mostly of families. The kids seemed to love the clown, who filled in with various skits. One of the two clowns had a shotgun that sounded like the start of the Civil War. The kids were thrilled at seeing Festus, a real-live cowboy hero.

In a rodeo the cowboys get the spotlight for their daring performances. An amusing sight is when a stubborn calf continues to outrun the pick-up man determined to get it aimed out of the ring. During one of the women's events, the goat-tying, a goat is staked out at one end of the ring and the cowgirls ride across to it, flop it over, and tie three legs. The fastest time wins, so the girls aren't too gentle. The same goat is used for all contestants. In one performance, when the goat was untied at the last, it ran all around the ring, and evaded many capture attempts during its revolt. The spotlight was turned on the goat, and the audience began cheering it on. The goat was still loose when Festus came on.

The calf roping can get to be quite a chore for the cowboy, when he tries to knock a 200-odd-pound calf over. The calf usually is a wisened-up veteran of many other rodeos, and is not overly anxious to cooperate. Constantly aware of the seconds ticking off, some cowboys got panicky, when after several unsuccessful attempts, the calf was standing there smiling. A desperate few tried jerking on the calf's feet, pulling on its tail, football tackles, twisting its head, tickling its ears and even jumping on it. Several calves resisted all these methods, only to get a dirty look from a dusty, disgruntled cowboy. The calf would return with a look that was similar to saying, "I told you men were dumb."

Other events included: saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc riding, ribbon roping, breakaway roping, steer wrestling, barrel racing, and bull riding.

"A cowboy's work is never done" is very true, as far as organizing a rodeo is concerned. The Texas Tech Rodeo Association has 500 members who did all the work. They sold programs and tickets, organized the publicity, collected fees, arranged for judges and others to run the rodeo, took care of the printing and decorated the coliseum. All of this was in addition to intense practice by the participants.

The Dub Parks Award, a silver buckle, is awarded annually to an individual elected by the members, who contributes the most to the association. This year, Jesse Swagerty, president, was the winner.

The association is a member of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) is divided into regions. Tech is in the southwest region with 19 other schools. Ten rodeos are held each season, beginning in the fall. Each school picks a team consisting of six boys and three girls. At the end of the year, the top two teams and top three contestants from each region go to the national finals at Bosman, Montana.

The gate receipts from the Tech rodeo are used to finance the team. The contestants' entry fee is put in a pot to be paid to the top placers in each event. There is a possibility of winning as much as $500 for first place in some events. A cowboy can be disqualified for violating any one of the rules in the events.

Gotcha!

This calf is about to be abruptly stopped as the roper begins to take up the slack. The loop was thrown at Tech's National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rodeo last weekend. The event was a prelude to the national finals to be held at Bosman, Montana.

ANDRE KILE
AMERICA'S LEADING ILLUSIONIST

Andre Kile has spoken in 48 countries on five continents of the world, and on national television in 35 countries. This year, he will probably be performing and speaking on more college and university campuses throughout the world than any other person.

"UNMASKING THE UNKNOWN"
Is the title Mr. Kile give to this intriguing presentation in which among other things, he will give a visible demonstration of the fourth dimension, and reveal some amazing predictions of the future which could affect the life of every person in attendance.

This unusual presentation is sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International. Due to his interest in the supernatural, Mr. Kile will include some observation of the miracles of Christ from the point of view of an illusionist. This will, no doubt, be the most unusual program you will ever witness.

Technical writing authorities to talk at two-day study

Highly-skilled writers and editors from industry, business and government will address sessions of the fifth annual Technical Writing Institute to be held Thursday and Friday at Tech.

Such nationally-known authorities as Eldred E. Atkins, communications specialist for the International Business Machines (IBM) Corp., Rochester, Minn., and Thomas Tyson, technical editor for E. I.

du Pont de Nemours and Co., Aiken, S.C., will be here to discuss techniques of informative writing.

Participation in the institute is open to all persons who are interested in any facet of technical writing, according to Ms. Marie Miles, chairman of the two-day study sponsored by the Tech English department in cooperation with the El Paso Natural Gas Company and the Clark Equipment Company.

There will be a pre-conference coffee from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Wednesday and a luncheon and a dinner meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Atkins, whose specialty is internal technical publications, will speak on "A Comprehensive Publications Program: A Simplified Writing-Editing Approach." Tyson's topic will be "Grassroots Technical Communications." Dr. Earl Britton of the College of Engineering at the University of Michigan will give the main address at the banquet and also will address one of the sessions.

In addition to teaching courses in scientific and technical writing, Dr. Britton organized and directs a seminar in scientific communications at Ann Arbor, Mich. He has conducted writing courses for many industries and government agencies, including General Motors, Ford, Monsanto, Dow Chemical Co., and the White Sands Missile Range. He will discuss "The Effects of Science and Technology on Our Language" and "How to Transition to Automated Publications" will be the subject of a talk by C. Fred Eggert, manager of the engineering publications department for Collins Radio Company, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Eggert has authored many technical manuals.

Institute reservations should be mailed directly to Marie Miles, Texas Tech University, Lubbock. The registration fee is $25 for each participant. Luncheon tickets are $2.50. Dinner tickets are $4.

Concert to feature original mass

The first full performance of a memorial mass written by Texas Tech University senior Ron Williams will highlight the choral concert to be presented by the Texas Tech Choir, the Tech Singers and members of the University Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday (April 25) in the Lubbock Christian College auditorium.

The two-part program, featuring classical and folk melodies as well as the contemporary work, will be under direction of Tech Choir conductor Gene Kenney. There will be no admission charge.

As their opening selection, members of the Tech choir will present Bach's Motet No. 6, "Praise the Lord, All Ye Nations," followed by Samuel Barber's "Let Down the Bars, O Death." They also will be heard in "Ode For Music" (Kodaly), "Two Doves" (Chorbajian); "Let Me Walk" (Fetler), two German folksongs, "Down the Valley" and "Still of Night" arranged by Brahms, and a Shaw-Parker arrangement of the American folksong, "He's Gone Away" with Bonnie Victor, soprano, as soloist.

The Tech vocalists will be joined by the orchestra in presenting William's memorial mass, a composition dedicated to the "victims of violence" at Kent State and Jackson State universities.

Written in three movements, the work includes "The Kyrie," a prayer for mercy for those who reacted with violence; the "Dies Irae," an indictment of violence, and the "Gloria," a reassertion of belief in God.

Incidental solos will be by Sara Peek, Ray Owens, Eddie Quillin and Steve Davis.

3-day flying clinic starts today

A safety flying clinic sponsored by the Lubbock chapter of 99s and the Federal Aviation Agency, will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 10 p.m. at Maxey Community Center, located at 30th and Oxford. Topics to be discussed include flying to Mexico, over-the-counter drugs, survival, accidents from an insurance company's view point, wake turbulence and services available from flight service stations, approach control and the tower. A vertigo chair will be available at every meeting.

Admission to the clinic is free to the public.

IM banquet lauds outstanding participants

Noche De Conquistadores, the annual Tech Intramural department awards banquet, was held last night in the ballroom of the University Center with some 250 people attending. The banquet, which recognizes the outstanding intramural participants and teams for the past year, was highlighted by two special awards and a talk by Tech executive Vice-President, Dr. S. M. Kennedy on the proposed improved intramural facilities.

Kennedy spoke on the future of intramural facilities at Tech and stated where the program now lies. Following the approval of the program by the Regents, Kennedy appointed a committee, comprised of 10 people including five students, to look into the type of facilities needed. He gave thanks to the Saddle Tramps, APO, WSO and to the students for their help with the program.

Following the talks by Kennedy and featured speaker Greg Wimmer, president of the Student Association, the awards were given out to respective participants and teams. Jennine McHaney, director of Women's Intramurals, presented the women's awards. Chris Allen, of Stangel Hall was awarded the Outstanding Sports Manager Award, Tiana Hayslip, of AD Pi was given the Outstanding Senior Award, Trudy Davis, of Horn Hall, was the outstanding participant for the year, SOBU won the sportsmanship Award and the Sweepstakes trophies were won by: sorority, Pi Beta Phi, dorm, Horn, and club-open, Roadrunners. Horn won the All-University award.

Etsel Buchanan, Director of Men's Intramurals, presented the men's awards. The winners in the Most Winning Teams division included: frat, Sigma Chi, dorm, Gaston and club, PEK.

The Best Unit Participation winners were: frat, Sigma Chi, dorm, Gaston and club, Chi Rho.

The outstanding teams in total points were: frat, Sigma Chi, dorm, Gaston, club, Chi Rho and independent, Scabs.

Seven awards were given to outstanding participants in total number of events participated in. Winners were Stewart Rowe of ATO with 26 events, Don Seba of Sigma Chi with 24 events, Dennis Phillips of PEK with 15 events, Ted Wooldridge of Sigma Chi with 14 events, Kenny Knox of Chi Rho, John Moldenhauer of the Scabs and Dudley Copland of Gaston Hall, all with 12 events.

Two special awards were given, one to the Intramural department and one from the department. Dudley Copland of Gaston Hall, presented Buchanan with a check for $500 from the Gaston Hall Association to be used in the improvement of intramural facilities. The Intramural department then gave a special award to Brooks Tinsley, of the UD, for his work in the coverage of Tech intramurals for the year.

Buchanan challenged the Tech students to follow up on the attempt to get new facilities for the Intramural department for the facilities will be theirs to use in the coming years.

Raider soccer team claims New Mexico tourney

By MIKE HALLMARK
Sports Writer

Tech's soccer team won its second tournament of the year as a 1-0 victory over host New Mexico State gave the 21-1-1 Raiders first place in the New Mexico Invitational Soccer Tournament held in Las Cruces last weekend.

Alfredo Guzman booted in the only goal of the New Mexico game after a shot by Geoff Harley rebounded off the goalie's shins to set up the score. Tech kept constant pressure on the New Mexico State goal, but were shut out until Guzman's opportunistic goal.

David Fordon had a great tournament in the nets for the Raiders, as he made a magnificent save of a State shot late in the game which would have tied the score. Tech got outstanding play from the six newcomers in the line-up as the new players showed exceptional poise under the tremendous pressure of tournament play.

"I can't express how impressed I was with the new guys especially and the whole team in general," said John Spiegelberg. "This team never gave up for a moment. We were down by two goals against Texas-El Paso and we got fired up at halftime and came back to win the game. I feel that this team will really be an exciting team to watch next fall. The play of Jeff Loving, Jim Wheeler, George Saunero, Giff Murray, Gary Koerner, and Doug Bruton makes me very optimistic about next year and also about the future of soccer at Tech. These are the guys that are going to carry the ball after we originals are gone."

In the first game against the University of Texas at El Paso, Tech found itself behind by two goals at the end of the first thirty minute half. The thirty minute half hampered the Raiders who normally play forty-five minute halves. With the game only lasting an hour, the Raiders realized that their superior conditioning was not going to be a factor. Refusing to let their realization upset them, the Techs kept their poise and came out for the second half determined to get back in the ball game. Alfredo Guzman pierced the UTEP goal for the first time with only ten minutes left in the game. Following Guzman's example, Wolf Kreuzer and Geoff Harley quickly followed suit with goals which jumped the Raiders out in front, 3-2. However, Tech could not put the tough UTEPIans away as they scored a goal to tie the game as time expired.

Referees decided to break the tie by penalty kicks, each team getting five one-on-one shots against the opposing goalie. Tech went first and after John Spiegelberg missed, Alfredo Guzman, Wolf Kreuzer, Geoff Harley, and Tom Schutz connected for goals to put Tech out in front, 7-3.

In UTEP's turn, David

Fordon pulled off more heroics as he blocked four out of five of the El Pasaon's shots to ice the Raider victory, 7-4.

Officers were also elected last weekend for next year. Geoff Harley was elected player-coach for next season while Alfredo Guzman was picked as president, Tom Schutz is next year's vice president, Tom Vaughn will be treasurer and Jeff Loving will serve as publicity officer.
