

Early campaign blunders doom McGovern quest

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern's quest for the White House was doomed by the blunders of its infancy, errors that all his campaigning could never undo.

To the end they plagued his candidacy. And in the end they helped President Nixon attain one of history's great landmarks.

In part, the fatal flaws stemmed from what McGovern had to do — or thought he had to do — to catch up and win the Democratic nomination in the first place.

But two problems stand out above all the rest:

—The admittedly ill-conceived McGovern proposal that every American be given $1,000 by the government. He dropped it but was never able to forget it. And the Republicans used it to help implant the notion that, if elected, McGovern would give away the money of the workingman to people who refuse to work.

—The case of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, the vice presidential nominee McGovern deposed — after promising him 1,000 per cent support despite his tardy disclosure of past mental treatments.

Those, and an assortment of other incidents, statements and slipups, enabled Nixon's forces to make McGovern himself the central campaign issue.

That effectively denied him the traditional offensive role of the challenger and shielded Nixon from the necessity of any intensive personal campaigning to defend his conduct in office.

It was particularly valuable to a president whose own campaign organization had been implicated in the June 17 wire-tapping of Democratic national headquarters and whose top White House aides had been accused of political sabotage and espionage.

And it was particularly frustrating to McGovern, struggling to take the attack, but always forced to defend. Nothing nettled him more than the fact that his own credibility, once rated his greatest asset, was put in question.

It was the image of radicalism on one hand and indecision on the other that appeared the central McGovern problem.

In that situation, McGovern steadily escalated the tone and wording of his attacks on Nixon and, in the process, aggravated the problem. He overstated his case, then had to defend the overstatements.

It was a campaign McGovern began on Jan. 18, 1971, in desperate need of exposure and attention to propel him out of single figures in the public opinion polls. At that point, no one could foresee that Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, then the towering favorite for the Democratic nomination, would be toppled in the 1972 primaries.

For a year, McGovern campaigned almost unnoticed. He went through three press secretaries in search of someone who could help him command national attention.

That quest, and the effort to shape an identifiably different position among

Welfare, Eagleton dump plague South Dakotan

Democratic contenders, helps account for the error that haunted McGovern to election day — the $1,000 grant proposal.

McGovern unveiled it on Dec. 13, 1971, saying he would drop the welfare program and instead give about $1,000 a year to everyone from "the poorest migrant workers to the Rockefellers." The money was to be taxed back from the relatively affluent.

He offered no estimate of the cost. As with his other proposals of those early days, it went almost unnoticed — to emerge months later as a major issue — and a major problem.

That came during the California presidential primary campaign, when McGovern defeated Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota in the contest that clinched his spot atop the Democratic ticket.

Humphrey hammered at the issue, called McGovern "the handout candidate," accused him of playing "the politics of deception."

Nixon's Republicans were carefully taking notes.

On Aug. 29, in a Wall Street speech, McGovern dropped the income-grant plan in favor of a federally financed welfare system to provide about $4,000 a year to a needy family of four. Again and again, he said it would give nothing to anybody able to work.

But the old proposal, and the impression it left, never stopped haunting his campaign.

The Eagleton case really began with a question from Frank Mankiewicz, a top McGovern aide: "Tom, do you have any skeletons rattling around in your closet?"

Eagleton said no, and hours later, on July 13, he was duly nominated to run for vice president with McGovern.

Then, on July 25, the running mates appeared together in Custer, S.D., Eagleton to announce that he had three times been hospitalized for nervous exhaustion and fatigue and twice had undergone electric-shock treatments.

"I am 1,000 per cent for Tom Eagleton and I have no intention of dropping him from the ticket," McGovern said.

But six days later, he did just that, saying that Eagleton's medical history would otherwise come to dominate the campaign.

Long afterwards, McGovern said he believed "the Eagleton thing" was at the root of what had then become his credibility problem. "I've tried to explain to people that a political leader who won't change his mind is really a menace rather than a leader."

"But I think that was the reason," he said.

McGovern acknowledged, too, that he was hurt by the bitterness of the primaries, particularly the Humphrey attacks in California.

With Eagleton off the ticket, McGovern embarked on what could only be damaging, semi-public quest for a replacement. Only when he came to a candidate with no constituency of his own, Sargent Shriver, did McGovern find a new partner. The Democratic National Committee nominated Shriver on Aug. 8.

But what was designed to be a six-week Democratic headstart on the campaign became, instead, a time of disarray. Amid the Eagleton case and its aftermath, the flow of campaign donations — never enough — diminished to a trickle. The polls showed McGovern losing ground to Nixon.

There were organizational problems. Starting from nowhere in his drive for the nomination, McGovern had of necessity put together his own organization in the primaries, usually running headon into the opposition of the party establishment.

That, too, left its scars, notably in Chicago, whose Mayor Richard J. Daley was denied a seat in the convention that nominated McGovern. While Daley came around, some in his organization never appeared to be wholeheartedly behind McGovern.

There were the highly publicized defections of Democrats for Nixon, notably that of John B. Connally, Nixon's former secretary of the Treasury. "Good riddance," said McGovern. "We didn't kick Connally out; he left."

But there was evidence that a good many other Democrats were leaving, too, concerned, Connally said, about McGovern's proposed defense posture; the nominee advocated cuts of some $30 billion in defense spending over a three-year period.

McGovern had presented a detailed defense-spending blueprint, a document that had the virtue of telling the voters precisely what he proposed to do.

But it had the political drawback of permitting the Republicans to assert that it would cost jobs, and to churn out figures about where, and how many.

McGovern remained a candidate in search of a theme that would grab the American voter. He never found it.

He said he was especially puzzled as to why the Watergate sabotage charges didn't take hold. He called Nixon's the most corrupt, wasteful and reckless administration in American history.

What it got him, in his own campaign television appearances, with voters telephoning their questions, was the suggestion that he was mud-slinging, that he changed his mind repeatedly.

In the primaries, McGovern had used maximum organization, door-to-door canvassing and emphasis on positions specifically designed to appeal to the left side of the party, to come from behind and win. It worked: He captured 10 of 23 presidential primaries.

Early in the campaign, McGovern said he had to reach out, broaden his constituency without compromising his principles.

"I can't win with the 30 per cent of the people who gave me the nomination," he said.

He was right.

Kennedy emerges from 'wreckage' as leading 1976 Demo prospect

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy emerged Wednesday from the wreckage of Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign as the nation's single most important Democrat and its top 1976 presidential prospect.

Any decision on whether to run won't come soon for the younger brother of the slain President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. Family considerations, as well as political ones, will figure in his determination.

Unlike McGovern, who started running almost as soon as the 1968 votes were tallied and who declared himself a candidate in January 1971, Kennedy can enjoy the luxury of noncandidacy until well into 1975.

For the 38-year-old Massachusetts senator stands alone in a party bereft of big-name leadership, despite the political obituaries that followed his 1969 accident at Chappaquiddick in which a secretary died and his 1971 defeat as assistant Senate Democratic leader.

Sens. Edmund S. Muskie and Hubert H. Humphrey have made clear they won't again seek national office; Gov. George C. Wallace's future is clouded by lingering effects of his near-assassination last May; and McGovern himself seems unlikely to exert much influence in view of his overwhelming defeat.

Other Democrats, however, are already looking to the future including:

—Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, 44, who was re-elected by a smashing majority while McGovern was losing that usually Democratic state.

—Sargent Shriver, 56, vice presidential nominee on the defeated Democratic ticket and Kennedy's brother-in-law, who seemed to enjoy his first race for elective office.

—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, 43, the deposed vice presidential nominee whose popularity

'wreckage' rod prospect appeared to soar among Democrats who felt McGovern dropped him unfairly despite his failure to disclose his treatment for nervous exhaustion.

Some of the hopeful, particularly Shriver and Eagleton, won't be running if Kennedy indicates interest.

Since turning down the Democratic vice presidential nomination last July, Kennedy campaigned tirelessly for McGovern.

If past history is followed, Kennedy probably will stay out of the internal battling for control of party machinery.

With his Senate seat not up until 1976, Kennedy is expected to be the chief Democratic campaigner in the congressional elections of 1974.

Unlike most other contenders, Kennedy can enjoy the luxury of waiting to decide whether to run. It would take only a short time for him to assemble the organization and the financing that others would need months to put together.

Election board calls for investigation of distribution of fraudulent notes

By ROGER FEHR
Staff Writer

County Attorney Alton Griffin has been asked by the county election board to investigate the distribution of six fraudulent notes to election judges Tuesday night, requesting them to hold the polls open an extra hour.

Statements by election board members Sheriff Choc Blanchard, County Judge Rod Shaw and County Clerk Frank Guess and statements by John Coffey, former regional director for McGovern-Shriver, indicate that a Lubbock attorney involved with the Democratic campaign initiated distribution of the fraudulent notes.

Blanchard indicated that attorney Mark Smith may have been the author of one of the fraudulent notes, although the other officials refused to say whether Smith was the suspected distributor.

Coffey said Tuesday he had authorized distribution of notes to election judges stating, "Anyone who presents themselves at the polls by 7 p.m., by the U.S. Constitution and Texas Law is allowed to vote."

He said he had told an attorney at the McGovern-Shriver headquarters to distribute this statement to certain judges.

Wednesday Coffey told the UD he had not authorized a specific statement, but had asked Smith to "take care of" dispatching messages reminding the judges of the law.

In both statements to the UD, Coffey said the notes finally received by the judges bore no resemblance to the message he authorized to be distributed.

Calling Coffey a liar, Smith denied having dispatched any notes whatsoever, saying he had been in court till 6 p.m. Tuesday and had had about 100 guests at his house later that night.

Coffey would not specifically name the attorney who allegedly distributed the notes but called the attorney's alleged act "a last minute ditch-type effort to exercise power which he did not have. It was a personal egotistical trip."

He added Smith had been "nothing but a source of trouble" to the McGovern-Shriver campaign since he joined it.

Shaw, Guess and Blanchard said they first heard of the fraudulent notes when several election judges phoned in for further instructions.

Precincts one, three, four, five, six and 20 received messages similar to the following one received by precinct five: "Urgent. Please hold the polls open one more hour because of the extraordinary turnout. Requested of Secretary of State Bob Bullock."

The notes had no signature. The secretary of state does not have the power to direct the polls to stay open past the official 7 p.m. closing time, Shaw and Guess said.

'Mass., we love you'

BOSTON (AP) — "Dear Massachusetts," said the telegram. "We love you very, very much."

It was signed by Dallas County McGovern workers.

The telegram, delivered Wednesday to the Boston bureau of The Associated Press, was addressed to "The People of Massachusetts."

Massachusetts was the only state to support Sen. George S. McGovern in Tuesday's election.

Only precinct four delayed closing. It closed at 7:30 p.m., according to Shaw.

Only notes from precincts one, three, four and five were recovered by the county officials. These were written on the backs of stationery bearing the letterhead of McGovern-Shriver campaign headquarters.

Shaw said he talked to Coffey shortly after the notes were reported and Coffey told him the original fraudulent note was written in red ink.

Coffey did not explain how he could know this, since he claims he was not the author of any of the fraudulent messages and did not authorize such messages to be distributed.

A note written in red ink was received by precinct five.

Carol of Lights leaves Science Quadrangle

By LINDA GARRETT
Special Reporter

The Carol of Lights program will not be at its traditional location, the Science Quadrangle, this year because of a change in the Code of Student Affairs and an administrative ruling.

The Residence Hall Association (RHA), sponsor of the traditional Christmas program, voted to try to influence the administration to allow use of the quadrangle. If this fails, members of RHA agreed to drop the Carol of Lights program.

Dr. Owen L. Caskey, associate vice president for academic affairs, said in a letter to an RHA member that the Science Quadrangle could not be used because of the Policy and Procedures for Use of Space and Facilities in the student code. Caskey suggested the use of the green east of the University Center as one of four locations complying with the policy. However, the Christmas lights cannot be seen from any of the four locations.

Dr. Glenn E. Barnett, executive vice president, said the problem actually stems from the court case over the April 22 demonstration at Memorial Circle. Barnett said the university's attorney in Persons other than the suspected attorney were involved in distributing the notes, Shaw said. However, they were not necessarily aware of the fraudulent nature of the notes, he said.

Election judges from precincts one and three said they received messages from a man. Precinct five's judge said a woman delivered the note.

The other precinct judges could not remember whether their notes were delivered by a man or woman.

Griffin said he could not comment until completion of the investigation whether any court action will occur or if precinct four's votes will be invalidated as a result of its delayed closing.

At that time precinct four's votes are officially part of Lubbock County's total election vote.

In the case, Tom Milam, advised the administration not to make any distinction as to which group can use the area around Memorial Circle.

Barnett said if the administration allowed one group to use the area, it would have to allow all groups to use the area.

RHA members plan to circulate petitions calling for use of the quadrangle.

They also plan to contact local merchants who donate money to finance the Carol of Lights.

The administration's ruling also prohibits use of a loud speaker system, the torch light parade and dimming the lights on campus preceding the lighting of the buildings.

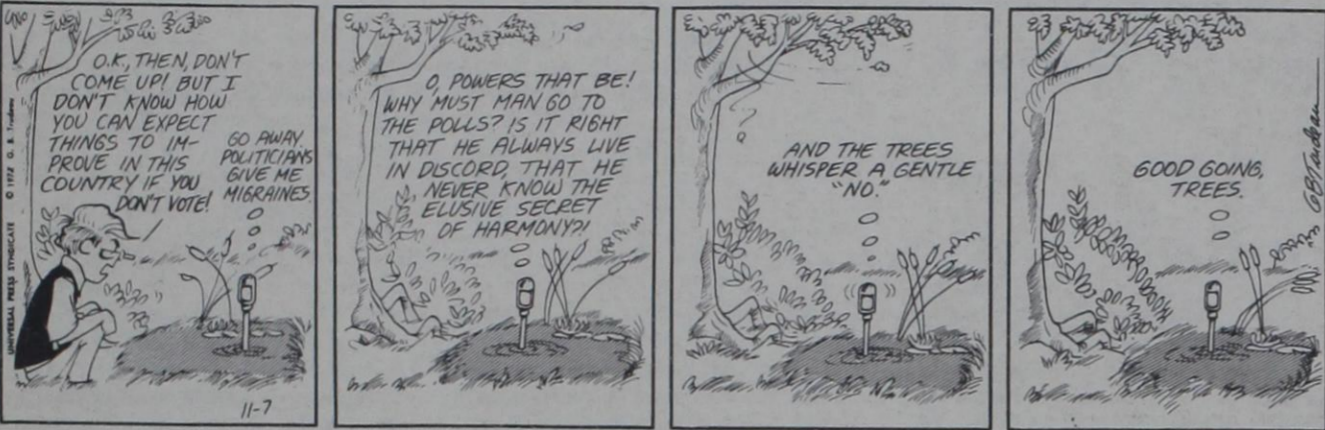

Campus maintenance crews have already begun putting the lights on the buildings. The lights will be turned on, with or without the ceremony, according to the Carol of Lights Committee.

Mike Monaghan, president of RHA, said, "if we don't get space at the Science Quadrangle this year, there will not be another Carol of Lights."

He said the administration's ruling will kill the Carol of Lights.

College tuition, fees rise across southern states

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Tuition and fees for resident and nonresident undergraduate students in Southern state colleges and universities continue to rise this year, with the biggest hike occurring in fees for resident students, the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) reported Thursday.

Resident students at public institutions paid an increase averaging 8 per cent for the 1972-73 academic year, SREB said. Nonresident fees at such institutions were up 3 per cent, a small increase when compared with the 13 per cent hike in such fees during the 1971-72 year, the report said.

The average increase in fees for nonresidents was modest despite the fact that heavy increases became effective in three states—35 per cent in North Carolina, 22 per cent in Georgia and 15 per cent in Tennessee, the report said.

SREB reported increases of 10 per cent in Maryland and Virginia.

The biggest increases in the bill for in-state students were made by the major state universities, as 11 of the 14 in the area covered by the SREB region showed increases in tuition fees. They were Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Increases in statewide averages for all four-year institutions ranged from 4 per cent in West Virginia to 14 per cent in Kentucky, the report said.

SREB said that sharp hikes in out-of-state tuition in recent years has resulted in court suits brought by nonresident students who challenged the nonresident fee practice. However, no clear legal trend has been set, the studies shows.

Several lawsuits are pending, including challenges in Georgia, Maryland and Texas, SREB said.

SREB said the statistics were obtained through surveys conducted by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC) and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

Studying law involves time, discipline and hard work

By JOSEPH J. COOK
Staff Writer
Discipline, hard work, and lots of time are needed to succeed in law school.

Robertson graduated from the University of Texas at El Paso in 1972 with a degree in Political Science. Of 1300 Tech Law School applicants, Roberson was one of 167 accepted.

(LSAT), according to Ann Burbridge, registrar in the school of law. However, the average GPA and LSAT score of those applicants accepted was 3.0 and 575.

about the case they are studying. The grade he will get is based on a final four-hour exam. The grading system is on a number basis from 50 to 100. The students have to compete with each other and themselves. There is no absolute right or wrong answer on the exams. The majority in a class determine the average grade, usually about a 72, according to Roberson. The rest of the students are graded on how they compare with the average. A student is required to have a 70 average to stay in the Tech Law School.

The spring 1970 graduating class had five students who finished in the top five positions on the State of Texas Bar Exam, according to Ms. Burbridge. Two students tied for first and three others tied for second. Roberson said, "I recommend anyone who is a freshman now planning on going to law school to strive for a four-point GPA." The standards for entry into law school are getting higher every year, according to Roberson. Roberson said that to succeed in law school you must enjoy and respect the law and be willing to put in long hours of hard work. Roberson wants to work on contracts and criminal law when he graduates.

After spending three hours in class, Monty Roberson goes home and studies eight to ten hours every day. He spends about 14 hours studying on the weekends.

The minimum requirements for entry into the Tech Law School are a 2.75 grade point average (GPA) and 550 on the Law School Admissions Test

Roberson spends his study time preparing for each class. He said that the students must be prepared to brief the class and support their conclusions

Ex-quarterback switches

Greg Waters big-play artist for Raider defensive unit

By EDDIE CLINTON
Sports Writer

All things, as they say, don't turn out as they are once planned. Take for instance a quarterback could turn up at a free safety spot or a fella could miss out on being a dealer at the world's most reknown night spot.

That Greg Waters is currently the hottest ex-quarterback turned safety is well known by the followers of the local grid scene, but what about the missed wheeler-dealer job?

"A friend and I went to Lake Tahoe last summer," recalled Waters. "We got there a couple days too late for the dealers' school so we put in our applications for any kind of job. As it turned out we got a better job than dealing. We ended up as cashiers which not only gave us better working hours, it didn't hamper our sight-seeing tours either," he laughed.

Whether he turned out to be a wheeler-dealer or not in the far west is not of great importance to the Tech football coaches and fans. The big thing is that Waters has turned out to be an ace for the supposedly questionable defensive secondary.

Thus far in the season, Waters has tied for the conference lead in interceptions with four. Bigger yet is the fact that the San Antonio native has turned in three big plays that have either saved or sealed a Raider victory.

In the Texas A&M game the Aggies were driving for the game winning points when Waters played Greg-on-the-spot with an interception. Secondly, Waters put the icing on the cake in the SMU tussle with a last minute interception. Finally, Waters proved again to be the man of the hour with his interception of a Bruce Gadd pass in the final sixteen seconds to preserve a Raider victory, 10-6, over the Rice Owls.

"I really don't think of the interceptions as anything great," said Waters. "I look upon it as just doing my job. It gives me just as big a thrill to see someone else make a big play."

Not to be mistaken for false modesty Waters explained his theory on unselfishness, both from a personal and team stand point.

"Coaches Bell (Richard) and Evans (Dale) are teaching a pride within the defensive unit," commented Waters. "I really think that in ten years I will be able to look back at the program at Tech and find that the defense will be a strong point."

"Now I'm not saying that we have the reputation of an LSU. Not yet anyway. But we will have if the coaches continue at Tech."

Statistics bear Waters out. The first year of the Jim Carlen regime the defense was the focal point along with the offense. Last season the defense stood alone, as the offense took a break that turned out to last the entire '71 campaign. And again this season the defense has come through with some performances as SMU, A&M and Rice, not to mention the Texas contest.

"I had the feeling before the season started that this team would be something special," commented Waters. "I don't think it would be foolish to think of us going 10-1 for the season as long as we continue to play them one at a time."

Saturday the Raiders will be going against the TCU Hornfrogs, a team that always plays inspired, if not brilliant football against the Raiders.

In the defensive backfield will be Greg Waters and his ballhawking defensive mates, ready to pick off errant passes.

Raider basketballers to scrimmage

For the benefit of returning Texas Tech exes the Red Raider roundballers will stage a special scrimmage Friday.

Coach Gerald Myers will send his 1972-73 squad into the game type scrimmage at 4 p.m. on the Lubbock High School gymnasium court.

The scrimmage is planned to give ex-Techsans returning for Homecoming '72 a look at this year's Red Raider basketball team.

Pics go for undefeated season

By JEFF KLOTZMAN
Sports Writer

Tech's undefeated Picadors go after their fifth consecutive victory tonight when they host the Texas A&M Fish in a 7:30 p.m. Jones Stadium encounter. The Techsans playing their last game of the season, have high hopes of equaling the best season record ever posted by a freshman team at Tech. The record is currently held by the 1970 Picadors who went 5-0 under the guidance of Joe Barnes and Jimmy Carmichael. Texas A&M, coached by Paul Register, is undefeated in three games with wins over TCU, Rice and Baylor. The Fish are led by quarterback Dale Ammons, a product of Pampa. The running attack spearheaded by Bucky Sams from Amarillo Tascosa, Tech coach Jess Stiles described Sams as a very good runner and was especially dangerous on the screen pass. Sams is also noted for being exceptionally quick on draw plays. Ammons is an average passer but handles the wishbone option to perfection. When Ammons does pass, he usually looks for tight-end David Greeno who is an excellent receiver according to Stiles. Tech will lean heavily upon the trio of Tommy Duniven, Angel Berlingeri and Rufus Myers to provide the offensive attack. Myers, who is leading an assault on the Picador record book this season, is the leading rusher this season and will try to become the all-time freshmen touchdown leader tonight. The tailback from Corpus Christi Carroll is also zeroing in on the all-time rushing lead currently held by James Mosely. Myers only needs 32 yards against A&M to break the record. Duniven could break the total offense record if he has a good night against the Fish. Berlingeri a full-back, has rushed for 340 yards so far this season and will try to break the 400 yard mark.

A&M's freshmen team has had its ranks depleted lately by promotions to the varsity. At last count there were 12 Fish moved up to the varsity, and it is possible some more may move up. Tech has three players on the varsity; Ecomet Burley, Curtis Jordan and Mark White. White, a tryout, was moved up last week as a deep punt snapper. Burley and Jordan have been on the varsity all year.

Starting offensively for the Pics tonight will be Willie Kent as flanker, Bill Fleeman at split end and Duniven, Myers and Berlingeri in the backfield. The offensive line will have John

Proceeds from tonight's battle go to the Texas Sports Hall of Fame to be built in Grand Prairie, Texas; a suburb of Dallas. The Hall of Fame will permanently enshrine Texas Sports Figures that are inducted by voting from the Football Writers Association.

World's 'longest' basketball game seeking participants

Students interested in playing in the "world's longest basketball game" can register in the University Center between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. across from the snack bar. The attempt to set a new record for a marathon basketball game under the direction of Don Steen is being sponsored by the First Baptist Church on Broadway. No registration fee is being charged.

The current world's record is held by Hutton Grammar School of Prenton, England. Only 24 boys played a total of 100 consecutive hours in July in 1970. Steen is planning to play 120 hours and involve, hopefully, from 800 to 1,000 people. The game is not limited to just Tech students although the biggest drive for players is being aimed at the Raider campus.

The actual game will begin Sunday, Nov. 26, at 9 p.m. and halt Friday, Dec. 1, at 9 p.m. The game will be played at the First Baptist's Activities Building located directly behind the church.

Plaques will be presented to the player with the most playing time, the high point man and woman and the organization with the most playing time.

A $50 gift certificate from a local clothing store will be presented to the person that plays most between midnight and 7 a.m.
