

Forrestal Calls For More Unity Among The Armed Forces

Secretary of Defense Forrestal recently ordered that there be no more running to Congress with interservice differences; that an integrated legislative program and budget be threshed out in his office and disagreements resolved by him.

Under the act which supposedly merged the three principal branches of the service under one head, the services were left access to the director of the budget and to the President, provided that they informed the secretary of defense first. This was made necessary because of fears of some of the branches that others might combine to dominate their strategic concepts and operations.

In practice, however, it has resulted in the branches running to Congress to plug for this or that measure or appropriation.

One on top of another, they have circumvented the intention of the act, so much so that Secretary Forrestal has had to take as strong action as he can under the law.

When Congress comes back Mr. Forrestal's order will be put to test. The services undoubtedly will be wise to make every attempt to work out their differences in the manner suggested by the secretary. If they persist in the one-by-one practice of going to Congress, they might create such a pattern of confusion that Congress would be impelled to amend the law to the extent that their direct avenue to the President would be chopped off and the secretary of defense be put in a much more forceful position than is now the case.

Long Ballots And Increasing Voters Point To Smaller Boxes

Long ballots and mounting population are contributing to the question of further division of our voting precincts.

ment of secrecy left when citizens have to sit together to mark ballots or to scratch them against the wall. This also carries over into the counting department, for when bulky ballots come along—and they do more often than not—clerks hardly can find room to spread their papers for effective work.

He whaled thousands of votes away from Sigler by telling Michiganders how Sigler knifed the plan to rebate part of the sales tax to Michigan schools and cities . . . shrewdest move Truman made in the entire campaign was reconvening the 80th Congress right after the Philadelphia convention in July. When the Republicans adjourned without acting on inflation, price control, housing or teachers' pay, etc., it clinched more votes than any other campaign issues . . . it was Col. Wholesomeness, High Purpose Noted In Rural Vermonters

MY NATIVE WEST BURKE (TO CONTINUE the journey we started Friday; frequently is referred to as the most photographed village in Northern Vermont and this probably is due to the fact that its physical features have been altered little by passing time.

was principal of the "high school" after I got out of university. I won't name this place because it had a tough element and wasn't typical of Vermont. Anyway, I had to fight a hulking farmer-student with my bare fists before I could hold my job. The boys surrounded me during the first recess and the farmer challenged me to combat. So I had to beat him up, but he gave me an awful mauling.

IN WEST BURKE WHERE MY FATHER died, I made a surprising discovery. His church had been renamed the "MacKenzie Memorial Methodist Church."

AND SO RAN MY JOURNEY, WITH a lot more of the same kind of thing, for my family lived in many parts of the state. It was a successful and pleasant revival of the old days, but what impressed me most—and I have encountered the same thing in many other states—was the wholesomeness and high purpose of the people.

Today And Tomorrow — Walter Lippmann

Strength Of Roosevelt's Democracy Is Manifest

As one who did not foresee the result of the election I can say, as of the morning after, that I went wrong because I did not expect the Democrats to bring out their full vote. There was never any doubt that in this political generation that there are more Democrats than Republicans, that the Democrats are the majority party, and that the Republicans could win only if the Democrats refused to support the regular Democratic ticket.

cratic majorities in both Houses of Congress, the Democratic victories in so many states, attest the enormous vitality of the Democratic party as Roosevelt led it and developed it from 1932 to 1944. Mr. Truman is very nearly the only man who can say that he really believed that the party still has such strength and could exert it, without Roosevelt's personal leadership, without the active participation of Roosevelt's lieutenants, despite the Wallace and Thurmond schisms. But that is what happened: the party that Roosevelt formed has survived his death, and is without question the dominant force in American politics.

It is now clear, though few believed it likely, that the Democrats did not stay away from the polls, that the party organization in all the states brought out the full Democratic vote. The Democratic protest vote against Truman was confined to those who actually voted for Wallace and Thurmond. There was not, as I for one expected, a protest which took the form of a refusal of Democratic voters to vote at all.

This is scarcely the moment when any one who prophesied so badly will feel he can say with any confidence, or with any claim to be listened to, what it will mean to have a President and a Congress elected to carry out what is in fact another Roosevelt mandate. But I think that one large and significant conclusion is justified: that the overwhelming majority of the people in both parties, though they would reject appeasement which meant the surrender of vital interests or the betrayal of moral principles, do not subscribe to the theory of inevitable war, or to the doctrine of preventative war, or to the idea that the great crisis is insoluble by diplomacy and by pacific means.

The real strength of the Roosevelt Democracy has manifested itself unmistakably. Mr. Truman's campaign was an outright adoption of the Roosevelt tradition and the Roosevelt political strategy. The Democratic Governors, Senators, and Representatives who upset all the predictions were conspicuously Roosevelt Democrats both on domestic and on foreign questions, notably Bowles in Connecticut, Stevenson and Douglas in Illinois, Humphries in Minnesota, Kasauber in Tennessee. The Republicans who were so unexpectedly defeated in the pivotal states were, almost without exception, identified as the opponents of what Roosevelt stood for, as reactionaries and as isolationists.

In retrospect I think it must now be said that though the Vinson affair was incredibly inept, nevertheless it proved to be a net gain for Truman. I think he gained strength, and reunited many disoriented Democrats, by showing that he shared their dissatisfaction with the way things were being handled in the State Department and the Pentagon.

Mr. Truman's own victory, the Demo-

Sweep Of Demos Puts Texans In Strong U. S. Capital Posts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (U.S.)—The Democratic sweep in the Nov. 2 election puts Texans in strong positions in the nation's capital. Three in top spots are Attorney General Tom Clark, House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn and Sen. Tom Connally. All stuck by President Truman during the campaign.

The tall and friendly Clark was the only one of the old timers in the President's cabinet who got out and actively stumped for his boss. Two newcomers, Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan and Labor Secretary Maurice Tobin, also made campaign speeches for Truman.

The talk around here of cabinet changes, therefore, doesn't include mention of the former Dallas lawyer.

However, there has been some speculation that Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy might retire because of his health and Clark be appointed to fill the vacancy.

Bonham's Congressman Rayburn is almost certain of re-election as speaker of the House when the 80th Congress convenes Jan. 3.

It is recalled that only the persistent pleading of his Texas colleagues, led by Rep. Wright Patman of Texas, caused Rayburn to take the minority leadership of the House two years ago when Republicans won control of Congress. Otherwise Rep. John McCormack of Massachusetts would have been chosen and now would be the logical choice for the speakership.

Connally is due to resume chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He and the present chairman, Sen. Vandenberg (R-Mich.), have co-operated closely on the bi-partisan foreign policy and can be expected to continue working in harmony.

The shift in control of Congress will mean a lot of moving, even for the members who are staying on. For example:

Rayburn will pack up his files and move back to the ornate speaker's room just off the House chamber. He also takes over the spacious and more elaborate rooms in another section of the capitol which he surrendered two years ago to Speaker Joe Martin (R-Mass.). It again will be simply a case of the two men swapping office suites.

And when Rayburn returns to the speakership his salary will go back to $20,000 a year and he'll get a government limousine with driver. The salary of ordinary members of congress is $12,500 plus a non-taxable $2,500 expense account.

Silver-haired Connally once more will occupy the ornate senate foreign relations committee room in the capitol. He also will have his present suite of offices in the Senate Office Building.

There will be many changes in office suites of members of the House. As they gain seniority they

Pollsters May Be In For Depression

By JOHN L. SPRINGER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (U.S.)—President Truman's sensational victory in Tuesday's election may have an effect on every phase of the nation's life from soap to sex. It's all because of the way the President upset the pre-election forecasts of the major public opinion polls.

Attempting to predict election results has been only a small part of the work of the public opinion samplers. Hundreds of polling agencies have spent most of their time trying to feel the public pulse for businessmen, students of social trends and the government.

Their "samples" have guided manufacturers in designing automobiles, in naming soap powder, in preparing tubes of toothpaste. Many big advertisers in recent years have seldom planned an advertising campaign without first trying to get public reaction in advance.

The "sampling" technique has spread far in other fields. Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey's famed study on male sex behavior was based on "samples" of the adult population. Many big corporations have polled McKay also plans to confer with California agricultural officials on details of moving citrus fruit between Texas and California.

Fair Executives To Confer Tuesday

A meeting of the executive committee of the Howard County Fair association has been called for Tuesday at 4 p. m.

Officials are making an effort to have all bills submitted for action by the board at that time so accounts may be settled promptly. Moss Will Drill Stonewall Wildcat

Paul Moss, of Odessa, is to drill a 6,300-foot in wildcat in Central Stonewall county, to explore into the Ellenburger.

The venture will be his No. 1 Lee and Waymon Smith. It is located 2,310 feet from south and west lines of section 127, block D, H&TC survey, and three and one-half miles south of Aspermont.

The project is on acreage secured by Moss in a deal with Pan American Production Corporation. That concern held a large block of leases in that region and turned a checkerboard spread out of it to Moss for drilling the wildcat.

Many Handicapped Persons Get Jobs

AUSTIN, Nov. 8 (U.S.)—The Texas Employment Commission reported Saturday that it put 2,760 handicapped persons in jobs last month.

There had been 5,700 such persons looking for jobs through the commission on Oct. 1.

The commission said civic clubs, veterans organizations, ministers, county service officers and government agencies all co-operated behind one of the state's biggest concerted drives to provide employment for the physically handicapped during the October period nationally dedicated to the project.

Teacher Injured In Plane Crash

BROWNWOOD, Nov. 8 (U.S.)—William Hargrave, Fort Worth music teacher, was slightly injured here Saturday when the small plane he was piloting crashed on a takeoff at Brownwood airport.

Airport Manager Jack Broad said Hargrave had failed to remove allon locks from the ship before taking off for Fort Worth. The plane crashed from an altitude of 50 feet and was badly damaged.

Hargrave sustained a gash on the forehead. He went to Fort Worth later aboard an airliner. He came to Brownwood to teach a voice class at Howard Payne College.

U. N.'s World Bill Of Human Rights Is Taking Form

PARIS, Nov. 8 (U.S.)—The First World bill of human rights is slowly taking shape amid a war of words.

Delegates of the 58-United Nations are hammering out a declaration spelling fundamental freedoms in strong, simple language. The declaration tells the nations of the world to give the little man everywhere a decent life.

Depending on moral force alone, it can become a boon or a bust. The declaration may be "America's greatest weapon of psychological warfare — more important even than possession of the atomic bomb," says Dr. Charles Malik of Lebanon, ambassador to Washington and former Harvard professor.

Malik, one of the declaration's drafters, heads the General Assembly's 58-nation social committee. The committee in more than a month has approved less than half the declaration's 28 articles. But it still wages a word-by-word battle to send the document to the assembly for final approval this year.

Anti-Fireworks Law Is In Effect

A city ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks in Big Spring went into effect Friday, city officials reminded.

The ordinance, which was passed as an emergency measure at the city commission's last regular meeting, became effective immediately upon publication.

Presented as a companion ordinance to a statute already on the books prohibiting shooting of fireworks, the new measure makes it unlawful to offer any type of fireworks materials to be sold within the corporate limits.

Schools To Observe U. S. Education Week

Keynoting the "strengthening of the foundations of freedom," Big Spring schools this week join in the observance of American Education Week.

Visitation will be stressed in all the schools, day by day in the elementary schools and in a special evening at the high school on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the week will be plugged on other fronts with spot reminders being made over KSTB and a quarter-hour radio program scheduled to develop the theme. The local R&R theatres are running trailers which urge parents to inspect their schools as a means of encouraging them to participate in the objective of perpetuating a free America. It also is possible that student speakers will appear at the service club meetings to remind members of the week.

Invitations have gone out from teachers, using pupils as messengers, to parents urging them to visit classrooms during the week. Most of these suggest specific times to prevent over-crowding, but any parent who cannot come at those hours is urged to visit when he can. In some instances classes have worked up special exhibits of their work and a few plan some programs.

On the high school front, patrons are being invited to "go to school" for one evening. After Culin Grigsby, president of the student council, has welcomed them to the gymnasium at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday, W. L. Reed, principal will give brief instructions. Mrs. Harold Davis will give a reading and Mary Jane Hamilton will sing. Council members will serve as guides.

Then parents will adjourn to the high school where they will be assigned to the classes which their children make every day. There will be eight-minute class sessions in which regular teachers call the roll and summarize the objectives of the particular subject. During a four minute intermission, patrons will make their way to the next class—provided they haven't been sent to the office of Principal Reed, or to see Zaida Brown, guidance director, or W. C. Blankenship, superintendent.

After the schedule has been executed, guests for the evening will be entertained briefly in the cafeteria where refreshments will be served.

Showdown Seen On Pecos Water

AUSTIN, Nov. 8. (AP)—The Pecos River Compact Commission met today for what was expected to be a showdown on division of the waters of the Pecos between New Mexico and Texas.

An engineering advisory committee was scheduled to report on supplemental data compiled with reference to the Pecos River since it last reported in January.

In the past 24 years three compacts have been proposed. Two were turned down by New Mexico and the third was rejected by Texas.

Several years ago the Texas Legislature appropriated $30,000 for use by the attorney general in case Texas should ever file suit to secure a court judgment for the Pecos waters. Although Texas has threatened several times to take the matter to court, no suit has ever been filed against New Mexico.

Missing Woman's Body Discovered By Two Hunters

EL MONTE, Calif., Nov. 8. (AP)—Two men hunting for bobcats yesterday found the body of an Alhambra divorcee, missing since Sept. 19.

The body was identified as that of Mrs. Martha Shirley Lipsy, 24, who had last been seen in a cocktail bar at nearby Five Points. Her mother, Mrs. Gladys Jordan, Los Angeles, made the identification.

The hunters were combing the San Gabriel River wash when their dogs led them to the body. An autopsy was planned today.

Sheriff's investigators said Mrs. Lipsy's escort of the evening of Sept. 19 told them she left with another man in an automobile late that night.

Alcatraz 'Brain' Has Old Romance He'll Now Resume

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8. (AP)—The so-called "brain" of Alcatraz Prison has some business to dispose of, quickly, and then there's the matter of an old romance.

Cecil Wright earned the nickname for legal studies which freed him after 18 years. He hopes to leave for Charleston, Ill., in a day or two to visit Miss Beulah Brimberry, who was his high school sweetheart.

Wright is now 41 and Miss Brimberry, 40. He told reporters that when he telephoned her she said she wanted him to come home to "talk about getting married."

In Charleston Miss Brimberry declined to comment. She is a floor lady for a shoe manufacturing plant there.

Wright was released from Alcatraz Saturday, successful in his 13th attempt to gain freedom on a writ of habeas corpus. Originally he was convicted of a $2.43 post-office robbery at Strasburg, Ill.

He's here conferring with his lawyer about possible sale of his life story to the movies, radio and magazines.

Army Command Discusses Quick China Evacuation

TOKYO, Monday, Nov. 8. (AP)—Top officers of Gen. MacArthur's command discussed plans today for quick evacuation, if necessary, of about 1,000 American military dependents in China.

Col. Boniface Campbell, chief of staff of the American Military Advisory Group in China, flew here from Nanking to confer with MacArthur's personnel and operations chiefs.

"So far we have made no specific request for assistance from Gen. MacArthur in moving our people out of China," he said.

"But we have had exploratory talks today about action to be taken if any urgency arises. As things stand now, we will evacuate our military dependents on military transports making their regular calls. We have not asked for any special ships to move them."

Campbell said he did not believe any dependents would be brought to Japan at this stage. He said present plans call for their return to the United States aboard military transports making their regular calls.

Pan American Airways and Northwest Airlines here said they have received no requests from the U. S. government to assist in the evacuation program.

Recently Married Slayer Executed

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Nov. 8. (AP)—A convicted slayer died in the electric chair early today after spending a 10-hour honeymoon holding hands with his bride in a warden's office.

David P. Taranow, 23, was pronounced dead at 12:33, two minutes after the switch had been pulled.

Not present in the prison with him when he went to the death chamber were his wife—auburn-haired Stella Noto of Brooklyn, N. Y.—his parents and his nine-months-old child, daughter of the Brooklyn girl he married in Broadmeadows Prison, Media, Pa., last Friday.

GOP Backer Feels Like The Elephant Fell On His Back

PRINCETON, W. Va., Nov. 8. (AP)—That GOP elephant sort of fell on Isaac J. Sweeney, and Sweeney's aching back felt like it today.

He had wagered on Republican Thomas E. Dewey in the recent presidential election.

Yesterday he paid off by pushing Henry Brewster 11 long miles in a rubber-tired wheelbarrow. The trip was over a hilly highway from Princeton to Bluefield took nearly six hours.

Sweeney, husky and in his thirties, wore a big Dewey sign, while Brewster, 64, reclined against cushions and brandished a President Truman poster.

"One good thing," groaned Sweeney, "Henry only weighs 130 pounds." Both men work as machinists in the Virginia railway shops here.
