No lives were lost, residents having seen the approaching clouds in time to seek shelter in cellars. Members of one family clung to trees during the worst of the storm.

Radio

The government is secretly experimenting with a radio station which will come very near blanketing the United States.
It is being built at Cincinnati by the Crosley Manufacturing company (WLV). The government's hand in it is supposed to be entirely unofficial and very much on the Q. T.
An experimental license was issued authorizing tests with (hold your breath) 500,000 watts. Only one other station that strong has been built in the world. That is in Russia. Something like it also being tried in Mexico.
The official whisper says the experiment is for scientific purposes only. That is probably true.
The plain result will be to make one station independent of all chains if the tests work out. Experts say the spot was ideally chosen. Cincinnati is a radio sounding board. WLV is the only eastern station which regularly reaches the Pacific Coast, even with low power.
The gossip going around is that the government is interested in a giant inland station for war purposes or some other purposes of state. Those rumors take too much for granted. We are not near a war or any purpose of state which would require a 500,000 watt radio station.

Patronage

The inside story of what happened to Nellie Taylor Ross is the best possible expose of how this federal patronage thing works.
The former Wyoming governess did yeoman service in the campaign. She had to be cared for among the first. General Farley spotted a job for her as Treasurer of the United States. It has a big title and pays good money. He thought there was not much work attached to it.
Everything was settled until Treasury Secretary Woolin heard about it. He balked—contending it was a job for a man.

Willander Circus Showing In City

The John Willander's circus, traveling in 36 motor trucks, arrived in Big Spring early Thursday, and will show at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m., two performances only. Mr. Head, publicity director, reported some damage to their tents by the high winds at Colorado Wednesday afternoon, but repairs had been made and the show will be in complete readiness for their performance here today.
Children under 16 years of age have been given a special price on tickets at Montgomery Ward and company store all this week. The regular price of 25c was reduced to 10c. All tickets sold at showgrounds, however, will be at 25c.

Reason for asking that this be done is to avoid re-orientation by registration committee workers of those who have bought registrations and also to popularize purchase of the registrations.
Two colors of registration badges were obtained for the convention, one color for local people, another for out-of-town people.

Under The Dome

At Austin
 By Gordon K. Shearer

AUSTIN (UP)—Coke Stevenson, speaker of the Texas house of representatives, seldom addressed the legislature when he was a member of previous sessions. He is patient with the legislators who want to talk themselves before the microphone, but occasionally his disapproval breaks out.

"Let's get on with the vote. There is no use of making speeches. There is no crowd in the gallery," he admonished a particularly long-talker.

Speaker Stevenson also inaugurated the chair announcement. "The gentleman has expired," which surprised the old announcement that "the gentleman's time has expired." Young members are the most prone to debate.

High school oratorical contests may be responsible for a lot of the young members speaking. Frequently the address is reminiscent of such contests.

Congress is the goal of many members when they begin serving in the legislature. They might profit from the experience of Milton West, congressman. He seldom spoke in the Texas legislature.

To Austin friends who told him to be sure and send them a copy of the Congressional Record with his maiden speech, West remarked: "John Garner was in congress 10 years before he made a speech. I represent the Garner district."

His last act in the Texas legislature was to introduce his successor, Augustin Celaya of Brownsville.

Former Governor James A. Ferguson will make no stump speeches during the impending state prohibition campaign.

"I'm getting too old for stumping," he said the other day.

The campaign this time will miss many of the old leaders who spoke on either side. Cone Johnson, of Tyler, once the anti-leader and later a leading pro, died recently. Tom Ball, prohibition orator of earlier campaigns, was recently injured in an automobile accident and is not likely to be on the stump.

But the younger generation will be heard. Senator W. K. Hopkins, Representative Weaver Moore and others of the young Democrats who put the state Democratic convention on record for submission, are speakers who can shine with the campaigners of earlier days.

Former Governor Dan Moody, now devoting himself to law exclusively, may be brought on the stump by the prohibition forces. Former Senator Tom Love will likely be on the hustings too.

Representative Robert W. Calvert, 27, member of the legislature, will probably stand out as giving the four star performance of the first legislature.

His speech in reply to Representative T. H. McGregor on the proposed new state highway commission has been the outstanding one of the session.

Calvert, whose home is in Hillsboro, worked his way through the University of Texas. Part of the time he operated an elevator in the state capitol. When there was no elevator run, he pored over his lawbooks, which he kept in the elevator with him.

He is a law partner of Senator Will Martin of Hillsboro. Report has it he will be drafted for district attorney when his legislature term ends.

It is not fair to describe the policy of the Administration as a dishonorable act of repudiation. To be sure, if the government allowed prices to rise above the level at which wage levels and domestic debt became established in the post-war era, it would be doing injustice, and if the process were allowed to continue to the bitter end the result would amount to repudiation. But a policy deliberately designed to restore and maintain a price level such as existed in the middle Twenties can not be described as repudiation, and it is, to say the least, imprudent to raise as scare about it.

The task of monetary management is not a simple one. It may not be successful. But it is going to be tried, and with national support the chances are good enough that it will be successful. The sound money men ought to be devoting their talents to making the policy successful.

Girl Scouts Trying To Furnish Hut Call For Help

The heads of the Girl Scout committee are rushing to finish the burlap draperies for the new Girl Scout Hut at the City Park. They want to hold the official opening as soon as possible.

Everyone who has seen the interior of the big brick and stone structure in the park has been enthusiastic over its remodeling. The trouble now before the Girl Scouts is furnishing it.

Inasmuch as the movement is a community movement, they have decided to ask their friends to help by donating odd pieces of furniture. They can make use of chairs, tables, rugs, mirrors, in fact anything that fits into a living room. They believe that there are many people in town with odd pieces of furniture they would be glad to donate to such a worthy cause.

Those having something for the Girl Scouts are asked to call Mrs. Charles Koberg who will see that the piece is taken to the Hut.

The date of the official opening will be announced later.

Painless Execution

The death recently of Dr. Alphonso Rockwell passed almost unnoticed. But this man, a distinguished physician and scientist, put his mark on his generation in a way as striking and as bizarre as that of old Dr. Guillotin of France. For it was Dr. Rockwell who invented the electric chair.

Oddly enough, Dr. Rockwell himself was not in favor of capital punishment. But the electric chair was devised as a reform. A more humane method of taking life than the gallows was sought, and Dr. Rockwell—in collaboration with other physicians and Thomas A. Edison—was given the thankless job of finding one.

The electric chair was the result. It claimed its first victim in 1890. Since then it has just about become the standard instrument of execution in the United States.

And Dr. Rockwell, who disapproved of the law which his invention served, must have been glad that the public was not generally aware of what he had done.

Sound Money and the National Honor

The friends of sound money are not, I think, very wise in dissociating themselves from the Administration at this time. They are making a mistake in raising the cry that a policy of repudiation and dishonor has been adopted, in putting the worst possible construction on the whole business in terrifying themselves and in seeking to terrify the country. The country has been in a very critical condition for three months. At the end of February, with its monetary policies determined by the most conservative sound money men, the budget was in disorder, the banking system had closed up and specie payment had to be suspended. Since that time the Administration has set to work to reconstruct the budget with a courage and a severity which has never been equalled in our history. I maintain that an Administration which has done that, can not be treated as a set of wild men for no better reason than that the money bill grants powers which would or cowardly men could, violently abuse.

The unwisdom of this conservative outcry lies in the fact that if repudiated and acted upon by frightened investors it would isolate the Administration between the unlimited inflationists on the left and the so-called sound money men on the right. Every possible reason now exists for believing that the Administration sincerely intends to keep the proposed inflation under firm control. Why else should it proceed with the heart-breaking and politically dangerous business of bringing the budget under control by cutting pensions, salaries, and subsidies? Economies that the Republican Administration never dared to propose, these men have made. They have, therefore, proved by the acid test that they mean what they say when they pledge themselves to a rigorously controlled inflation. I should suppose that a sensible thing to do would be to help them in their difficult task of avoiding extremes, and that the very last thing he would wish to do would be to make a moderate and intelligent policy more difficult to administer.

Nothing could be more unwise than to base the opposition to the new monetary policy on the ground of absolute moral principle. Yet this is now being attempted, and one form of the argument is that the United States has gone off the gold standard capriciously and without necessity. We are asked to compare ourselves with Great Britain which went off gold after its gold stocks were exhausted, and to feel ashamed.

I do not think we need to feel ashamed. We might, I suppose, have kept some of the banks open at the end of February and paid out the gold to every one who wished to hear it or to take it abroad. At the rate of acceleration at which gold was going out on the days just before inauguration, it would not have taken very long to exhaust even our large stock of gold. I do not think any one seriously contends that we could or should have continued to make specie payments at that time. Yet that is when we were driven off the gold standard.

And what about the charge that we are repudiating our debt? Whose debt is being repudiated? The policy adopted contemplates raising the price level—the average of prices—by say, 30 per cent. This means that on the average the present value of the debt will be 30 per cent less. That does not mean that the cost of living should rise 30 per cent, for the cost of living has not fallen as violently as wholesale prices. It should not, therefore, rise as much. It is a reasonable estimate that if the policy succeeds the purchasing power of the dollar would become again what it was between 1925 and 1928.

Now if this be so, I shall be

State Ratification Of Amendment Legalizing Beer Will Not Legalize Manufacture, Sale In This County

Local Option Election August 26 Being Rumored; Howard County Went Dry December 11, 1906 By Majority Of 80 Votes

Ratification of a constitutional amendment permitting sale of 2.2 per cent beer and perhaps intoxicating liquors will have no bearing on Howard county.

Howard county went legally dry by an 81-vote majority December 11, 1906. In event legalized beer should come back, Big Spring and the county must vote wet before it can be sold here under the local option law.

Although there has been no authoritative action, it is likely a local option vote will be held concurrently with state ratification of the beer amendment August 23. Voting on the issue will be allowed after July 1, but it is doubtful if county commissioners court can see much wisdom in going to expense of two elections within space of less than two months.

Regardless of result, there is likely to be presented a petition after January 31, 1934, for another election. Everyone will have bought a poll tax then and will be ready for decisive snap.

Dry and wets are already subtly engaged in drawing lines for a campaign, the one charging "moral compromise," the other "hypocrisy," the one shouting "decency," the other "democracy."

When the county went dry in 1906, a heated campaign raged before majorities by precincts 3 and 4 and the rural communities tolerated more than enough to win.

Dryers drew out wet speeches with lusty band music and hoarse cries only to have the worm turn when a prohibition speaker sought to address his crowd.

During the day of election church bells tolled at hour intervals from opening of the polls at 8 a. m. until closing at 7 p. m.

The following day Ector county turned dry by the narrow margin of 29 votes. However, a 29-vote majority in Ector county in those days was nothing to be regarded lightly.

Triumph of the cause of prohibition in the two West Texas counties made Strawn the only place between El Paso and Fort Worth where intoxicating liquor might be bought legally. San Angelo was the nearest to the south and Amarillo on the north where thirst could be satisfied in good grace.

Ring of church bells in the victorious cause of prohibition inspired Sybil Hartzog to write a poem praising temperance and heaping coals of fire upon the head of John Earleycorn.

Whether the majority of Howard county voters now prefer the metallic peals of prohibition bells to the glassy ring of roughly handled seldels and stels can best be answered August 26.

DARLING FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MONICA O'DARE, pretty, 30, and poor, is in love with DAN CARDIGAN, heir to one of Be...

fell to the floor with a clatter and she called, "Who's that you're talking to, Monica? Did Bill get in yet?"

The girl was grateful for the interruption. An awkward silence like a barrier had grown up between her and the tall young man in the gray suit.

"It's Dan Cardigan, Mother," she said casually. "He knocked but we didn't hear, so he came round."

"Come out of the kitchen, children. I was just thinking of lighting a fire here. It will be cozy."

The lock Dan bestowed upon her was baffling in its hidden quality. He said easily, "Not unless your mother sends me. Or wouldn't you like to go for a ride?"

Monica shrank back. The greeting was casual as though he had been gone a day, or a week in stead of almost a year.

"It's lying to me," said Monica's traitorous heart. "Why don't I let him know that I know?"

"Don't be later dear," her mother warned. "I'm helping her into the low-slung car. The door slammed. The motor purred."

"Cold?" Dan was looking down at her as they flew along. She shook her head and laughed.

"Of course not. It's a beautiful night. Just like summer." She felt happy now as she always did when she was alone with Dan.

Well, she had done it and it was too late now to go back readily over the progress of her feelings for Dan. Love was like a prairie fire. Once lighted, it swept on madly, heedless of what it destroyed.

"Good girl. That didn't take long," Dan approved, smiling down at her.

"Don't be later dear," her mother warned. "I'm helping her into the low-slung car. The door slammed. The motor purred."

"Cold?" Dan was looking down at her as they flew along. She shook her head and laughed.

With resentment in her heart, Monica looked up into the pleasant face of Sandra Lawrence. Sandra was charmingly and fashionably dressed in an exquisite costume of pale-green silk.

Behind Sandra stood a tall, dark stranger, Dan interposed. "You know Mr. Eustace, Monica?"

Charles Eustace looked from one to another and bowed without speaking. (To Be Continued)

She gave him an impish smile. Dan glowered at her, his blue eyes fairly crackling at her under his long lashes.

"What have you been doing with yourself all winter? I suppose you've got a trail of young men from here to High Falls."

"Oh, that chap!" Dan used a disdainful tone but Monica knew he was annoyed and rejoiced in the knowledge.

"Yes, Dan was looking at her again in that way. There was no mistaking that. Her pulses began to pound."

He only said in rather commonplace fashion, "Missed you. Like the very devil."

She strove for the light touch. It would never do to let him know how much she had missed him. Never, never!

STORM

Continued from page 41. The cyclone was clearly lifted up and led away from a late model coupe. The garage was destroyed, but the wind didn't move the car out of its tracks.

Alexander. "I rushed into the bedroom and snatched up my stick boy and fled with him to the cellar. The others followed—my wife, two other children, my brother, and neighbors who were helping us nurse the child."

Watson House Goes Three hundred yards north of Alexander's and across the road, was the home—stoutly built and nearly new—of Tom Watson.

The storm cut such a narrow path through the place that his windmill and tank on the south side of the house were left standing and unscathed. Trees on either side also were untouched—but the dwelling was completely destroyed.

State Secretary Hull could not find out what was going on at these White House conferences with the Europeans. Mr. Roosevelt and Prof. Moley handled the whole business.

Mr. Stiles is employed as turkey raiser at the Abilene hospital and was at his work. A grown daughter also works there.

Damage was total at Stiles' place except for his truck. The cyclone only turned it over on its side.

Next, Hampton's After demolishing the Stiles place, the cloud lifted, cleanly jumped the road, and tore off northward. A quarter-mile along the way it dipped again, clipped off the west end of the Hampton home, shook up the Ben Dorck house a quarter-mile farther along northeastward—then disappeared, apparently blowing itself out, as no further damage was reported.

The first cyclone was reported at 2 p. m., at Spur, where the chief damage was to the school building. Forming in the northwest, a black funnel swooped down in the northern edge of the town, lifted and dipped again in the southeast portion.

At 4 p. m., a cyclone funnel was sighted three miles southwest of Sylvester, traveling eastward. It came within a quarter of a mile of the town, having a barren path several hundred feet wide. A half dozen homes were destroyed, but no one was seriously injured as the storm came slowly enough to allow residents time to take shelter.

Frankberry and Perkins homes there were torn to the ground, and the Ferguson home was partially wrecked, when the storm struck full force in the main part of town.

Canyon Teachers College Coach Asks That Athletic Relations With Tech College Be Severed

CANYON—Coach E. D. Burton of West Texas State Teachers college has asked that athletic relations between his school and Texas Technological college be severed "so long as the schools retain their present coaching staff."

The recommendation was made known in a letter to Coach Pete Cawthon of the Matadors, following the annual spring football game between the schools at Lubbock last Friday night which ended in a free-for-all fist fight between the two squads.

Concerning the track meet scheduled at Canyon Mr. Stangel said that, until further notice, the Matadors would prepare for the meet with the idea of sending the full track and field team to Canyon on May 20.

Big Spring Lands In Third Place Following 28-12 Win Over Lamesa

Irregular golf has landed Big Spring in third berth of the Sand Bell Golf Association race for the time being.

Sunday Big Spring came in strong to administer a sound drubbing to Lamesa Hinkmen, winning 28-12. The previous Sunday the locals had appeared sluggish in dropping the match with Sweetwater, 16-24. Finished by her wide lead afforded by a 32-8 victory over Snyder the week before, Midland continued on somewhat of a rampage to down Stanton 28-12 Sunday to stay abreast league scoring.

Sweetwater was surprised by the sudden bursting of Odessa, doormat of the league, and had difficulty in winning 24-16. Only the week before Odessa gave Lamesa a match 32-8. Colorado and Snyder engaged in an interesting conflict when the Scurry county entry whipped out Colorado 24-16. The scores were reversed on Colorado who won handsly the previous week from Stanton by a similar score.

Standings:

Midland	110
Sweetwater	95
Big Spring	94
Colorado	82
Lamesa	82
Snyder	70
Stanton	54
Odessa	44

Baptist Junior G. A.'s Given Pretty Heirloom Tea At Mrs. Aderholt's

Mrs. R. L. Gomillion Assists Hostess; Mother's Day Theme Carried Out; Many Antiques Shown

Mrs. J. W. Aderholt, present sponsor of the First Baptist Junior Girl's Auxiliary, assisted by Mrs. R. L. Gomillion, past sponsor of the organization, entertained with an heirloom silver tea for friends of the girls at her home Wednesday afternoon. In spite of the unfavorable weather a very nice crowd attended.

The green and white colors of the Junior G. A.'s were used in the beautiful tea table decorations and the refreshments. A Mother's Day theme was carried out in the program given by the girls during the afternoon.

Lillian Reed Hurt, dressed in her mother's wedding dinner gown, greeted the guests at the door. Josephine and Corinne Mittel presided at a register containing an art design of their own drawing. Acting as ushers were Helen Hurt, Dorothy Pilkinton, Betty Joe Leatherwood, Jenetta Dodge, Geraldine Wood.

Antiques and heirlooms were scattered throughout the rooms. Mrs. C. C. Russell, oldest mother of the church, organizer of the local W.M.U. and of the first work among the Mexicana, set before an antique spinning wheel which crossed the Atlantic Ocean from Germany in 1845. It was owned by Mrs. John Peters, great great grandmother of Dr. W. C. Barnett, who lent it to the G.A.'s for the afternoon.

A hand woven bedspread 60 years old was displayed. This belonged to the mother of Mrs. J. P. Dodge. Other articles were a watch 65 years old belonging to Mrs. Ira Fuller's father; a dress 45 years old belonging to Mrs. John R. Williams' mother; a tea set 45 years old owned by Mrs. Gomillion; pictures, maps, a piece of embroidery from London, England; newspapers containing news of the World War.

At the lovely-appointed tea table, spread with an imported Battenburg cloth, tea was poured from an antique pot by the following at different times: Mmes R. E. Day, B. Reagan, Libbie Layne, J. C. Douglas and K. S. Beckett.

Mary June Schultz and Virginia Ragdale passed nutbread sandwiches. Betty Dooley and Dorothy Lay passed green and white mints. Mothers and friends of the girls who assisted in other ways were: Mmes. J. C. Hurt, Douglass, Layne, Reagan, Cornelson, Boykin, Fuller and the following: Mmes. J. B. Young, M. H. Bennett, E. O. Ellington, H. W. Leeper, J. Y. Robb, R. C. Srtan, C. S. Blomaheld, A. E. Pistole, Wilburn Barcus and E. V. Spence.

Mrs. Ellington will be the next hostess.
